MARQUETTE, MICH., DECEMBER 16. Entered as mailmatter of the second class in the postoffice at Marquette, Mich.

The grangers are after Cleveland's secretary of agriculture with a sharp stick. He told some certain truths about the politicians who are at the head of the grange organizations in the several states, in alluding to them at different times recently, that they have not relished hearing. THE MINING JOURNAL regards the grange as a cheap political machine and is glad to know that somebody in high place has had the courage to voice the general belief about it. The discussion thus provoked will do no harm.

NOT A FEW papers in this state are devoting more space to bewailing the woes inflicted on the people of Hawaii by the policy of the administration toward the provisional government set up in that country than they are to calling attention to the destitution in this peninsula and the necessity for prompt action to relieve it. Their theory seems to be the convenient one that the misery which is a long way off should be attended to in preference to that which may be found at one's own threshold—a not uncommon form of cheap philanthropy, by the way.

THE Portage Lake Mining Gazette applies the lash to the editor of the Calumet News with unsparring vigor on account of the treachery to the interests of the upper peninsula that he has shown in the insane asylum matter, both by opposing having the legislature make provision for establishing an asylum up here last winter, when the bill was pending, and in favoring an improper location for it now. The censures passed on the ancient imbecile of the Calumet paper by the Gazette are well deserved, but will have no effect, the old siliurian's hide being as thick as his skull is dense. Better let him mander away without paying any attention to his ravings. He doesn't count for much in the controversy anyway.

EX-GOVERNOR LUCE has been attending a meeting of the state grange at Lansing this week, and accorded a representative of the Detroit Journal an interview apparently for the purpose of letting the public know what he thinks of Congressman Burrows' chances for a re-election. In the opinion of the ex-governor they are very slim indeed. His vote for repeal of the silver purchase bill has killed him with the farmers of his district, Mr. Luce avers. He says he wrote Burrows warning him that if he went in for repeal of the Sherman act without anything to take its place he would kill himself with his constituency, but the congressman did not see fit to let the statesman from Gilead dictate his action on silver repeal, and that signs his doom as a public man. No doubt Luce believes he could represent the district more acceptably than Burrows, though he denies that he desires a seat in congress, but if the Republicans of that district ever swap horses that way they will find that they have been badly "jockeyed" by the Gilead granger.

SEVERAL of the outside papers which, in considering the destitution that prevails in several of the counties of this peninsula, keep urging the mining companies to resume work in order to give the idle men employment, evidently do not stop to think that the trouble is caused primarily by an overstock of ore already mined, and that to keep on producing would aggravate the trouble that led to a suspension of operations. It would be folly for the mines to keep on getting out ore with the market suffering from over-production, as it is at present. A halt had to be called some time, and that distress would result when it was called is easy to understand. If all the mines on Lake Superior were to be run up to their capacity they would produce all the ore needed in the United States. With so much new territory opened up it became a necessity to apply the brakes, and now that they are "set" it would be folly to throw them off until the market recovers tone—more especially with the prospect that the duty on iron ore will be reduced, if not entirely removed, and the volume of Cuban and other foreign ore brought into the country considerably increased. The trouble up here must be met for the time being in some other way than by a general resumption of work at the mines.

DIVIDEND PAYING COPPER MINES. Five of the Michigan copper mines have paid dividends this year, these being the Calumet & Hecla, Tamarrack, Quincy, Osceola and Franklin, all of Houghton county. The Calumet & Hecla paid $20 per share, a total of $2,000,000, to its shareholders; the Tamarrack $12 per share, total $600,000; the Quincy $6 per share, total $300,000; the Osceola $2 per share, total $100,000; the Franklin $3 per share, total $120,000. The first two mines named paid the same amount in dividends this year as last, while the three last mentioned fell off a dollar a share each, the Quincy from $7 to $6, the Osceola from $3 to $2, and the Franklin from $4 to $3. The aggregate paid in dividends by those five mines for the calendar year was $3,120,000, against $3,200,000 last year, the decrease being $140,000.

It will be seen from this that the copper mining industry has stood up very much better under the business depression that has come upon the country than that of mining iron ore. This is not difficult to understand, however, for the producers of copper operate under conditions very much less trying than are those which confront and perplex the producers of iron ore. The copper field is comparatively limited, and consequently it is much easier to regulate the production of copper with reference to demand than is the case with iron, while the consumption of iron in electrical work has been very great within the past few years and has done much to hold the market for that metal firm. With iron, on the contrary, production has considerably outrun consumption for several years past, and the producers of iron ore have not yet devised any effective system of holding the output down so as to not demoralize the market. Indeed, we have been opening new iron mines and getting out ore right along regardless of what the market would stand, and to this the present deplorable condition of the iron mining industry is in no small measure due.

EXTRA SESSION SHOULD BE CALLED.

The Courier-Herald of Saginaw, in discussing the destitution prevailing in parts of this peninsula, in consequence of the enforced idleness of several thousands of the miners pertinent-ly says: It is estimated that $100,000 is required to relieve the needs of the destitute upper peninsula miners, and Governor Rich has issued another appeal for aid. He should have issued a call convening the legislature in extra session to vote the necessary means. Under the burden is equally distributed. Under the contribution system only a few people in each community subscribe. If the requisite amount needed is put into the tax roll every citizen who pays taxes bears his portion of the burden. There is a feeling in all of the cities and towns in the lower peninsula that the resources of each and every one will be sorely taxed to take care of their own poor during the winter, and hence there is a manifest disinclination to contribute to outsiders. In Saginaw the sentiment is general that the state should make an appropriation for the relief of the upper Michigan miners, in view of the widespread distress elsewhere by reason of the enforced idleness of the laboring people.

This is in line with the argument already made in these columns in support of the growing demand for having the legislature convened in special session to adopt measures for the relief of the counties up here where the greatest distress exists, and it is made all the stronger by the decision just rendered by the supreme court denying the authority of the counties to bond themselves to raise money to prevent the needy within their limits from starving. Something must be done, and quickly, to meet the emergency, and it is already obvious that private benevolence will not suffice. Governor Rich should issue a call for an extra session at once. The situation up here is too serious to justify relying on lame expedients, and the resultant delay. If the state will do nothing else it should at least put the counties where deep distress prevails in a position to do what is needed for the suffering people.

DR. BELL PULLED UP SHORT.

Jacob Houghton, who is now a resident of Detroit, takes issue with Dr. Bell, the Detroit member of the state board of corrections and charities, on the latter's flippant assertion that the mining districts of this peninsula "have seen their best days," a statement that he made in his attempted justification of the action of his board in deciding in favor of Newberry as a location for the upper peninsula asylum for the insane. Mr. Houghton makes a merciless expose of the doctor's ignorance on the subject in a communication printed in the Detroit Free Press of the 14th. "I am free to grant that Dr. Bell knows all about asylums and some other things," remarks Mr. Houghton, with fine-edged sarcasm, and then he goes on to advise the pill-dispenser to keep strictly to his own line of business and not adventure in a field where he is all at sea. Mr. Houghton asserts, and gives good reasons for so holding, that the output of copper and iron ore from the mines of the upper peninsula "will be greater than they are now after every human being now on this earth shall have passed away," and in this opinion he is unquestionably sustained by facts that are entirely familiar to everybody who has made a study of the mineral resources of this part of the state.

The trouble with Dr. Bell is that he has allowed himself to be "stuffed" by the celery raisers of Newberry, who persuaded him and some other members of the board to the belief that the principal industry of this region will be the cultivation of celery in the course of some time, and that when this comes to pass Newberry will be the center of population on this peninsula. Then, too, about all that Dr. Bell knows of the mineral deposits of the peninsula he learned from a cursory glance at our mineral exhibit at the World's Fair when he visited the big exposition, skipping away from his associates while his board was up here looking over proposed locations for the insane asylum last summer to enjoy himself taking in the sights of the "White City." If the Detroit member of the board charged the state for his time and mileage on that trip he practiced a gross fraud on the commonwealth, for he gave only a fraction of his time while on the trip to the work that he ostensibly came here to perform in conjunction with his associates on the board.

LOVE'S VOYAGE.

We are going with the wind, love, Blowing fair and free, Somehow the breeze is always good That blows for you and me.

Behind us lies the dear old land, Before us dreams the new, Beneath us swells the joyous sea, Above us bends the blue.

What is there that can hinder love, Or make our hearts afraid? The ocean deep can never fail, The sky can never fade.

You are my universe, and I, Oh, I am yours, my sweet; Then how can any cloud arise, Or any tempest beat?

We are going with the wind, love, Blowing fair and free, Somehow the breeze is always good That blows for you and me.

If we go down, the sea is love, And holds us evermore; Our life, whatever way it moves, Will reach a golden shore.

A CAPTAIN'S BRAVERY.

His Courage Was Rewarded by Applause from the Enemy.

In the latter part of the winter of 1864 Lee's army of northern Virginia was in cantonment along the Rapidan river, while the union forces, under Gen. Meade, occupied the country about Culpeper Court House, facing the confederates.

The winter had been so severe that military operations of any magnitude in Virginia were not deemed practicable, though throughout the winter the cavalry were kept employed, on the union side at least, in watching an extended line and from time to time making reconnoissances to develop the enemy, with a view to ascertaining if any considerable part of his force had been detached to other fields of operation farther south.

On one of these reconnoissances the event occurred which I am about to relate. It must be premised, to an understanding of what follows, that when the object of one army is to find out or develop facts as to the other, then this last thwarting attempts of the kind as far as possible in order to keep the adversary in ignorance. Thus if Gen. Meade desired to ascertain if the confederate army in his front had been reorganized by sending regiments elsewhere, Gen. Lee would desire that this information should not be obtained by Meade.

On a stormy morning in February, 1864, a division of cavalry marched from its camp in front of Culpeper Court House, Va., with instructions to reconnoiter the left of the enemy's line on the Rapidan river, and develop the force in that direction without bringing on a general engagement.

To reach the desired position it was necessary to march a considerable distance to the south and cross the Robinson river, a tributary of the Rapidan. The division consisted of three brigades of cavalry, each of the brigades headed by a battery of light, or horse, artillery. A force of confederate cavalry which was on picket duty on Robinson river was easily driven in, and on the evening of the day we started we found ourselves face to face with the enemy, with the Rapidan river between us.

The work of discovering the enemy's strength was, owing to the lateness of the hour, put off till the following morning. After placing our pickets to insure against surprise, we made ourselves as comfortable for the night as the weather of an unusually raw Virginia February would permit.

Early the following morning the cavalry and artillery moved toward the river in our front, and a lively skirmish with small arms, accompanied by artillery, commenced and was well sustained on both sides.

The result was far from satisfactory. Do what we would, the enemy persisted in declining to show force beyond what was necessary to engage our skirmish lines; and he uncovered but a gun or two at intervals along his line to reply to our artillery.

intention on keeping us in ignorance of their numbers, and determined to make us pay heavily for information. The anxiety was intense. We knew when the enemy opened fire at short range that the loss would be great, and all felt that the advance guard must be the first and greatest sufferers.

Ash with his small command moved on. The works in front, gloomy and silent, denuded and stained by a winter of thawing and freezing, seemed deserted. Now the few mounted men thrown to the front of the advance guard were entering the ford.

"Troop, march!" was the command, as Ash hurried his squadron forward to share the shock with his leading men. Many a strong man in our command prayed at that moment for Ash and his men. He had now gained a vantage position where, because of a turn in the river above, he commanded a view of the interior of the confederate breastworks. What he saw no one could tell.

But just then the enemy opened with a few scattering shots, and a withering volley followed. By a motion rather than a command, Ash intimated to his squadron to seek cover, while he, bending forward on his horse's neck, turned to the right and rode at a rapid gallop along the river bank parallel to the enemy's works, followed as he became opposite each new part of the breastworks with volley after volley.

There seemed no hope for him, and we watched with intense anxiety, expecting every moment to see horse and rider go down. Yet both kept on amid the storm of lead apparently unhurt. That something must be done to help him now was, I doubt not, the thought in every one's mind.

Suddenly, as Ash reached another part of his route, where his view of the confederate lines was still more extended, he raised his hat and waved it over his head. It was a signal of triumph.

Then occurred a scene which has not been witnessed since the times of the "joyous passages of arms" in the age of chivalry. To our amazement, the confederates, moved by admiration for his gallantry, ceased to fire on the intrepid horseman. Instead, they mounted on their breastworks as thick as they could stand, and, throwing their hats in the air, cheered him again and again, making the valley echo with their shouts.

At this, Ash, taking in the situation at once, reined up his horse, and, turning toward the confederates, raised his hat and acknowledged their cheers with a graceful salute repeated several times. Then he turned and rode leisurely into our own lines, amid the cheers and applause of his comrades—reechoed by the confederates.

He had accomplished the work without the loss of a man, and had seen himself, and displayed to every eye else, a full force of infantry manning the confederate works.

The whole affair took less time than it takes to read this hasty and imperfect sketch; but I thought, and still think, that it was the bravest deed on the part of an individual that I ever witnessed.

Capt. Ash, in reporting to me afterward, stated that his scheme of developing the enemy's force had not occurred to him until he had reached the brink of the river, and found that the enemy held their works in force.

To go on meant certain death to many of his command. To retreat in the line of direct fire would be equally disastrous; and the inspiration to do what he did, ride rapidly across their line of aim, and gradually oblique out of range, suddenly seized him.

His risk was great and he knew it; but it was better than any other course that presented itself to his mind. Men accomplish in seconds under such circumstances the thought of hours, with conclusions not less correct than those attending more deliberation.

True, no one could have foreseen that the excitement and rapid fire of the enemy would so far disturb their aims as to insure that the union officer should escape unhurt; and still less could the effect of his intrepid conduct on the enemy have been foretold.

Now, after the lapse of years, the story of this heroic deed appears almost fabulous. Then it seemed very real, and all natural enough. I need scarcely add that as we united with the confederates in cheering the bold rider, our hearts went out to the generous foe who so well appreciated a gallant act, and so chivalrously acknowledged it. We were then impressed—and who has not been?—with the fact that, whether wearing the gray or the blue, the true American soldier is a worthy descendant of the men who made glorious the history of chivalry.—Gen. Wesley Merritt, in Youth's Companion.

Insuring a Cool Summer. He had been seeking office, but was now on his homeward way. "I say," he exclaimed to an old acquaintance whom he met on his journey to the depot, "you people aren't worrying about your ice supply this summer, are you?" "The subject has given us some bother," was the reply. "It's unnecessary." "Do you think so?" "Of course I do. You noticed how late spring was, didn't you?" "Yes."

The brother, who is of an anxious turn of mind, was in great distress at the sight of an ox that was calmly devouring a large pile of seed potatoes in the corner of a field. "O, papa, stop," he said. "We ought to tell the people in the house." "Do sit still, Buddy," put in his more philosophic sister. "It isn't we ox nor we potatoes."—Chicago Tribune.

NEW CHURCH NEARLY DONE.

First Services Will Be Held in Christ Church Just Before Christmas.

REPORTED QUINCY PURCHASE FULLY CONFIRMED.

Houghton Has So Far Raised $1,200 Cash and Over $700 in Goods for Gogebic Sufferers.

(All communications for copper country department intended for publication should be addressed to A. F. Isler, Houghton.)

CALUMET Services will be held in the new Christ Episcopal church a week from next Sunday, Dec. 24. The church will not be completed by that time but it will be much more comfortable for the congregation than the School Hall. THE MINING JOURNAL reporter went into the new church yesterday and there found Editor Wilson and Mine Inspector Hall. The latter is one of the vestrymen. Mr. Hall was one of the members of the old Cliff Mine Episcopal church, the first in the copper country. He at once called the reporter's attention to the registers in the floor, stating that they were the same ones that did service at the Cliff church nearly forty years ago. Mr. Harvey C. Parke and Mr. Ed J. Hubert were members of that church. One cold morning in winter when Mr. Hall had overslept himself he was late in getting to church to build the fire. The members took turns at this work as they were too few to hire a janitor. He noticed Mr. Parke coming in so he just took down the thermometer, held it over the register a moment, then hung it up again. Mr. Parke, who was somewhat particular about the temperature of the church, looked at the thermometer as soon as he came in and said down to wait until the opening of service. The new church here is a very handsome and comfortable building. Mr. Goodsole was just putting the finishing touches to a new Mason & Hamlin organ he has placed in the gallery. The formal dedication will be held about Jan. 15.

The grand charity ball for the benefit of the Gogebic sufferers will be given in the Armory on Wednesday evening, Dec. 27 and not on the 29th as previously stated. Never before have the ladies been known to hustle as they are now doing to prepare for an entertainment. It was scarcely daylight yesterday when the reporter saw a sleigh load of ladies starting out on their work. That the affair will be the grandest success the copper country has ever seen is assured, for the generosity of our people is well known. The attraction of "tripping the light fantastic" to the music of the Fifth Regiment band will of itself bring hundreds of young people to the Armory.

RED JACKET. There was a large attendance at the skating rink Thursday evening, the benefit night for the Gogebic sufferers. The proceeds amounted to $75. Manager Uist's generosity deserves especial mention because he gave not only the net receipts but the expenses of preparing good ice, light and heat in the cloak rooms and attendants out of his own pocket. The Red Jacket Cornet band, which furnished splendid music for the skaters free, also deserves mention.

W. P. Harlow left Friday noon to spend the holidays with his family at Decatur, Mich.

The employees of the Calumet & Hecla, Tamarack and Osceola mines receive their monthly pay today.

DOLLAR BAY. When this reaches THE MINING JOURNAL readers Mat Lakonen, the murderer of Mat S. Kosky, will undoubtedly be in the clutches of the officers. The reporter interviewed Moses Aubin Thursday evening. The latter had just come in from R. R. Eber's camp. He said he had met Lakonen and a man with him on the Ontonagon road on Wednesday afternoon about 3 o'clock near Laird postoffice. They were headed towards Ontonagon and asked him about the road into Eber's camp. When told it was right before them they did not take it but kept on. The officers with two good horses were about fifteen miles behind them and of course when Aubin gave his information to the officers the latter hurried their horses to overtake the murderer.

HANCOCK. Hancock lodge, A. O. U. W., elected officers Thursday evening as follows: Master workman, Roderick H. Cameron; foreman, P. C. Murphy; overseer, John Watson; recorder, H. L. Baer; recorder, James Cornish; treasurer, R. H. Merriam; guide, Joseph Schuler; incense watchman, A. L. Oberg; outside watchman, Adolph Brub; representative, James Cornish; alternate, Thomas Conway; trustee, three years, John Bogan. The meeting was well attended and was a spirited one. The lodge is in a flourishing condition and expects to add many new members in the near future.

At the election of officers for the Methodist Sunday school Wednesday evening the following was the result: Superintendent, W. J. James; assistant superintendent, Roderick H. Cameron; secretary, Fred Walker; treasurer, J. John Truscott; librarians, James Truscott and Charles Mitchell; organists, Misses Maria Roberts and Grace Hodge; doorkeepers, Charles Barkell and Josiah Eddie; finance committee, Misses Mamie Mitchell, Mary Tamblin and Mr. J. J. Fox; committee on entertaining strangers, W. J. James, R. H. Cameron, Miss Allie Mitchell, Miss Susie Schuler.

There will be a special meeting of Division No. 1, A. O. H. of this city at St. Patrick's Hall tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock to take action on the appeal for aid for the Gogebic sufferers. This is the first society to take action in this matter and the many other societies should follow suit immediately. John Griff was before Justice Finn Thursday afternoon charged with larceny. He was held to the next term of circuit court, bonds being placed at $300. William McCurdy has the contract to make the repairs on the Northey building. He has secured the services of Architect B. H. Pierce to superintend the job and work has already been commenced.

There will be a regular meeting of Columbian Temple of honor this evening for they have in the degree of Fidelity. A large attendance is requested.

HOUGHTON. The sub-committee, consisting of Hon. Jay A. Hubbell and F. A. Douglass, appointed to call on the business men and solicit aid for the Gogebic sufferers has had excellent success. So far they have collected $1,200 in cash and over $700 worth of goods. They are still hustling.

The subject of Rev. E. W. Frazee's discourse tomorrow morning will be "The Promised Messiah."

MINING NEWS. Mr. R. R. Goodell, agent for the St. Mary's Mineral Land company, returned from Ontonagon Thursday. When asked about the reported sale of lands by his company to the Quincy Mining company he replied that it was true. He knew that negotiations had been pending for some time but not until he returned Thursday and then found letters awaiting him was he informed that the sale had been completed. The price, as previously stated, is a round half million dollars. Next to the purchase of the Pewabic by the Quincy this is the most important acquisition of territory of recent years on Portage lake. Mining men are unanimous in endorsing this action of the Quincy directors in thus increasing the value of the mine and adding an indefinite term of years to its life. The land bought by the Quincy would have given the Franklin a new lease of life had the latter company been able to have secured it.

The miners in the Red Jacket vertical shaft have got through the vein. The vein is fourteen feet wide and all but about one foot of it is rich in copper. About twelve cars of stamp rock has been sent to the mills every day for the past week and the rock was as good as any sent from the main portion of the mine. It is not yet known whether there will any drifting be done on the vein at this point. It is not in line with any of the levels surveyed from No. 4 shaft.

NAPOLION'S HATS.

Careful inquiry has led to the discovery that there are no fewer than nine of Napoleon I.'s hats still in existence. A writer in The Vie Contemporaine gives a list of them. One is in the possession of Mme. Claitte, whose grandfather, Gen. Giraud, picked it up at Marengo. At a critical moment Napoleon started off at a gallop, and the wind blowing off his hat he did not stop to pick it up.

Another of the hats, says the London Daily News, is in a little crypt beside Napoleon's tomb at the Invalides. This was worn on the 7th, 8th and 9th of February, 1807, at Eylau, and it is the identical one represented in the colossal picture of the battle of Gros, to be seen in the Louvre. During the peace which succeeded the battle Gros was commissioned to paint the picture, and in order that the figure of the emperor might be faithfully depicted the hat was given to the painter.

At the death of Gros in 1835 it was found under a glass case upon a wooden stand, and it was sold by auction among the painter's effects for two thousand and forty-seven francs fifty centimes to Dr. Delacroix, who presented it to Louis Philippe. The latter, after the famous second funeral of Napoleon, ordered it to be placed beside the remains with the emperor's crosses and the sword he wore at Austerlitz. Of the remaining hats, one belongs to Prince Victor Napoleon and another to the museum at Gotta.

ERUPTIONS OF THE SKIN CURED.

Ed Venney, Brockville, Ontario, Canada, says: "I have used Brandreth's pills for the past fifteen years and think them the best cathartic and anti-bilious remedy known. For some five years I suffered with an eruption of the skin that gave me great pain and annoyance. I tried different blood remedies but, although gaining strength, the itching was unrelieved. I finally concluded to take a thorough course of Brandreth's pills. I took six each night for four nights, then five, four, three, two, lessening each time by one, and then for one month took one every night, with the happy result that now my skin is perfectly clear and has been so ever since."

The Pyramid Pile Cure is a new discovery for the prompt, permanent cure of Piles in every form. Every druggist has it.

16 WORLD'S FAIR PHOTOS FOR ONE DIME.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway has made an arrangement with a first-class publishing house to furnish a series of beautiful World's Fair pictures of a large size at the money cost of a purchaser of only ten cents for a portfolio of sixteen illustrations. Nothing so handsome in reference to the World's Fair has before been published. The series would be worth at least $12 if the pictures were not published in such large quantities and we are therefore able to furnish these works of art for only ten cents. They will stand in your money to the nearest station ticket agent of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway and he will furnish the pictures and tell you more about the scheme. Geo. H. OF GENERAL INTEREST.

—One tribe of the Congo negroes believes that the good angels in the heaven to come will spend their whole time pulling off the bills of mosquitos. This belief is said to have its origin in the fact that they are bothered day and night here on earth with those troublesome insects.

—Annie Morris, a girl of fourteen, ran away from Halifax, N. S., in 1879 disguised as a boy. She continued the deception for fourteen years, under the name of Frank Blunt, working at various occupations engaged in only by men, and her sex was never suspected until recently, when she was arrested in Milwaukee.

—Much displeasure was caused by a wedding at Glendive, Montana, because the residents did not approve of the match. Miss Emma Wall, the bride, is a colored girl; and the groom is a white man, named John Orr. The people tarred the groom and whitewashed the bride, rode them on rails, and forced them to leave town.

—An immense trunk, which belonged to a newly wedded couple, furnished plenty of amusement to passengers at the Baltimore & Ohio railroad depot in Pittsburgh the other day. The trunk was decorated with old shoes, tied with gaily colored ribbons and two hearts pierced by Cupid's arrow were drawn on the side with chalk.

—Cotton cloth was first made in India, and was in use there as early as two thousand three hundred and forty-three years ago. About the year 450 B. C., Herodotus spoke of this textile fabric, made from the trees of India, which bore, as their fruit, fleeces surpassing in beauty and delicacy those of the sheep. From India cotton cloth was introduced in Greece and Rome.

—Six toes were on the right foot of a child born in Zanesville, Ohio. When the child was eighteen months old, it was decided to remove the superfluous toe. As the surgeon was about to perform the operation, the parents turned their heads away. In a minute the surgeon held the dismembered toe in his hand. To the horror of the parents, they discovered that the bungler had had taken the toe off the wrong foot.

—Train robbers were numerous in Mexico some years ago. One day a train from Vera Cruz for the City of Mexico was halted by highwaymen, who lined both sides of the track. The inmates of the cars arose, seemingly indignant, peons, market women, etc., and from the windows poured a murderous volley. One hundred bandits fell dead and others were pursued and killed. The inmates of the cars were disguised zonaves.

—Here are some themes discussed at various meetings by the Domestic Club, composed of young women of a New York working-girls' society who have married and have households of their own: "What Can Be Done in a Day," "How to Train a Baby in Good Habits," "How Persons with a Small Salary May Get the most Nutrition Food with the Least Money." Children are welcomed to the society meetings and a committee is appointed to amuse them while their mothers are attending to the discussions.

—Mrs. Craigie ("John Oliver Hobbes") is by birth an American, but as she was taken to London from her birthplace, Boston, when only three months old, we can hardly in justice claim her. The spirit of her Puritan ancestors makes itself felt, however, for she is in sympathy with the principles and institutions of this country. The real character of the woman is best seen in the fact that, after her marriage at nineteen, she read for a B. A. degree at the London university. She is a clever talker and, though somewhat cynical and ambitious, is unselfish and kindly.

—Baltimore has a blind boatman. His boat was stolen by some worthless fellows some time ago and subsequently abandoned and picked up. He claimed it, and when told that he must identify it, did so, not by telling its color and model, as a man with good eyes might do, but by giving the positions of all the nails and the chinks in the boat, where splinters had been knocked off, and so on. Then, being admitted, he went all over it with his careful touch, finally said: "Yes, it is mine," and roved away, successfully avoiding the dozens of other boats, tugs, etc., that were moving around.

A lawyer, in explaining the phrase, "If I can manage to hang on to my diamonds I guess I can pull through," said: "If a man is in the habit of wearing this sort of ornament his associates are bound to notice it. In a time when men are going for pieces all sorts of signs are looked for by business men that will indicate the financial standing of a customer. If they notice that a man who has been in the habit of wearing expensive jewelry suddenly appears without any of his usual jewels they are apt to conclude that he is being pushed so hard that he had to realize on personal property, and his credit goes down."

—Five bedrooms, a dining-room and a sitting room comprise the space devoted to the use of the president's family in the White House. In addition to these, the Red room, on the first floor, may be used as a parlor at hours when it is not open to the public. Two of the bedrooms are quite small, and Mrs. Harrison was forced to utilize a portion of the hall as a sleeping-room for her maid, and use a kerosene stove to heat it. In comparison with the appointments of foreign executives, the White House accommodations are ridiculously meager, and it is to be hoped that Mrs. Harrison's plan of adding wings to the building may be carried out.

SILVER THEIR PLATFORM.

Leaders of Cheap Money Lunacy in Conference at Nation's Capital.

TALK OF ORGANIZING ANOTHER POLITICAL PARTY.

But in Reality the New Party Will Be Nothing But the Populist Aggregation.

DON'T KNOW THEY ARE DEAD

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—The possibilities of a new political party with free silver coinage as the sole plank of its platform was among the developments of the day's session of the silver leaders.

During the address of Senator Jones an interesting colloquy occurred between him and Master Workman Sovereign. The latter suggested that when the labor ranks had assisted toward securing free silver there should be reciprocity by which the silver leaders would assist in securing labor reforms.

The speeches have now ended and the conference will turn its attention tomorrow to a program of political work. Frequent references were made during the speeches today to the necessity of organizing a silver party, made up of the elements gathered under the standards of the Populists, Grange, Knights of Labor, Farmer's Alliance, etc.

The probability is that the first effort of the united forces will be exerted to carry the congressional elections next fall. It is the belief of those attending the conference that a national silver ticket will be put in the field as a result of the present meeting and of the victories it hopes to achieve in the congressional election.

UNDER WHIP AND SPUR.

Haleyon Days of Reed's Rally Recalled in the House.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—Events in the house today resembled the haleyon days of the Reed congress when legislation was rushed through at a gallop. The bill for the admission of Arizona was put through under whip and spur and the bill for the admission of New Mexico was well under way when a wrangle over what was to be done with Oklahoma intervened and the debate precipitated lasted until adjournment.

The McGarrahan claim came up again in the morning hour and was filibustered against and the morning hour expired without action, thus sending the bill to the foot of the calendar. In the course of Mr. Pendleton's speech on this subject the fact was developed that a special order for the consideration of this claim will be asked for.

REDUCING PENSION FORCE.

Several Hundred Clerks Will Not Be Needed After Jan. 15.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15.—Chiefs of division of the pension bureau are making lists of employes for promotions. A large number of these promotions, it is believed, will begin with the new year. Several hundred dismissals from the pension bureau will probably be made on the 15th of January. These changes when completed will affect almost every grade of office in the bureau.

A NEGRO "OLIVER TWIST."

Small Boy's Story to Account for His Abnormal Wealth.

CHICAGO, Dec. 15.—A small colored boy was arrested here today having $3,000 worth of watches and diamonds in his possession. He said that a crook in San Francisco had at the point of a revolver compelled him to enter, after the manner of Oliver Twist, a millionaire's house on Sutter street in that city and steal the jewelry. He escaped from the crook, he said, and came directly to Chicago. The boy refused to give his name and will be held for an investigation.

SEVERAL STORES BURNED OUT.

Boy Employed in One Reported to Have Perished.

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—One of the largest fires this city has had for a year broke out today at the corner of Forty-ninth street and Third avenue and burned for two hours before it was gotten under control. It spread in all directions with remarkable speed. The streets were jumped by the flames so that all four corners were damaged and the Third Avenue Elevator structure was saved with difficulty. The loss on buildings and goods is estimated at $200,000; partially insured. Among the heavy losers are

COUNTRY IS NOT DEAD.

While Some Mills Are Stopping Others Are Resuming to Meet Demand.

TRADE WAITS ALL IT CAN BUT STILL IS LARGE.

Cotton Prices Stiffen Despite Larger Receipts But Wheat Shows Weakness With Increasing Supply.

DUN'S REVIEW OF TRADE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 15.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade will say tomorrow: Proof of the enormous vitality of the country is seen in the fact that while mills are stopping in every direction and the army of unemployed is larger than it has been for many years, other mills are constantly starting up to answer the demand which a single year of unprecedented disaster has only diminished. Trade still waits as much as it can and yet the volume of business on a mere hand-to-mouth basis is such as would have been called large a few years ago.

Wheat receipts at the west have been 3,291,872 bushels against 5,548,918 the same week last year and Atlantic exports only 596,704 against 1,879,378 last year and stocks increased rapidly but prices declined 1 cent with sales of only 4,690,000 bushels here. Corn receipts were very large, 3,643,620 bushels against 2,331,800 last year and exports were fully maintained, the price yielding half a cent. Pork packing at the west exceeds last year's and prices drop in spite of reports that hogs are proving of superior quality.

FIFTEEN WERE HURT.

Falling Grate-Bar Derailed an Accommodation Train.

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 15.—The city-bound accommodation train on the Pittsburg, Virginia & Charleston railroad was derailed at Batford station, 35 miles south of Pittsburg, at 7 o'clock this morning and three coaches were wrecked. No one was killed but fifteen persons were injured, a number seriously. The injured are: CONDUCTOR YOUNG, badly cut about the head, two ribs broken and injured internally, serious.

Failures are numerous and large, 330 in the United States for the week against 279 last year and 40 in Canada against 25 last year, but a worse feature is their importance. The list of the week includes seven banks, with one of the oldest private banks for $500,000, an agricultural machinery establishment for $1,000,000, an iron works for $500,000, a lumber concern for $150,000 and a dry goods concern for $150,000—making $2,500,000 for five failures.

THE USE OF PAPER MONEY. A MONSTER CRYSTAL GEODE.

Common to Nearly All Civilized Countries—Issues in Various Nations. Almost, if not quite, all civilized countries use paper money to facilitate payments within their own jurisdictions, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. The United States uses paper money to a greater extent than any other country, and in notes of smaller denomination than any other country.

It is composed of pure gypsum or selenite, and many of the single crystals are of gigantic size. This wonderful formation was discovered within a few miles of the majestic Henry mountains in southern Utah. It is situated in a small tributary of the Fremont canyon, and this in turn leads to the Grand canyon of the Colorado. Having once visited the formation in the course of a summer's exploring trip, I could not feel contented until arrangements had been made for another journey to the place, with equipments for properly studying the occurrence. A few months ago our small party, provided with necessary riding horses and wagons, camp equipment, instruments and tools, set out from the railway terminus toward the selenite deposit.

After a week's journey from the railway we went into camp at the selenite deposit. The crystals occur in a cave, which is inclosed in a shell of gypsum, and this mound-like structure stands on the side of a sandstone hill. This is the geode which we have come to see. What a contrast with the hard specimens we have been accustomed to examine. From without the mound appears to be roughly egg-shaped; it is almost thirty-five feet long, ten feet wide, and averages twenty feet from the ground on the lower side to the top. It is composed entirely of selenite, even the outside exhibiting a multitude of crystal faces, which sparkle in the sunlight with a brilliancy that commands admiration from a distance of miles. On the east end an opening occurs large enough to admit a man without discomfort; within one may make his way backward about twenty-five feet, and by exercising care he may clamber up between the crystals to a height of fifteen feet.

The inner walls bear a multitude of huge crystals, which project into the cavern from either side, a few extending completely across like immense beams. Several from the wall are even larger and heavier than the body of a fullgrown man. Perfect prisms of selenite five feet in length are found; one of the finest to be seen is fifty-one inches long, and attached to one of its faces are nineteen smaller crystals. Twin crystals in great variety are common, and groups, each containing many beautiful prisms, also occur. We took from the floor of the cavern a very large group, weighing over six hundred pounds, containing numerous individual crystals. Many of the crystals are of perfect transparency; others are covered with a thin layer of sand and clay, which must be removed that the luster and purity of the substance may be rendered apparent. A few feet below the floor, which is made up mostly of sand driven in by the wind, we found that the gypsum shell closes in, forming, therefore, a perfect nodule or geode.—Popular Science News.

BONNETS AND CIGARS.

Sure Relief for the Man Whose Wife Buys Cigars for Him.

When lovely woman stoops to folly and sets out to buy her husband's cigars for him one of two things is reasonably sure to happen, says the New York Press. If the unfortunate head of the household is of choleric temperament he uses language and pitches the offending weeds on pain to the window. This naturally gives pain to their innocent purchaser, and is extremely likely to bring about a family hurricane, with a plentiful shower of tears. If the victim of his wife's good intentions is suave and a diplomat he says nothing, but adroitly substitutes a box of cigars of his own choosing for the gift which was meant to add to the comforts of home, and generously presents the first box to the Italian boot-black around the corner. This is undoubtedly the better method of the two, but it has the serious disadvantage of encouraging the misguided wife to repeat the experiment which apparently worked so well. This is apt to be trying to the patience even of a patient husband. Besides it is very hard on the bootblack.

Assuredly some method should be adopted to prevent occurrences so regrettable. Since argument in such cases would in all human probability be utterly useless, we venture to suggest another remedy. When a man's wife inflicts on him the gift of a box of cigars let him accept them smilingly, remembering the bootblack around the corner. Then let him reciprocate by going out and purchasing his wife a bonnet approved solely by his own masculine judgment. The cure may seem a trifle expensive, but it will work. The woman does not exist who would not take the hint. For the bonnet chosen by a man without reference to his wife's tastes is certain to be as acceptable as the cigars which the wife buys for her husband.

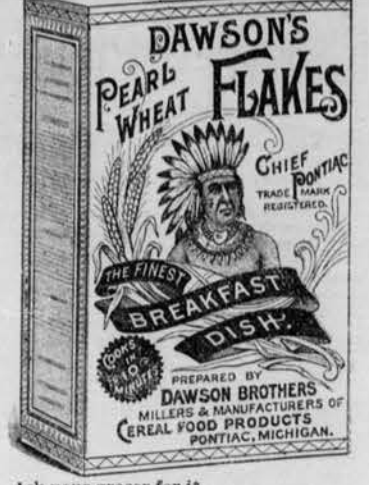

Made Love by Lightning.

The late Prof. Morse made love by lightning, as it were. He met his first wife during an evening call at the house of her father and proposed marriage to her before he went away that night. After some happy years she died, leaving him with several children. He remained a widower until at the age of fifty-seven he attended the wedding of his eldest son. One of the younger ones was what the Scotch tenderly call an "innocent," and it was the kindness of a relative of the bride to this boy that attracted his father's attention. He invited the lady to drive with him the following day. When they returned from the expedition they were engaged to be married.

CITY NEWS IN BRIEF.

St. Paul's Ladies' Guild bazaar will open today. City Attorney Sherwood returned yesterday after several days' absence up the road. Governor Swineford is paying a visit to old friends and scenes in the Queen City. Rev. Joseph Frazer will consider phases of Holzhay's life as his sermon at the M. E. church tomorrow night. George Gallop, Mrs. Dora Mark and child, S. H. Jacobs and P. D. Mead of Escanaba were in the city yesterday. Miss Josephine Gaffney has been re-engaged to sing in the Presbyterian church. She reached the city yesterday and will sing Sunday night. At noon today the time for receiving bids on the new city hall plans will expire. The council will meet Monday evening to open and consider bids received.

Young man! Before you select that box of candy you purpose giving Mary about Christmas, you would do well to call and see the big line of choice sweetmeats Toles is offering. Just drop into his drug store and judge for yourself.

That game of football on skates in the Casino tonight promises a great deal of sport. The game will begin at 9:30 o'clock and the Marquette City band will play while the boys kick the pig skin while standing on one ear. General skating until the game begins.

All women interested in the proposed charity ball to be given by Morse Hose company, are requested to meet in the Y. M. C. A. rooms at 2 o'clock p. m. today, to confer with a committee from the hose company. A good attendance is urged.

Some of the merchants in Washington street are kicking because they claim the street commissioner is paying too much attention to Front street and not enough to Washington. One thing at a time gentlemen. The street force is not large at present and, at any rate, it would take an army to look after the entire city at once.

Yesterday's big snow storm was a little tough on Street Commissioner French. Just when he had the streets and sidewalks in fairly good condition and was allowing a bland smile of satisfaction to illumine his features, Boreas got on a tear and threw about a foot of snow in a general and careless manner all over his work. He will get out again this morning and begin over.

The Evening Wisconsin of Dec. 14, contains the following: "The stockholders of the Duluth & Winnipeg Railway held their annual meeting here this morning and re-elected the old board of directors with the exception of W. H. Fisher, the late general manager, whose place was filled by A. B. Eldredge, of Marquette, Mich., counsel for the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic, which controls the Winnipeg. Nearly all the votes were cast by proxy."

JAPANESE CHILDREN.

Beneficial Results Accruing from the Non-Use of Cow's Milk. Custom and national sentiment would seem to have made the lives of children in Japan delightfully attractive for them. Japan has even been described as the paradise of childhood. One of the most curious points in this connection is that the children are always suckled by their mothers; artificial lactation is altogether unknown. The children are suckled until their sixth year, and in language unmistakable may be heard asking for the lactation fountain. Thus, as no cow's milk is required, the cow is only used as a pack animal in the cities. In view of the almost universal use of cow's milk in other countries, its exclusion from the diet of the Japanese raises the interesting subject of inquiry as to whether or not the race benefits by this custom, and Dr. A. S. Ashmead, of New York, discusses the question in the current number of the Sei-I-Kwai medical journal. In the first place it is assumed that indirectly the absence of cow's milk is most beneficial. In consequence of no other nourishment being available, the Japanese mother is compelled to suckle her offspring, in doing which she feels the compulsion of looking after her health and diet. Japanese mothers chiefly live on rice, "fish, shells, seaweed and other products of the sea," while wine and beer are rigidly excluded. The reward of all this meritorious care of motherhood and childhood is the absolute freedom of the children from rickets. Again, the author holds that the transmission of tuberculosis is avoided by the exclusion of cow's milk from the infant's dietary. Japan is by no means exempt from tuberculosis, but the disease mainly prevails among the upper classes, in whom the systematic custom obtains of close intermarriage.-Medical Press.

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder Most Perfect Made.

THAT PRETTY WIDOW.

Why Her Marriage was a Disappointment to Mr. Lynnmore.

"Roasted quails, waiter, half a dozen oysters and a bottle of your best Moselle—that will do, I think, and for dessert."

"Yes, sir," quoth the white-aproned attendant, obsequiously. "A few white grapes and an Italian cream. And waiter!"

"Don't forget plenty of olives." "No, sir."

And the waiter whisked out of the room with the peculiar bustling movement that belongs to the genus, while Mr. Gustavus Lynnmore quietly walked up to the bright anthracite fire and stood stroking his mustache before the mantel mirror with a face expressive of the mildest contentment with himself and all the world beside.

"Upon my word," soliloquized Mr. Lynnmore, eying himself complacently, "there's a good deal in—well, I won't say cheek, for it's a vulgar word—confidence is at once more elegant and more expressive."

"Now here I am, Gustavus Adolphus Lynnmore, without ten dollars in my pocket and without as much as that in any banking establishment, and yet I walk into the first hotel in the city, order the most expensive dinners and insist on the most elegant rooms. And what's more, I get 'em."

"Hello! here's a gray hair in my mustache! Gustavus Adolphus, you're getting on in life, my boy; it's time you were thinking of settling yourself. Confound gray hairs!"

Mr. Lynnmore plucked out the offensive thread of silver, and strolled up and down the room in some perturbation, pausing finally at the window, and looking abstractedly out upon the tide of life flowing on in the great thoroughfare below, and the white glimmer of the marble walls opposite.

"By Jupiter, that's a pretty woman!" He stopped short, transfixed by sudden admiration, as the afternoon sunshine, slanting in direct beams of murky gold into the second-story windows opposite, lighted up a bright head bending over some absorbing bit of fancy work.

"Much obliged to you, my friend, the sunshine," pondered Gustavus. "An opera glass couldn't be better. Black dress, loops of black ribbon at the throat, fastened by a jet clasp—ah! a young widow! And beautiful enough to drive a fellow distracted!"

"Upon my word, that woman wouldn't discredit the name of Mrs. Lynnmore. Wonder if she's rich? She must be, though, to live in the parlor floor of the Celandine hotel. Women can't play the confidence game as men do; they're obliged to have some sort of a base to start from."

"Oh, she must be rich; there can't be a shadow of doubt about it—rich and pretty, and a widow. Gustavus, my boy, you must see about this—there's undoubtedly an opportunity for you!"

"Hello! a tow-headed little boy, as sure as I'm a living sinner, with his head on the pretty crape shoulder! Confound all incumbrances, say I; but then, perhaps, it wouldn't make so very much difference if there was plenty of cash in the locker. I really must take this matter into consideration. What's that, waiter? Dinner? Very well—let it be served at once!"

Mr. Lynnmore sat down with an appetite that was enhanced by an occasional glimpse of the golden head and rosy cheeks at the window across the way.

"There—she sees me," he pondered. "She sees me, for I saw her smile behind those lovely golden ringlets—and now she has vanished from the case-ment. Hello, waiter!"

"Sir?" "The fourth window on the left-hand side, parlor floor, at the Celandine—I've an idea it would be a very nice room to have, in case I leave this hotel—"

"Yes, sir," said the waiter, coughing doubtfully behind his hand, and secretly hoping that so very stylish a gentleman would remain at the St. Aubrey.

"I suppose you can tell me the number of the room." "Certainly, sir—I used to be hall boy at the Celandine, sir, afore I came here—fourth window on the left-hand side, sir, parlor floor—why, it's No. 29."

"Twenty-nine, eh? thank you, waiter, I'm very much obliged to you." Half an hour or so afterward Mr. Lynnmore strolled accidentally into a Broadway florist's establishment.

"Jansen, I want a very choice bouquet." "Certainly, Mr. Lynnmore—what style?" "Well, plenty of white flowers—you know how to express that sort of thing—humble devotion and unobtrusive admiration."

"Yes, sir, I comprehend—I'll endeavor to put the sentiment into shape," replied the aesthetic florist, carefully writing down the order in a red morocco-bound book. "I suppose you are aware we charge extra for these ideal bouquets?"

"Expense is no object," said Lynnmore, turning loftily away. "Send it to No. 29 Celandine hotel this evening."

"Mr. Lynnmore—if I might venture to remind you of the little bill you left unliquidated here, a year ago—"

"Bill? oh, yes—how could I be so careless! I'll certainly attend to it immediately, Jansen—much obliged to you for reminding me of it."

The next morning Mr. Lynnmore had the gratification of seeing his "ideal bouquet" in a Parian vase between the lace draperies in the fourth window on the left-hand side—and, moreover, of beholding the pretty widow's Grecian nose occasionally dipping daintily among the fragrant blossoms, with the bright hair falling around like a mist of gold.

"I must find out who she is," thought Gustavus. "But the question is, how to do it! I can't go over to the Celandine because I boarded there six weeks last year, and came away without paying my bill!"

"As I live," thought Gustavus, elevating his eyebrows, "there's Jenkisson, rushing across the street like a mad horse. Now I never run—if there's anything plebeian it's haste; but Jenkisson was always eccentric. He's coming here—eh—what! lifting his hat to the divinity at the Celandine! He knows her, as sure as the world!"

And Gustavus Lynnmore, forgetting his recent sweeping condemnation of haste, ran downstairs into the reading-room and clasped his old acquaintance cordially on the shoulder.

"Jenkisson! old fellow, what brings you here?" "How'd'ye do, Lynnmore? Excuse me, but I'm in a hurry. Steamer sails at twelve, and it's after eleven now. Is that baggage ready, Mike?"

"I only want to know who that lady is that you bowed to just now." "Oh! Why, it's Harry Burke's widow; Harry Burke that went off to California and made a fortune and died there two years ago."

"Rich, eh?" "Rich as Croesus. But I say, Gus, you needn't go to making eyes at her; it's no use, for—, Carriage ready, eh? Well, good-by, Gus!"

Mr. Lynnmore strolled out upon the portico, smiling amiably the while, to reconnoiter the passers-by, and display his unexceptionable costume.

"What a very nice little boy!" said Gustavus, stooping to pick up the hoopstick that had rolled close to the step, and restoring it with a caress. "What's your name?"

"Harry Burke," lisped the tow-headed boy, looking shyly at the affable stranger, from behind his eyebrows.

"Harry, eh? a very pretty name," pursued Gustavus, patting the tow-head. "And doesn't Harry want to go and take a walk with me?"

"No!" "Not if we go to a candy store, and afterwards to a toy shop?"

Harry Burke's seven-year-old integrity was not proof against such glittering temptations as these; he succumbed at once and trotted off, hand in hand, with the enticing stranger.

Master Harry, all unconscious of the dreadful fate awaiting him, went home to his mamma in a high state of stickiness from various candies, and loaded down with toys, and directly afterwards a bouquet of rosebuds arrived, containing Mr. Lynnmore's aristocratically engraved card.

"Dear me, how polite," said the lovely widow, dimpling and blushing. "But, then, darling Harry wins all hearts!"

"Darling Harry, forsooth!" The next day Harry went to the park, and a new volume of poems in tinted paper and creamy Turkey binding was sent to Harry's mamma; the next day a pearl ring was intrusted to the youth for his mother; the next a pony was hired for Harry to ride, and that evening a diamond of the purest water, set in a narrow hoop of gold, was sent up to room No. 29 with Mr. Lynnmore's compliments. Nor did the lovely widow spurn these gifts.

"That settles the matter," quoth Gustavus Adolphus, decidedly. "Tomorrow I'll take Harry to the menagerie, and in the evening I'll call, landlord or no landlord, and declare my sentiments. We have read each other's eyes long ago."

Mr. Lynnmore endured the zoological exhibition with the utmost calmness and philosophy, and when the last serpent was safely coiled up in his iron cage, went home with the rejoicing Harry.

"For I really must wind this thing up," soliloquized Gustavus. "I've run entirely out of cash, and, what's more, I'm over head and ears in debt for the bouquets and rings, and all these incidental expenses, including the brat. My darling," he said aloud, in a honeyed voice, "will you ask your mamma if she will please favor me with a brief interview?"

Five minutes passed away—five nervous, interminable minutes—while Mr. Lynnmore sat in mortal dread of the apparition of the landlord of the Celandine hotel, and apprehensive as to what reception might be accorded to his message. Presently, however, Master Harry came jumping down, two steps at a time.

"Mamma says, will you please to come up?" Mr. Lynnmore promptly followed his small guide up the stairs, his heart thumping behind his pearl-colored waistcoat.

"Here he is, mamma!" bawled the boy, flinging the door wide open. There stood the golden-haired beauty in a lustrous dress of the richest white silk, and there, moreover, stood a tall, dashing-looking gentleman. Gustavus Adolphus stood rooted to the floor.

"I am so glad to meet you, Mr. Lynnmore," lisped the lady, extending her hand, "and to introduce to you Mr. Wyndham, my husband."

"Your—hus—band!" "Yes—we were married this morning; and I was so much obliged to you for taking dear little Harry out of the way! You see, children are objectionable at such a time."

Gustavus opened his lips and shut them, spasmodically, without uttering a word.

"And," went on the blue-eyed divinity, with meretricious sweetness: "I have laid aside every one of your elegant presents for dear little Harry until he is old enough to appreciate them. We are going to take the sweet child to Europe with us to-morrow, but I'm sure he'll never forget his kind friend."

Mr. Lynnmore bowed mechanically, and got out of the room, he never exactly knew how. One thing connected with his retreat, however, he had disagreeable occasion to remember.

"That little bill of mine, you'll recollect, Mr. Lynnmore," said a husky voice, close in his ear: "if it's convenient to settle—"

"But it isn't convenient," groaned Lynnmore, with a bitter recollection of the diamond ring and the hothouse flowers.

"Oh, very well. Here, Jennings!" And Mr. Lynnmore, the cosmopolitan, found himself arrested on the charge of attempting to defraud the landlord of the Celandine hotel out of the paltry sum of two hundred dollars.

So ended his courtship; and so ended, at least for the time being, his dreams of "marrying rich."—Boston Globe.

CRUEL CASE OF NEGLECT.

An Ishpeming Woman Deserted by Her Husband and Left to Care for Five Children.

HYMEN AMONG THE SALVATIONISTS.

A Very Mean Thief—He Thought It Was a Bomb—Sons of St. George Will Do Some Relief Work.

A TRUANT HUSBAND.

Mrs. Mike Carey of this city would be pleased to learn of the whereabouts of her husband. The last she heard of him was in July, when he was working for Captain William Officer at the Grand Rapids mine on the Mesaba range. Carey left his wife and five small children eight months ago, and since then, and in fact for some time prior to his leaving here, he didn't contribute a cent toward their maintenance. During the last year or two of his residence here he almost entirely deserted his home and family, leaving his little ones to be cared for by their broken-hearted mother, who was obliged at times to accept public charity to keep them from want.

Mrs. Carey desires the public to know her condition and the hardships she has endured at the hands of her brutal husband. She says she will never again live with him but she thinks he should be compelled to support his children.

A few years ago Carey had a house and other property here worth $8,000, but fell into evil ways and squandered it all. The furnishings of their home were disposed of from time to time by Mrs. Carey to provide for the little ones in preference to asking public assistance. She sewed and did other work as long as she could find anything to do. Now she is obliged to send two of her children away to be taken care of by relatives, while she will endeavor to provide for the remaining three. Mrs. Carey thinks her abiding husband is in Duluth and that he should be brought to time.

Brought Him Back.

Marshal Peterson went to Hancock Thursday and arrested Alfred Nylund for having deserted Hilda Skoglund, whom he had promised to marry. The young pair were members of the Swedish Salvation Army and learned to love one another while attending the prayer meetings conducted at the barracks the past summer. The young man has been confined in the city jail since Thursday evening and will be taken before Justice Kennedy this morning, when he and Hilda will bridge the chasm that separates them by becoming man and wife.

Bound Over for Trial.

Norman Cox, charged with having broken into the Division street Methodist church on the night of Nov. 29, when thirty-three small tin boxes, the property of the Missionary society, were looted, was given a hearing in Justice Kennedy's court yesterday. Prosecuting Attorney Young appearing for the people and Attorney T. J. Dandon defending young Cox. The examination commenced at 10 o'clock in the forenoon and continued until noon, when an adjournment was taken until 2 o'clock, when the hearing was resumed, continuing until half past five. Cox was bound over to appear for trial at the next term of the circuit court.

Made a Great Racket.

Thursday afternoon, as a man was engaged in removing snow and ice from the roof of the Peninsula bank, a heavy chunk of ice swung through one of the windows in the office of Messrs. Sedgwick and Cooley on the second floor, breaking out the glass. George Sedgwick, who sat near the window, thinking the whole roof was coming in or that some dynamite had hurled a bomb at him, made a dive for the door and got safely out of the way of the flying glass. The crash was so great that the other occupants of the building rushed out of their rooms to see what the trouble was.

An Important Meeting.

Sir Humphrey Davy lodge, Sons of St. George, held a regular meeting Thursday evening, at which some important business was transacted, chief among which was the appointment of a relief committee, whose duty it will be to assist members and their families who are in distress. The committee consists of Messrs. James Trebilcock, S. Ball and James Lowery. The president announced the following appointments: Worthy assistant messenger, Thomas Edley; captain, P. Betterson; inside sentinel, Charles Roberts; outside sentinel, William Martin. A finance committee was appointed as follows: H. M. Trebilcock, George Tucker and John Hooper. The newly elected officers were installed. Despite the hard times the lodge is in good financial condition.

He Leads Them All.

There is no denying that the best place in the upper peninsula to purchase candy—home made—for the holidays is at J. H. Joslin's, on Canda street, opposite the Nelson House. He manufactures a line of goods not excelled anywhere in the country, and his prices are remarkably low. He makes a specialty of supplying church festivals, socials, private parties, etc. This year he has already received a number of orders from Ishpeming people, and also from outside points, for candy for the holidays. He is preparing a fine assortment for Christmas and will be pleased to have those desiring first class home made candies to call and see him.

They Have Them.

While you are rambling about the city endeavoring to find a suitable article for a Christmas present for a relative, sweetheart or friend, don't overlook the Kirkwood pharmacy. This is just now about the most interesting, and perhaps the busiest, place in the city. Why? Because of the beautiful stock of holiday goods displayed, and for sale at exceedingly low prices. On entering the store your eye will be caught by the variety of handsome toilet and dressing cases, or the line of beautiful cards, purses, or some of the numerous other pretty articles that adorn the interior and exterior of the show cases and occupy the shelves and counters.

The line of chinaware carried is something more than ordinary. The stock is not unusually large, but the selection is fine, and no two pieces are alike. Many odd and pretty articles in glassware will also be found in the stock. When it comes down to perfumes, the line carried is far ahead of anything to be found on the peninsula. In these goods none but the choicest have been procured, such as Siskincker's, Seely's and Lazell's manufacture. In perfume cases and bottles many new novelties that are very attractive are displayed.

A case on the south side of the room is devoted to the exclusive display of Catholic and Protestant prayer books, which comprises a variety of sizes from the smallest to the largest. In cards and albums they have many novelties that are particularly beautiful and specially suitable for holiday gifts for the young and old.

In selecting the stock the children were not forgotten. For the little ones there are dolls of various sizes and descriptions, and a well assorted line of story and picture books. In China and glassware also there are many articles that will please the children. Look the stock over before buying your Christmas presents.

E. C. Cooley, commission merchant, is making a specialty of Armour & Co.'s "Vegetole," which received the highest award at the World's Fair. Vegetole is made from selected cottonseed oil and choice beef suet and is absolutely pure and wholesome. It is used in place of lard and butter for cooking and all shortening purposes. It costs less than butter or lard and is said to go farther and gives just as good satisfaction. Mr. Cooley is meeting with good success in the sale of the new preparation, and he says people generally seem to like it.

BEWARE OF OINTMENTS FOR CATARRH THAT CONTAIN MERCURY.

Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. By buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and sends the blood pure. F. J. Cheney & Co., Testimonials free. Sold by druggists, price 75c. per bottle.

Mr. J. P. Blaize, an extensive real estate dealer in Des Moines, Iowa, narrowly escaped one of the severest attacks of pneumonia while in the northern part of that state during a recent blizzard, says the Saturday Review. Mr. Blaize had occasion to drive several miles during the storm and was so thoroughly chilled that he was unable to get warm, and inside of an hour after his return he was threatened with a severe case of pneumonia or lung fever. Mr. Blaize sent to the nearest drug store and got a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, of which he had often heard, and took a number of large doses. He says the effect was wonderful and in a short time he was breathing quite easily. He kept on taking the medicine and the next day was able to come to Des Moines. Mr. Blaize regards his cure as simply wonderful. For sale by H. H. Stafford, Son & Co.

A TRIO OF JAGS SENT TO THE COUNTY JAIL. Died of Pneumonia--New Books Will Not Be Given Out From Library for Some Time Yet.

THE FISH ARRIVED. Yesterday morning's freight on the Chicago & Northwestern road brought to Negaunee 5,000 pounds--almost half a carload--of nice, fat salt mackerel, sent to the poor of the city by Benjamin T. Hosking & Bros., wholesale fish dealers of Chicago.

Three Jags Sent up. On Thursday two men were arraigned before Justice Jones, charged with drunkenness and disorderly conduct. The usual fine was imposed, and as they were unable to produce the necessary cash they were committed to sixty days in the county jail each.

LOCAL LAONICS. J. M. Gill of Fond du Lac, Wis., was in the city yesterday. Marshal Paul is expected home from Mt. Clemens today. M. Swart of Flint, Mich., transacted business in Negaunee yesterday. W. J. Crane got home from Iron Mountain and the Gogebic range yesterday. W. S. Saunders, superintendent of the Blue mine, has been confined to his home by sickness the past few days. Joel Williams, who has been confined to his home for the past couple of weeks, was reported quite sick yesterday.

There is three feet of snow in the woods and the woodsman say it is very difficult to get around. It is also hard on the horses. Miss Josephine Gaffney returned yesterday from the copper country, where she has been visiting friends the past week. The clerk of the water board is busy these days preparing bills for the quarterly collection of water rates, due Jan. 1. Louie Geyler, the tailor, who about a year ago occupied rooms in the Caples block, was up from Marquette on a visit to friends Thursday. Many called at the Chicago & Northwestern depot yesterday to "size up" the pile of fish sent here by Hosking Bros. of Chicago for distribution among the poor of the city. Andy Seass' fast horse--not the one that does service between the depot and hotel--took flight at a moving train near the South Shore depot yesterday morning and ran away. The driver was dumped into the snow and the cutter was somewhat damaged. On Tuesday a bob sleigh owned by August Rund will be sold at public auction in front of Barabee & Swenson's store to satisfy a mortgage held by that firm. Yesterday's snow storm was too much for the street cars and they were both pulled off the road during the afternoon. They will be taken out today if the weather is favorable. That dividend which the president of the Young American Dancing club promised the members during the week turned out to be an assessment of $1.05 per member. The boys say they were satisfied to get off so easy. Tom Trathen and T. J. Flynn will start out Monday soliciting funds for the dog race set for New Year's day. Let everybody who can afford a quarter, half-dollar or dollar have his donation ready when the two Toms call around with their list. SHOPPING IN FEZ. Rummaging in a Moorish Sword and Dagger Bazaar. An interesting sight is the sword and dagger bazaar filled with many strange weapons, from the curving Turkish scimitars to the straight swords of Persia. The sun is kept out of this market place by a luxuriant grapevine trained to run over the trestlework. Here I had spent more than an hour a day for several weeks in rummaging through the heaps of swords, and had been rewarded by a "find" that always brought me back again to the spot. It was an undoubted Andrea Ferrara blade. The temper and inimitable finish of the workmanship made the confirmation of its signature quite unnecessary. But there it was, the name of the magical worker in steel, "Andrea Ferrara," and on the other side, "Toledo," for many years. The blade was worn and blunted, and the sharp edges were notched. I found it in a pile of worthless swords, for a Moor would never lower himself by displaying his wares; but the owner knew its value well, and asked me three times as much for it as it would have brought at Christie's in the palmy days of high prices. I spent many a happy hour in this bazaar, fingering the old, worn blade, and imagining its adventures, picturing myself the battle-scene where the blade had fallen from the hand of a Catholic Spaniard, and was snatched up by the sherrifian Moor. And who, I mused in my anger, was the impious Numidian (may the sod or the sand be heavy on him!) who cast away the original hilt I dreamed of as befitting such a blade and such a preux chevalier as must have been the knight that wore it--a Christian hilt it must have been, in the shape of the cross, with all the dainty bravery of silver and gold and of inlaid ivory--and replaced it by a "cumbersome, shapeless hilt of rhinoceros horn?" I had gradually fallen into that sentimental state of mind where money is no object--especially to the poor--and on this day I had started for the bazaar prepared to buy the sword, cost what it might. My heart beat high as I approached the shop. The thought of the extravagance I was about to commit made me positively happy. "But what if the blade is rone?" I thought, with a shudder. The Moor smiled as he caught my eye searching the booth for the blade that was nowhere to be seen. "It is sold," he said quite simply. "And to whom--to whom?" "Who he was God alone knows," and the shopkeeper placidly folded his arms, crossed his legs, and resumed his disturbed slumber. Stephen Bonsal, in Century. --An Ambiguous Answer.--Jones--"Well, Smith, did you propose to Miss Aires last night?" Smith--"Yes, and her answer was very ambiguous and contradictory. Jones--"Why, what did she say?" Smith--"She gave me a positive negative."--Yankee Blade. --Worth, the great Paris dressmaker, says that some years ago a Peruvian heiress paid his firm $30,000 for a single gown, $20,000 being the cost of the laces alone. A few weeks ago he sold a cloak for $12,000, of which $10,000 went for the fur. Mr. S. H. CONKLIN writes from Mt. Carmel, Conn. "Enclosed please find check for your bills of May 2nd and 12th. I repeat the gratification I express before as to the convenience, the economy, and the real artistic beauty of the National Lead Company's Pure White Lead Tinting Colors have proved to me in using them. It would seem as if the old way of trying to produce the desired shade of color by mixing many colors together with much labor and guess-work must be abandoned in favor of your economical, sure and easy method. My painters wish to introduce their use in an adjoining town, and want a couple of your books as guides."

PRESERVES AND JELLIES. How to Make Them Clear and Rich as Our Grandmothers Used To. To the housekeepers of this generation who can remember the translucent preserves, surrounded with rich sirup, thick and clear, delicate and delicious flavor, and the amber-hued, deep red and purple jellies served on the tables of their grandmothers, preserve-making seems indeed a lost art.

In making preserves and jellies many things must be considered, the most important being the quality of the fruit, which should always be of the best variety and flavor, and never under or over ripe. If preserves are desired clear and light in color, loaf-sugar should be used in making them, but granulated will answer the purpose very well. Large fruits, such as peaches, pears, apples and quinces should be carefully peeled with a silver knife and thrown into cold water to prevent discoloring. Plums should be split with a sharp knife and the stones removed, berries must be picked free of leaves and stems, but never washed. Apples, peaches, pears and quinces after being weighed should be boiled in clear water until tender, then put in a kettle of sirup made of a pound of sugar to every pound of fruit and a pint of water. The preserves should boil evenly until the fruit is clear and sirup thick. Small fruits should be sprinkled with the sugar after being weighed, and let stand several hours, then put on the fire, and boiled slowly for forty minutes. Preserves should be boiled in a porcelain kettle, and put up in small glass jars.

The proper condition of the fruit is even more important in jelly-making than in preserving, for if green or over-ripe, all efforts to make good jelly will be in vain. The fruit must therefore be gathered at the proper stage of ripeness, and carefully picked over before cooking. The juice should be strained, measured, and boiled before adding the sugar, a pound of which should be allowed to every pint; twenty minutes is the usual time for boiling jelly, but it is not always sufficient, and a few minutes longer will be required sometimes. The best quality of sugar should be used for jelly, or it will be stringy and dark colored. If the jelly does not form in twenty-four hours, it is useless to cook it over. Sometimes if set in the sun it will become jelly more readily. Red currants, grapes, plums, and blackberries, all make excellent jellies for serving with meats. Quinces, peaches, apples, and pears make light jellies for cakes, puddings and ornamental dishes. The best peaches for preserving are white freestone, not entirely ripe. To make them, split large perfect peaches in halves, take out the seeds, drop the fruit in cold water. Make sirup of a pound of sugar for every pound of fruit and a pint of water. Drop the peaches in, let boil for twenty minutes, skim out, lay on a large dish, let the sirup boil until thick, return the fruit to it, and boil gently until transparent. Put in glass jars, and cover. Yellow peaches may be used, but make a darker preserve. Apples may be preserved in the same way, but will be improved by the addition of a sliced lemon. The orange quince and the Bartlett pear make the best-flavored preserves of these fruits, and may be made like the peach and apple preserves after being scalded, as cooking them too long renders them dark.

In preserving berries, or any fruit liable to boil to pieces, a small lump of alum may be added to the fruit while cooking to make it firm. A cool dark place is best for storing preserves and jellies, which are likely to mold if kept too warm or exposed to dampness.--Eliza R. Parker, in Ladies' Home Journal.

GATHERING SPONGES. Two Different Methods Employed in the Mediterranean and Around Florida. The American sponge grounds, more correctly known as the Florida sponge grounds, are situated along the southern and western coasts of that state. The methods employed in gathering sponges in the Mediterranean and around Florida are very different. In the east divers are employed. The diver is carried down by a broad flat slab of marble of about twenty-five pounds weight, which he holds at arm's length in front of him and which he uses to guide his flight, to protect his head when he first strikes and to keep him down when he walks on the bottom. Fifteen to twenty fathoms is the average depth, while two minutes is the usual duration of the dive. Each diver makes the best-flavored preserves of these fruits, and may be made like the peach and apple preserves after being scalded, as cooking them too long renders them dark.

POINTERS ABOUT THE POOR.

Difficulty In Distinguishing Between Deserving and Undeserving.

FEATURES OF COMMISSIONER BLANCHARD'S WORK.

A Few Valuable Hints to the Commissioners of Ironwood and Bessemer. Picked Up Down Here.

WATCH THE POPULATION

"The poor ye have always with you" was no less true 2,000 years ago than it is today, and if particulars had been gone into at the time of the utterance of that saying, it might have been added that Solomon in all his wisdom would have been unable to always exercise discernment and judgment in deciding who and who not might justly be classed as poor.

For some days a MINING JOURNAL reporter has interested himself in this matter, not so much to discover how much poverty exists, but what proportion of it should not be so designated. There is no gainsaying the fact that there are a great many in our city and county deserving assistance from the poor fund and kindly disposed neighbors; but it is equally true that not a few now receiving charity should be forced by the pangs of hunger to accept certain kinds of offered work which would enable them to earn at least a portion of the amount necessary to feed, clothe and warm themselves and families. The writer knows of more than one instance where men out of work have refused an offer to earn because the job was not as congenial or lucrative as their trade or former employment. Yet these persons and their families presume to throw themselves upon the charity of the poor commissioner. It is a difficult matter to discriminate between the deserving and undeserving and makes the work of the poor commissioner by no means a sinecure.

It is usually safe to assume that the most deserving poor have to be discovered for they are of a quality that shrinks from any appearance of charity. Generally those who are most anxious to have assistance from the poor fund merit it the least.

Captain Blanchard was interviewed yesterday regarding his methods and they may be of value to other poor commissioners in this peninsula. In every instance where a demand is made upon him Captain Blanchard institutes a thorough investigation. Sometimes this is made after the first help is given, where pressing necessity seems to advise prompt relief. Usually the commissioner investigates for himself but quite often sends some person unknown to those declaring distress as not infrequently preparations are made to show as poverty stricken an appearance as possible the more effectually to excite sympathy.

In issuing orders upon the grocers the captain specifies staples and instructs the dealer to not allow luxuries to be furnished on such orders. In some instances, where there no specifications, the persons receiving poor orders would spend the whole amount on canned fruits, high grade teas and coffees and dainty meats. Whenever it is possible to get an able bodied man work, who may apply for assistance, such is done. The poor fund is only tapped as a last resort.

The foregoing are given as valuable hints to the poor commissioners up the road. Not a few instances have come to light recently that would indicate the poor orders are issued specifying only the amount and leaving the choice entirely to the beneficiary. For example; several families visited the other day in Bessemer had nothing to sustain life but some soup made from expensive canned goods. The amount paid for one can of prepared soup would have provided the family with a good substantial meal. Another case was discovered, incidentally, where a good proportion of the amount of the order went for tobacco to supply the wish of the man of the house. In yet another house it was found that one-half of a $2 poor order had gone for canned peaches of the most expensive brand. These are only a few cases discovered by accident. If the poor commissioner would only specify on the orders what the grocer was to supply and limit the articles, in ordinary cases, to staples, such poor judgment and actual waste of public money would be effectually stopped.

It is not only necessary to specify the article but its quality. Cases are known here where a pound of coffee was ordered and the best Mocha demanded and supplied. Meat to a certain amount has been ordered and, instead of the beneficiary getting a good solid roast and a soup bone good for at least two days eating, steak of the costliest cutting has been asked for and given. To prevent such errors in judgment—to call them by no harsher name—both articles and quality should be specified by the commissioner. Otherwise efforts to help the poor become of small value and the chief object of the county fund is lost sight of.

Another pointer to those looking after the poor fund and the distribution of donations at Ironwood and Bessemer. A strict watch should be kept there to see that the population does not materially increase as the winter advances. It is known that persons having relatives living in one or other of those towns are seriously considering paying them a visit of indefinite length. A place where there is no work to do—at least none doing—and enough food to carry through the cold season seems to possess peculiar attractions for a certain class of not over thrifty foreigners.

The MINING JOURNAL submits these hints in an earnest effort to aid the poor commissioners all it can. Many things are talked of in Marquette regarding happenings in Ironwood, Bessemer and other distant points that are kept quiet up there and this article is the result of hearing some of them. It is understood the poor of Ironwood refused to eat fish—herring—that had been donated. They wanted meat. To quote one who has had experience: "If they refused the fish I offered I would declare every day Friday until the last bone had been picked." This is no time for sentiment or over daintiness. Those who grumble at the quality of the charity so generously offered should be permitted to starve until they learn becoming gratitude.

Police Will Crush It.

There is one practice far too generally indulged in in this city that should be curbed and if possible suppressed with all the strength of the law. Every city is more or less cursed with it, but Marquette rather more than its pleasanter. A certain class of boys, hoodlums from sixteen to twenty years of age, seem to delight in seeing in what foul language they can express the few stray sentiments that by chance enter their brainless skulls. In order to make the offensive language more objectionable they are careful to spue it forth while women and girls are passing, taking good care, however, in their cravenness, to assume a somewhat respectful demeanor should the fair sex be attended by some one of the more muscular persuasion.

The police are making every effort to make this execrable pastime less popular and it is hoped they may be successful. The names of those heard using foul language in the streets are being quietly collected at police headquarters and a close watch will be kept on the offenders. When caught fouling the air with the vile excrements of their equally vile hearts they will be punished to the limit of the law.

This week three lads were arrested for using obscene expressions while a woman was passing. They were brought before a justice and severely censured, their names taken and if they are heard repeating the offense they will be arrested, punished and their names made as public as print and the courts can make them.

Marshal Maloney has taken a stand in this matter that will be commended by every decent citizen and he cannot add a greater laurel to his wreath of well administered office than by stamping out this most objectionable practice so freely indulged in by our young "tough" element. THE MINING JOURNAL would suggest that the police department publish the names of those heard using offensive language in the streets, as it would tend to give rowdies a deserved publicity and persuade decent companions to shun them as they would a pestilence.

An Old Resident Gone.

Mrs. Rebecca McGregor, one of Marquette's oldest residents, died at the home of her son, Jason McGregor, Thursday afternoon. She was seventy-eight years of age and had spent forty-two years of her life in this city. When Mrs. McGregor came to the upper peninsula Marquette was a village, and not a very large one either. She had seen its growth until its present enviable proportions were reached, her family taking no small interest in its early growth. She leaves a son, Jason, her husband having died years ago. The funeral will take place this afternoon at 2 o'clock from the home of Jason McGregor.

F. H. Vandenberg will make his usual delivery of fresh creamery butter today. In spite of hard times this noted butter cart comes in regularly every week with an increased quantity and elegant quality of goods. Why is this? Simply because he has an article the people want and they have found it will cost less to have a reliable dairyman supply them with a good article fresh every week than to buy elsewhere. (15-15-24)

Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder
World's Fair Highest Award.

Much thought and discussion have occurred among the good and the wise. The subject has been Dr. Fenner's Golden Relief. A says it cures too many diseases, claims too much! B says the list is long, and it's a long way from a "corn" to a "pulmonary consumption." It's trying with "human affliction." C has the solution! It cures only INFLAMMATION. That's but ONE. Its got many names. A corn is one. A consumption is another. Many between, such as neuralgia, toothache, burns, rheumatism, diarrhoea, dysentery, flux, etc., etc. Cure the inflammation, in any of these, and the disease is gone! Faulty with the name—remedy not to blame! Treat it fairly. Give it a chance. The Doctors don't cure consumption This is the "last chance." Try it. Read the following:
Mrs. L. C. Smith, No. 29 North Washington St., Rochester, N. Y., writes: "Nearly all my relatives have died of consumption. I was under the ban of the same dread disease. Had the wasting of flesh and the 'hotic flush.' I finally began the use of Dr. Fenner's Golden Relief and am fully restored. If people could only know this remedy as I know it, what a saving of life there would be." Write her. She knows of other similar cases. Taken in 8 drop doses, on a lump of sugar, once in two hours, it never disappoints. Contains no narcotics or mineral poisons. Safe and certain. One tablepoonful dose cures La Grippe. If satisfaction not given, money refunded. Take home a bottle to-day.

There is no one instrument, unless, indeed, it be a large pipe organ, capable of the variety of effects that are obtainable on the Aeolian. Unlike the pipe organ, however, the Aeolian is adapted to all classes of music; overtures and symphonies can be rendered on it with all the softness and delicacy of the flute and violin and cello and all the snap and brilliancy of the piano. See and hear them at Conklin's.
