The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and glying the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

MAKING POETRY.

There are yet some persons left who fancy that poetry is the product of a fine frenzy; that the poet of genius awakes from a sublimated cataleptic trance to fill page after page with effortless beatitudes. A number of manuscript sheets of Longfellow's "Excelsior," which may be found in Har-vard, should not only explode this theory, writes a Boston correspondent, but give hope to many a discouraged amateur. As Longfellow first constructed the first verse of this poem it

A banner with the strange There are not many, even among the magazine poets of to-day, who would consent to refer to a banner as a "pearl of price." But the poet had by this time three lines to his liking, and the substitution of "a youth who bore 'mid snow and ice" completed the verse as it has been read and spoken throughout the length and breadth of the land. All of which goes to show that the genius of the poet is in the conception, and that the production of the poem, being quite another matter,

Not many days after, one of the convicts escaped, and fifty machines in the building is sure to be out of order, and the ope ator must sit idle until the repairs are made. The repairer must carry ink ribbons and all the smaller parts of capture will bring you the reward of a hundred franes, and that will help you type machines, for there is no telling what part may have yielded to the strain of vigorous hands. There are over one hundred men employed in this way in New York city. For the most part they are in the pay of the typewriting establishments, and are sent out by them. A few work independently, but the work does not pay them then very well, and they finally give it up and go in the employ of the large

It is said by the machine doctors that the typewriters are as sensitive as human beings and know who is handling them. A good machine that has been treated "suffes" when new and unskilled hands take hold of it, and sometimes it refuses to work. As soon as it feels the regular stroke of its own operator it is all right. This is a typewriter's superstition. And strange to say it turns out in accordance with actual fact.

All sorts of things "happen" to type writing machines. Sometimes the on the floor as the office boy moves them for the sweep woman to do her work. HOUGHTON.

Dennis J. Norton, Democratic nominee for senator, and D. W. Sutter, the candidate of the same party for member of the legislature from the First district, have withdrawn from the ticket. As it is too late to fill in new names this leaves the Democrats of the county with an uncompleted ticket. The time for the filing of certified tickets by the various political parties expired yesterday and those who were not in then are out of it. The board of election commissioners will now meet and prepare the official ballot, a proof of which can be seen at the county clerk's office by any candidate, or the chairman or secretary of any political party until ten days before election. The official ballot will then stand complete and subject to no further re-vision. The ballots will be printed in the county and not at Lansing, as formerly, relieving the state officers of a vast amount of extra labor and insuring greater accuracy to the ballot. At Tuesday's meeting of the county board it was decided to raise $94,000 by taxation, an increase of $7,000 ever the estimates of the county treasurer. When an actor from the east gets stranded in San Francisco, or indeed anywhere on the Pacific coast, he goes straight to John Rademaker. It appears that John Rademaker has an elastic and sympathetic auricular appendage that is al-ways wide open to the reputable men in the profession who get stuck on the slippery slope. Those who have never been stranded two thousand miles from home, with an idle summer ahead and no bank account, will not be able to realize what such friendship means. Imagine yourself in London without a friend and without a cent, as some Americans are always to be found there, and you'll know what the sensation is to the actor left in 'Frisco at the close of the season. Then imagine a man like John Rademaker in the strand to whom you go and pour out your tale of woe, and who pulls out his roll and says to you:

Well, old man, I don't know you; but from what I've heard of you I think you'll make this good when you're in better luck. I'll take my chances on you, anyhow. I'll just stake you for a trip home. Oh, that's all right-I don't want any paper-if you're not square your paper's no good. Now, what'll you have to drink?"

"One hot, sweltering night I was laying in a state half asleep and half heat stupor, when I suddenly became aware that a dark, flat object, in which gleamed two spots of malignant light, just between it and the moujerie. I could just see it over my limb and the blood in my veins simply froze with horror as I realized that it must be cither a cobra or a karaite. The body of the serpent was evidently in the bed and the head elevated just enough to watch my face. A queer constrictive sort of feeling shot up and down my scalp and the hair stood out straight,"

I rushed into my room, followed rather cautiously by the others. I flashed the light on the bed, holding the stick poised aloft for a quick, strong blow, but there was no object there to vent my fury upon. Then I remembered that I had thrown him up over my head when I jumped from the bed. Telling Brown to throw the pillow over with a quick movement, I held the lamp in my left hand and stood ready to give his cobraship his quietus with a powerful blow.

"Quick as a flash the pillow was jerked to the other end of the bed and the head elevated just enough to watch my face. I dared not move a deed, if I can't ride on the quarter-deck muscle-to call out meant death, for were he aroused, either by fear or an-ger, he would deal out death to the nearest living object with the rapidity of lightning. My hand was lying down beside my thigh and already I could feel his cold, slimy body moving over it. If my blood was frozen before, this chilled the very marrow in my bones. "Then I must have moved my hand, for the fiend struck-without warning and with such devilish rapidity that I saw nothing, only felt the sharp, lance like thrust in my thigh. With a rush my blood, which had been standing still in my veins, I think went tearing through my body again, and before my horrified cry had ceased to ring through the bungalow, I was standing on the floor clear of the wrecked moujerie. As I sprang from the bed when he struck I felt his body go hurtling over my head up against the pillow as I threw up the arm he had been lying on.

"Brown-Bangle Brown' as he was called then, because he used to wear a silver bangle on his left wrist that some girl had given him-was calling from the next room 'Who is there? who is there?' and the whole bungalow was soon in a turmoil. "'Nonsense, man,' he ejaculated, 'you have been dreaming,' but his face was ashy pale now, too.

" 'Here are the marks of his fangs,' I said, as I bared my thigh; and there, sure enough, were too tiny punctures and a drop of blood oozing from one.

"There could be no doubt about it now-his light had swept away the last vestige of hope. All that remained to do was to make a futile effort to stay the deadly poison. Already I could feel a peculiar twitching sensation where the lines run from the nose down past the corners of the mouth, there was a dull, tugging sort of pain in my heart, a feeling as though the blood was being forced through it at an increased pressure. My head was dizzy and my eyes hot and blurred, and it was with the greatest difficulty that I could keep my mind from wandering. I could hardly articulate a word, and when I did that fairly took away Gordon's breath.

"By this time Brown and the others were thoroughly awake to the seriousness of the case, and had started in to do all in their power to save me. Brown was a sort of amateur surgeon, and always carried a small apothecary establishment with him. I saw him whip out a lance and look at me in a questioning way. I nodded, and in an instant he had the piece surrounding the bite out and his lips applied to the gaping wound.

Grand Democratic Rally Will Be Held at Ishpeming Opera House Tonight.

PREPARATIONS BEING MADE FOR

Hon. Spencer O. Fisher, Democratic Candidate for Governor, and Other Speakers Will Be Present.

A GRAND TIME ANTICIPATED. The Democrats will open their campaign in this city tonight, when Hon. Spencer O. Fisher, candidate for governor, Charles Whitman of Ypsilanti and Rush Culver of Marquette, candidate for congress in this district, will deliver addresses at the City Opera House. Messrs. Fisher and Whitman have been delivering speeches in towns up the line during the past few days and they have been enthusiastically received. They are both good talkers and no doubt will be greeted by a full house.

The Democrats of this city are highly pleased with the ticket placed in nomination at the convention held in Marquette on Tuesday. They feel certain that they have a good chance of electing certain of their candidates at least. From now until the election is over the enthusiasts among the Democratic and Republican parties here will have plenty of opportunity to talk and they dates of county and district was never before manifested here. A SURGEON'S TENDER SPOT. They Dislike to Operate Upon Little

No matter how hardened a doctor may become by seeing much suffering, said a physician the other day, there is one thing that will always make him weaken, that is if he has any heart at all. Now, I have been cutting off men's legs and arms and doing all kinds of severe operations for years, yet in all that time my sense of business duty did not allow my sympathy to interfere with my work, except in the cases of children. I can never perform an operation on a child without feeling sick at heart. In my practice I avoid this kind of work as much as possible, shifting the cases to some other doctor when possible. Why, it even hurts me to be compelled to score the gums of a teething child. I would ten times rather cut off a man's leg than do it. There is something about a child-that innocent, sweet expression-which goes to my heart. This may sound absurd coming from a man, as some people would put it, who has done as much sawing and carving as I have, but it is the truth, nevertheless. It is something about which other doctors have spoken to me, and I know is quite a general feeling. The other afternoon I was compelled to cut off the foot of a young baby. It was quite a simple operation, and some people might say that on acchild she would not have felt or realized what had been done. Well, I accomplished that operation, but it was the hardest work I have ever done. When it was finished I was so unstrung Home-made Sausage the that, like a woman, I commenced to weep. Of course, I was ashamed of myself, but sometimes when the tears begin to flow it is difficult to check them.-Pittsburgh Dispatch.

THE USE OF CORK. How It First Came to Be Used for Bottle

The application of cork as a bottle stopper for liquid vessels is said to be of great antiquity. The earliest rec-ord extant of its use in Europe is that mentioned by Horace, who asserts that Spaniards began to prepare cork for bottle stoppers, which they did in a forest situated at the northeast of the Tigueras, on the Muge.

How this flower came to be the badge of either house, not many people even guess. The few students who suppose they know its history say that the white rose came to the house of York through the family of Clifford, whose device it had long been, and beyond whom it cannot be traced. ### LIFE IN HONG KONG.

A City of Picturesque Structures and Uproarious Smells.

How the Europeans Pass Their Time When Not Engaged in Business-Dens of Iniquity Where Jack Tar Is Ensnared.

In Hong Kong the English equivalent of which is "Fragrant Streams," the Chinaman shows a developed taste for Hundreds of pig tails will crowd into a house built for one ordinary European family. All the accommodation the coolie boarder asks is a shelf commodious enough to smoke opium on when he has any.

Each sleeping-room, says the Chicago News, is converted into a kind of gigantic apple cupboard, with tiers of shelves all round from floor to ceiling, divided up into lengths of six or seven feet. The cellars are called into requisition, and, in San Francisco at any rate, the proprietors excavate cata-combs under the street to extend their sickening dormitory accommodation. Outwardly, however, in Hong Kong the abodes of the Chinese are often quite picturesque, for they have their triple areades like any other Hong Kong street, and over the balustrades of these the 'tenementers' clothes are generally hanging out, the bright butch er's blue affected by the coolie class of course predominating. These arched and draped dwellings are piled up furthermore in terrace upon terrace on the steep slopes of the island; for Hong Kong is hung about a mountain eighteen hundred feet high above the sea.

If, however, the visitor wishes to see Hong Kong at its very worst let him dive under one of the forbidding black archways at the bottom of "The Hill of Great Peace" and see the type of grog shop and music hall and female char acter to which Tommy Atkins introduces Jack Tar when a new queen's ship comes in amid a roar from the batteries and the men-of-war of half a dozen nations. As the Chinese wear piles of padded clothing, wash themselves very little and use a species of nettoyage for making their clothes ap-pear clean, the atmosphere of this forcing bed for the plague may be im-

The European portion of the city is, however, so healthy that not a single case of the plague has occurred in it, though the Chinese are dying off like flies. The apex of European life in Hong Kong is the Peak-in two sens It is the highest point in the island-eighteen hundred feet above sea level -and as soon as a man becomes wealthy enough he buys a bungalow there for a summer residence in addi-tion to his winter home nearer business. There is also a popular and fa-mous hotel near the summit. He reaches the Peak swinging in a sedan chair on the necks of four stout coolies or by a climbing railway which rises so perpendicularly in places as to scare the life out of a stranger.

There are seven or eight thousand Europeans to the one hundred and fifty thousand Chinese in Hong Kong, and they have means of beguiling time which are the envy of the English colonies in Japan. In the first place there are the gambling hells at Ma-cao and Kowloong, the strip of British territory on the other side of the harbor. Then there are the excellent said the bright woman who had asked for Pearline, to the grocer who wanted to sell her some imitation of it. "whether you do sell more of these other things or not, there must be something in Pearline which makes the flies avoid it. I notice that all the Pearline packages are clean and fresh. All the others are fly-specked!'

This is a true story. Everything is true that we print about Pearline. The thing in Pearline that keeps flies off is its popularity. It doesn't stay on the shelves long enough to become soiled. When women want washing made

THE BOER LANGUAGE. It Differs Materially from That of Hol-

The "Afrikaansche Taal" is not the Dutch of modern Holland. In its origin it represents the old Dutch of the country districts in the Netherlands, together with a tendency toward the Flemish dialect. It has incorporated a great deal of English and a little French, says the Fortnightly Review. Above all, its pronunciation is quite different to that of the classic Dutch, and it lends itself much more readily to English tongues and palates. It is almost impossible for a Dutchman of Holland, on arriving in South Africa, to understand the native Dutch dialect.

Words are greatly clipped, and, although the abominable guttural "g" is still retained, the equally fatiguing Dutch pronunciation of "s-c-h" is hap pily changed into a simple "sk." The vowels are pronounced almost as they would be by an Englishman. For in-stance, "beest" is pronounced like "beast," not like "baste," as it would be in Holland. A Cape Dutchman talks of "De Beers;" he does not pronounce it "De Bares," as the real Dutchman would do. Needless to say, the "Afrikaansche Taal" has no literature behind it, and all the best things written in Holland have either made their appearance in Latin, French, or even English, or have rapidly been translated into those languages if intended to be widely read. The adoption, therefore, of the English language throughout South Africa is a necessity forced on that community by commerce, manu factures, mining enterprise, and all dealings with the outer world.

As a matter of fact, a young Boer will learn English as quickly as a raw Scotchman would exchange his harsh dialect for the incisive, clear, quick
