One of our enterprising business firms, with an eye single to domestic economy, recently ordered a set of books consisting of ledger, journal, merchandise ledger, and cash book, from Detroit, because he could get them "so much better and 'cheaper." Our binder has looked the set over and announces that he is prepared to turnish better for less money than the Detroit firm charged. The owner of the books is a merchant of this city and expects to be patronized. What business man can blame our citizens for sending below for groceries, obtain at home?

A crowd of young fellows came into his saloon and after some desultory conversation one of them offered to bet the drinks for the house that he could raise himself clear of the floor by the seat of his pants, at the same time taking hold of that part of his pantaloons and raising upon his toes. "Yes, but you not do him fair," said the keeper. "If I don't do it fair," said the young man, "I'll pay for the drinks." "How long you stay up!" inquired the saloonist. "One minute." "All right; you hear dot, shentlemen !" Then the young man locked the door, took off his pants, tied the legs together and threw them over the top of the screen, seized the seat with both hands and raised himself clear of the floor! The German was completely astounded, and said, "So help me cracious, I never dinks of dot!" -On Saturday last we went out in the woods to shoot pigeons. The woods were full of pigeons, but we didn't shoot any-we didn't want to take any chance of killing the boys. There were several boys with shot guns-several boys to the square foot of ground, and three men and four women to every bay. We met Preston in the crowd, and he said something about pigeons and asked us for a chew of tobacco. Wetherwax came up and asked us how many pigeons we had got; he said the woods were full of them, and we gave him a chew of tobacco, he having first suggested it. Weatherwax hadn't killed any pigeons at that time. At six o'clock the next day he had twowhich he bought of an Indian from up the lake. We got upon a slump and asked the boys what they were doing out there in such vast numbers, and one of them told his companion to shoot at our hat. Then they all yelled, "shoot that hat," and we requested them not to do it. It was an old hat and we shouldn't have had any objection to their shooting it, but it was on our head. Finally, to would have it we were too late: the township was jammed full and we couldn't even get standing room in the aisle. They were holding an inquest on the pigeon when we arrived, and a verdict had just been returned of death from excessive fright. On Wednesday a rumor reached the city that another pigeon had been seen roaming about the woods in the vicinity of Eagle Mills, and the railroad company placed four extra trains upon the line and gave exursions during that day and the succeeding one. Several hucksters set up booths in the vicinity, and a new hotel had been partially completed, when news arrived that the pigeon had been shot and was then on its way to Marmette. By a careful piece of strategy we were enabled to nterview the corpse, and were surprised to find that it was not dead but that its hair had been turned white in a single night. The people of Eagle Mills were naturally disappointed at the capture of the pigeon, as they had already advertised a balloon ascension and a grand display of fireworks during each evening of the week. There are pigeons in this section of country, of course : but then ves-

In a former issue we referred to Marquette as a summer resort for tourists, invalids, sportsmen and others, and have been pleased to find that considerable notice from the press has been evoked, and, we are prone to believe, from the reading public. We desire at this particular time, now that the "heated | wholly to climatic influences. term" is fairly upon the people "below," and this region is assuming its most attractive features, to make a brief recapitulation of some few of its more interesting and pleasing characteristics, trusting that it will be of interest to at least a small portion of our readers. During the past summer there has been no diminution in the number of tourists at the hotels, many of whom were guests in former seasons, and it is only attributable to the depressed condition of affairs generally that the patronage has not been considerably increased. There have, however, been influences at work which, although not directly detracting from the claims of Marquette and vicinity to the highest consideration of those seeking a delightful summer resort, have been potent. through the greater laudation of other points in raising into prominence sections eminently inferior in natural scenery, healthful influences and those attractions which allure the sportsman and scholar. We refer to the Mackinaw national park, whose creation has led many to suppose that it was a point of far greater attractions than could be found elsewhere in the country round about; also to the "Grand Traverse region," whose attractions for the sportsman, invalid and pleasure seeker have not been held a profound secret by the Grand Rapids & Indiana Railroad, to whose interest it is that tourists should choose that section. Other places, both in Wisconsin and Michigan, have vigorously preferred their claims, which have been more or less patronized. During the past few weeks numerous steamer excursions have been made to the pictured rocks of Grand Island, and in no instance have we heard other than the most rapturous praise from those who have actually penetrated the caves and recesses of these wonderful shapes and figures, chiseled from the solid sandstone rock by the slow erosion of wind and wave for centuries past. There is a popular fallacy, tending greatly to belittle the attractions which these rocks present, and which has been attained by passengers on board steamers viewing them at a distance through telescopes, after which they content themselves with the thought quired anxiously of the fellow what he wanted, when he | that they have "done" the pictured rocks, and that paper, do a better job of binding and all complete replied with all the gravity imaginable-"I want you to they are not so very extraordinary after all. By invitation of Capt. L. Hickey, of the steam vacht Frank C. Fero, on Tuesday last we took a short cruise around the harbor in company with several C. & N. W. Railway officials, who have been stopping at the Northwestern Hotel for a few days of recreation and pleasure seeking. The Fero has recently undergone repairs, receiving a new piston head, rings, etc., and is now placed at the service of parties desiring to make excursions to the various points of interest in the neighborhood, Grand Island, Picture Rocks, etc. The yacht is owned by Mr. Terrence Moore, president of the Ontonagon Silver Mining Company, in which service she has been more or less engaged during the past few menths. A question has arisen among the legal fraternity of this city as to whether a recorder or justice may tax the costs together with the fine imposed upon a prisoner. It seems that the law makes no special provision for the collection of costs from the person fixed, and as the expenses must thus be borne out of the contingent fund, and the fine placed to the credit of the school or library fund, there is palpable

the mints are still busy making coins. A corres- and trade. pondent of the Tribune sends the following account of the process employed at the San Francisco

Until recently a small percentage, I believe onefifth of one per cent., has been charged for coining, but the Forty Third Congress repealed the tax on coinage, which is a source of rejoicing on the part of dealers in bullion. We will say that Smith owns a quantity of gold dust and a few bars of silver. The fineness of neither has been ascertained, but Smith is in need of money and wants to realize. He takes his gold and silver to the mint and becomes what is known as a depositor. He deposits his metals, which are weighed in his presence to a hundreath part of an ounce, and receives a receipt for the number of ounces, but no value is given, for it has not yet been ascertained. The deposit is numbered, a memorandum made, which accompanies the deposit wherever it goes, and it is placed in a sheet iron how and conversed to the deposit malting. box and conveyed to the deposit melting room. A record is here made, and in its turn the deposit is melted to a white liquid state in a black lead crucible, the process requiring about half an hour. The deposit is then run into a mould, and the bar thus formed is stamped with its number, and sent back to the place of its original reception. The grains are placed in a paper and accompany the bar, and both are weighed again to ascertain the loss in melting. The bar is then sent to the assayer, where its fineness is ascertained, and the deposit is returned to the superintendent. Upon the fineness of the bar the value of the deposit is computed, and Smith is paid by a gold check on week or two until his deposit can be put into coin. The bar is then turned over to the melter and refiner, with a number of other deposits, which are melted into what are known as unparted bars, weighing from 300 to 400 ounces each, and these are sent to the assayer and assayed in turn, thence going to the refinery for the removal of silver and base metals contained, and are in due time returned to the superintendent of the mint in the form of refined and nearly pure gold. The gold is again assayed and turned over to the melter and refiner to be made into ingots. Copper is used as alloy in the proportion of nine of gold and one of copper, the standard of American coin being 900 fine. To ascertain the amount of copper to be added, the gross weight is multiplied by the fineness of the gold and divided by 900, which gives the number of standard ounces, or, in other words, what it would weigh if 900 fine. The difference between the gross and standard weights is the amount of copper to be added. The "melts," as they are then termed, are sent to the ingot furnaces where they are melted and run into ingot molds, where the metal hardens instantly. The ingots are then placed into a pickel tub containing a solution of suiphuric acid, which removes the impurities on the surface, and a trifling proportion of copper. The first and last ingots in each melt, which are reserved for assaying, are chipped at either end before pickling. From the pickle the ignots are cooled in a tank of water. At one end of each ignot is a hollow place like that in the bottom of a glass bottle caused by the air in the bottom of the mold, and this end is topped off in a machine. The bars are then filed to remove the rough edges, and each "melt" is placed in a separate box and goes to the weighing room and is weighed. It must be said that the melter and refiner, owing to his responsibility, is very careful of the precious metal in his keeping. After the bars are in his possession for weighing, all the pots are scraped, the tops and filings collected, the iron floor, in open eces, is taken up and washed, the stone floor, swept and cleaned around the furnaces, and the metal separated from the remains, weighed and placed to the credit of the melter. There must of necessity be a loss in the coinage of money, owing to the number of processes through which it has to pass, and an allowance by law is made to the weigher and refiner. The loss by act of Congress in the entire process of melting from first to last, is fixed at 1 oz. to every 1,000 oz. of gold, and 1 oz. to every 1,000 oz of silver. This was supposed to be about the ordinary wastage. Mr. Martin, however, has shown that the allowance is too great, although in his case it makes no difference to the government. In some of the mints, however, the practice has been to return none of the allowance to the government, and I have heard that it was only necessary to be superintendent of a certain mint for a year or two to accumulate a handsome fortune on a salary of $3,000 or $4,000 a year. Mr. Martin, since he has been in office, has done his part of the business of coining with less loss than was ever known before. He took charge of the melting and refining department on October 17, 1874, and a settlement with him was had on June 30, 1875. The total value of the bullion worked during that time was $48,052,903.76. On this the legal wastage or limits was $52,229.67. His loss on gold was $545.26, and on silver he had an excess of $371.66. The net loss, therefore, was only $173.60, and the government was saved $52,056.07. A "melt" of gold contains about 2,950 ounces, and of silver about 1,600. The ingots, when ready for the coiner, are tor $20 gold pieces 1234 inches long, 134 inches wide and one half inch thick; for eagles, half and quarter eagles, for half dollars, dimes, &c., the bars vary according to the size and thickness of a coin. The comer takes these ingots, or bars, and runs them between two heavy cynnders, which reduces the large gold and silver bars to strips 3% feet long, 11/2 inches wide and quarter inch thick. They are then taken to the annealing furnace and placed in long copper pipes and heated to a cherry color, then cooled in a tank of water, then broken down again, and their length materially increased at the expense of their thickness. Again they are an nealed, then greased or waxed, and are finally ready to be punched out. The long strips are passed into a machine which cuts out of the band of gold or silver blanks the size of the coin desired, These may be described as gun-wads, since the manner of cutting them is so similar. The machine is a very powerful one, and punches out the blank coins as easily as a shoemaker uses his punch. One machine can cut about 20,000 pieces a day! The blanks are then turned over to a room full os women, who adjust the weight. Each woman sit. before a small scale into which each piece is placed. The scale weighs to the thousandth part of an ounce. If the piece is too heavy the woman files it a little if too light she rejects it, and it is remelted. Each woman wears a leather apron into which the filings go, and they are thus saved. When the blanks are land owners and others interested in real estate. Special adjusted to their proper weight, they go to the milling machine. The milling does not, as generally supposed, consist in corrugating the edge of a coin like a file, but in raising the edge on the two sides of a coin. This is done by passing it through a very ingenious machine, and the gun-wad is still smooth on its edge and surraces, with a raised line on each side bordering its edge. Again it is annealed to make it soft and malicable, for otherwise it would be brittle and fly to pieces. Only one process is now left to complete the coin, and this need take only a moment to describe. The finishing is done by one machine, which seems to me to be the perfection of mechanism. It is called the coining press, and there are six of them in one room. One is unusually handsome in appearance and immense in size. It is used exclusively on double eagles, and happened to be at work With one motion of the machine the coin was struck on both sides, and the file edge placed around it, and so perfect is its working that the the only sound heard was the clicking and jingling of the perfect coin as they tell, about 60 a minute, into the sheet iron box beneath. Its motions are not unlike those of a printing press, but its power may be imagined when it is contrasted with the latter, which prints on paper, while the former em-bosses on metal. The blank coins are placed in an upright tube connected with the press, and a pair of agile iron fingers slip one coin at a time from the bottom and push it under the stamp, which contains the die for one side of the coin, the reverse being on the "bed." The lever comes down with a force that would crush railroad iron, and yet without noise, and the same agile fingers that push the blank coin under the stamp push the finished coin out. This press weighs 18,000 pounds, and cost a dollar for every pound. Its pame is Ajax. When the coin is finished, it is delivered to the treasurer in be accurate to the weight of a grain. The coin is Office and Shop Opposite Summit House, not counted until it is paid out over the counter. The deliveries to the treasurer are termed drafts,

Dr. Linderman has not yet decided at what point he will recommend the location of the new mint authorized by the last congress. There is a lively scramble for it on behalf of St. Louis, Chicago, Omaha, Kansas City and Denver. The chances seem rather in favor of Chicago.

"You've pinned it back," he cried with grief, Much farther than you'd orter; Your stomach stands out in bold relief— My darter! oh, my darter!"

mines in this vicinity. PROF. A. WEENAAS, of the Minneapolis Lutheran seminary, is in the city. Quite a number of Scandinavian youths from here are attending his school. GEN. W. T. SHERMAN is expected to visit this city next week. So the Chicago Journal says.

YESTERDAY morning a long-haired, thicklybearded stranger entered a Griswold street barber would." He removed his hat, drew a big navy re-volver, cocked it, and sitting down in a chair with THE Northwestern Hotel at Marquette is filled a revolver in his hand, continued: "Now, go ahead! If you ask me to have my hair cut, or say that I have dandruff, or cut my chin, or ask me to buy your hair restorer, I'll shoot you dead in your tracks!" The barber didn't say one word while shaving that man .- Detroit Free Press.

A Joke.—Considerable sport has been occasioned during the past ten days by the antics of unfortunates who have taken seats on the boxes in front allow the free motions of needles. When a victim had been induced to take a seat on You are a citizen of what country? United States, a box, and had become deeply interested in discussing the case of sheriff Benedict, one of the clerks would give a vigorous pull to a string in the store. By a singular coincidence, at the very moment that string was pulled one of those needles would be projected through one of the holes bored, and would puncture the person of the individual who happened to be sitting there and talking about the sheriff. When the man jamped up and began in an mission at the Catholic church in the city two weeks | excited manner to quote extracts from the ancient authors, the experiment was considered a success, and a look of calm gratification stole over the faces of the lookers on.

On Thursday, April 1st, Dennis Murphy, a Syracuse compositor, who is at present sojourning in Rome, while necessary repairs are being made in his liver, went into a neighboring store and bor-rowed a circular piece of zinc, which he arranged in his costume in such a way that when he sat down and quietly placed his hardware on a box, over one of the needles already described. As he sat there in conscious innocence, teiling the boys how his uncle, on snow-shoes, once chased a deer one hundred miles on a Fourth of July, in Mexico, Johnny, who is always willing to interest his friends, gave a vigorous pull on the string.

The Syracuse typo went on with his story. The telegrapher pulled again. The Syracusan did not respond, and the telegrapher went out and looked at him with considerable awe.

Murphy kept on, and Johnny went back and jerked that string until the needle rattled against the zinc, and passers-by thought Murphy had got a tel-

THEY ARE NOT MASONS .- A correspondent asks if Beecher, Tilton or any of the jury on the Beecher trial are Masons. Beecher and Tilton are not-with the jury we are not acquainted. We could tell by trying them or by looking over the records of all the Masonic Lodges in the world, if we had time to thus give. Our correspondent can find out just as easy as we can. Masonry has no foothold on the Beecher trial. When profane men are guilty of unmasonic conduct the order has nothing to do in the way of interfering. If Beecher and Tilton were good masons there would have been no such trouble between, them for the good mason never robs another mason of his jeweis. If they were masons but not good ones, their troubles would have been settled in the Lodge room by men of wisdom, and the world would have never been insulted as it has been by this trial. As a mason we are all glad to know that Beecher and Tilton are not members of that order. As a Democrat we are glad that they do not affiliate with our party. Adultery, seduction, fornication and such crimes against families and societies are more than com-mon in church societies. The paroxysmal kisser leaves off his dalliance with other men's wives, to sit on the edge of despair and watch the effect of the ruin he has wrought. It is seldom that churches punish such sacrilege of the inner temple. Masonry hews to a straighter line-teaches and enforces better morals than does the church. The seducing minister is petted, feted and protected by his church. The mason who wrongs another mason or who debauches his wife, dies. The mason is first taught principles. He is educated in the lodge to know that sin brings penalties-to understand why he should protect the honor of his brother mason. found a difficult thing to walk out and sit under the He is lifted to and works upon a cleaner platform than is taught by any church creed we ever heard of or knew of in this country. RISE up, Mr. H., and tell us what has become of that bet made three years ago and to be decided in 1875.

company's mine on section nineteen, adjoining the Saginaw, was started last week, and, we learn, works satisfactorily.

THE total shipments of the Cleveland mine up to the 10th, not including ore sent to local furnaces, foots up to 65,970 tons-the Republic being a few hundred tons ahead.

No. 2 stack of the Pioneer furnaces was relighted last Saturday and filled with ore on Thursday. She will probably make the first iron on her new hearth this morning.

THE Keystone has shipped another cargo of ore, this time from L'Anse. We learn from Mr. Wheeler that the mine is improving, and that a fair profit will be realized on this season's product.

WE are informed that Mr. C. G. Collins, of the Ontonagon & Lake Superior Silver mining company, has a force of men at work upon that property getting out vein rock, and that in all probability the above company will be next on the list with a silver brick.

For the information of those who are anxious te know, we desire to state that the Bacon we fried last week was never employed in any capacity either at the Cleveland or McComber mines. Don. Bacon is a miner who understands his business and his employers' interests.

THERE is a rumor to the effect that work is to be commenced immediately upon the Menominee range railroad. Considerable work is being done at Sturgeon, on the proposed new line, in the way of clearing streets and platting the town site.

the Spurr Mountain Iron Mining Company such a furore as that which followed the diswas held at its office in Detroit on Thursday | covery of the big bonanza on the Comstock. of last week, and resulted in the unanimous But here it is something new, and creates election of H. N. Walker, Dr. L. H. Cobb and scarcely a ripple of excitement except among Wednesday, Aug. 11th, 1875 : Freeman Norvell, of Detroit, and Moses Taylor | those directly interested, and who see "millions and Raphael Pumpelly, of New York, as di- in it." However, we can afford to wait. With rectors for the ensuing term. At the meeting | the tests before us there is no reason to doubt of the directors, held subsequently, H. N. the very great value of the Iron river veins, Walker was re-elected president, and Freeman and that sooner or later capitalists will be at-Norvell secretary and treasurer.

IF parties who have silver stocks which they wish to dispose of would place the same with Messrs. Mathews & Longyear, it would enable them to do away with the street brokerage now so prevalent and injurious, not only by those who have stocks to sell by creating so much competition and underbidding, but to the silver business generally. What we want is money, and to secure it we must go from home. If some responsible firm could control the local stock market the price could be regulated and kept up to a respectable figure, and stocks could be sold abroad at a better price and more readily than now. We know the Iron River silver district is rich, and we don't want to create wrong impressions abroad by offering our stocks for a price which is almost nothing compared to its real value. Messrs. M. & L. sell stocks the same as any other property, on commission.

ANOTHER TEST.-After another season of anxious suspense we are enabled to announce another test of the Iron river silver veins, the result of which is even better than was anticipated by the most sanguine owners of property in that region. The test was of four and a half tons of ore from the Scranton mine, which had to be hauled a distance of nearly five miles over an abominable road, which is mentioned by way of an explanation of the fact that more rock was not used. The ore or rock was taken at random, and without selection, from a pile of over fifty tons mined nearly two years ago, and from which the richest specimens had been culled by the many persons who have visited the mine, as was the case at the Ontonagon. It is believed, moreover, and not without reason, that the rock loses much of its wealth of silver by long exposure to the weather, from the washing and crumbling away of the soft slate rock in which most of the native silver is found. The test, however, was a fair one, the quicksilver used being first purified by straining through buckskinthe members of the Scranton company being determined to arrive as nearly as possible at a true result, and the test being made more for the information of stockholders, and to determine the question of future operations, than for any other purpose. We regard it as conclusive proof of the great value of the vein, and feel confident that a test of the ore transferred immediately from the bottom of the shaft, at a depth of 300 feet from the outcrop, would show a very much larger yield. But should the latter not be the case, the fact still remains that the yield is above the average of the Colorado, Utah and Nevada veins, which is all and more than could reasonably be expected.

The Scranton mine is situated nearly two miles west of the Ontonagon, from the ores of which the first test was made, showing a yield of something over $33. The Superior will next be tested, and its ore having been mined with greater care than either of the others, we are prepared to hear of a result even more gratifying than that of the Scranton.

In this connection we desire to say to the croakers who have predicted the ultimate failure of the efforts being made to develop something of value in this new silver field, and who now assume that there is something wrong in these tests-that they were made, not for the purpose of forcing the stocks of the several companies upon the market, but that they were honest, legitimate tests, made for the sole THE new machinery at the Lake Superior purpose of arriving at a true knowledge of the value of the veins, by a gentlemau of experience, who, we feel assured, could not be prevailed upon to make other than a fair test and a truthful report. Had the investigations been prompted by a desire to bolster up stocks only, it is fair to presume the richest rock would have been selected, as could easily have been done, but which we know of our own personal knowledge was not the case. Aside from this, the principal stockholders in the Ontonagon and Scranton companies are not desirous of disposing of their interests in the mines. This is particularly the case with the Ontonagon share holders, the majority of whom reside in this city; and therein lies the difficulty experienced in obtaining sufficient capital with which to put in additional machinery and open the mine on a large scale. The present majority in interest are determined to retain the control, and capitalists will not buy unless a sufficient number of shares are offered to give them the management. All the stock now offered is about one thousand reserved shares, the money realized from which goes into the treasury of the company and not into the pockets of individuals. The Scranton Company has withdrawn from market all the stock reserved for working capital, and we can hear of no shares being offered except on the part of those whose L'Anse for this season, up to Wednesday, finances are in such condition as to force them | August 11th: to realize at once.

The effort to develop this newly discovered silverado is but a repetition of the history of all new mining districts. People are slow to believe in anything meritorious unless seen with their own eyes, and in this case the unbelievers are all found among those who have never visited and examined the region in question. The same discoveries and tests in one of the Rocky THE annual meeting of the stockholders of Mountain states or territories would create tracted by the promise of rich returns which further developments will certainly hold out to them-if indeed, they are not satisfied with the evidences already presented.

The following report of the superintendent of the works, giving the result of the first test, was mislaid and could not be found, or it would have been published at the time:

ONTONAGON SILVER WORKS, ) IRON RIVER, July 22, 1875. TERRENCE MOORE, Esq., Pres't Ontonagon Silver Co. : Dear Sir: - I respectfully submit the following brief report of the trial run just finished at the company's mill. The mill was put in motion on the 5th inst., but owing to difficulties incident to the starting of new machinery, the run was not completed till the 20th. The rock treated was a lot of twenty-two tons taken as it came from the mine. The result was 523 ounces of fine bullion, nearly 24 ounces per ton. Not having proper assay fixtures I could not determine its fineness and coin value, but I estimate it at 950 fine, and its currency value at $734.00. The mill is now in good condition, the only drawback to its efficiency being its smill capacity. A twenty-stamp mill could reduce the ore at less than half the cost per ton that this five-stamp mill can treat it for. Respectfully

F. W. CROSBY. Mr. Crosby is a gentlemen of rare experience and ability, baving been engaged for many years in the treatment of the silver ores of Colorado and other western districts, and is now part owner of a mill at Georgetown, Col., which is turning out, as we see by our exchanges, $2,500 worth of bullion per day. We have the most perfect confidence in his honesty as well as ability, and know that he would not append his signature to an untruthful state-

Mr. Crosby has also furnished Mr. Moore with the following detailed estimate of the "cost of treating such ores as those of the Ontonagon district," with works having a capacity of 40 tons per day of 24 hours. To reduce, he says, forty tons per day will require a 20-stamp mill. The cost of operating such a mill would be as

Which would be $2 80 per ton! "This," says Mr. Crosby, "seems like a low estimate, but it 'covers every item except interest on capital."

The cost of mining will not necessarily exceed $2 50 per ton, and this being the case it is easy for any one to arrive at a conclusion as to whether silver bearing rock which can be made The yield of the four and a half tons was 163 to yield from $30 to $50 per ton will pay to patience and persev rence, aided by a great deal of sysounces of silver 950 fine, equal to $45.27 per work. Taking the average of the two tests in getting four and a half tons of rock treated at the

will be seen that the net earnings of a twentystamp mill would be over $1,400 per day, or produced, without taking into consideration that, instead than one. over half a million a year. Mr. Crosby's estimate further shows that the veins would pay handsomely if the average yield of silver was not over $15 per ton.

BRICK .- We have been shown by Mr. Armstrong, agent of the L'Anse brick factory, a specimen of veneering brick, which is unques-Brothers, proprietors of the yard, seem to be now fully under way, and announce that their first quality of common brick will be sold at $8 per thousand, at which price a building may be constructed as cheaply of brick as of lumber. Although having had some ill luck with previous burnings, through the unskillfulness of employes, they are satisfied that the bed of clay in connection with their yard is of the best quality, and are determined hereafter to place none but the best brick in the market.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Hancock Jon	triu	u,

writing from Iron River, says: The agony is over as far as the Scranton men are concerned, the "test" is completed to their satisfaction, having been here three weeks, and by the exercise of much ton, coin value, or $50.70 per ton, currency. which have been made-$40 per ton-and it mill, which produced a brick of ballion weighing 163 no sound in his behalf, though it might have been without you. You will find good company here of twenty-two as stated, it took thirty-one tons of rock to produce the fine brick that is now being exhibited in New York by the president of the Ontonagon Silver company, The rock from the Scranton mine was taken from the drift 300 feet from the shaft, and may be regarded as a fair test of the value of the vein in that mine. This company mean business, as they have no stock for sale themelves, nor do they know of a "friend that might spare a little." If it is good, they are prepared to work it themselves, and on that point they are now satisfied, and have tionably equal to the very best. Woolliscroft taken their brick and gone, thoroughly disgusted, no doubt, with the delays and humbug to which they have been subjected during their stay at Iron River. Next week the Superior folks make their test, and a good result may be expected, for they are carefully washing and sorting all the rock to be stamped-and if you hear that it goes one hundred dollars to the ton don't be surprised. After the Superior gets through, the Collins will try their hand. I don't know whether they intend to "sort" or not, but will inform you when I get posted.

> The Journal correspondent is evidently not in love with the Ontonagon company's management, and his prejudice leads him to a misstatement of facts. The mill was started on wall rock for the purpose of scouring the stamps, pans, etc., but to our certain knowledge not over 22 tons of vein rock were treated at the first test. Mr. Crosby, the superintendent, whose reputation is at stake, says so over his own signature, and we have seen the memorandum kept by Mr. Broadbent, of the Scranton company, who kept tally of all the ore that went into the stamps. In reference to the unmistakable lack of good management at the works, the correspondent is not far wrong.

Several Washington correspondents of prominent newspapers assert that the suits against fraudulent whisky dealers, now pending on account of the recent extensive seizures, will not be prosecuted. They are confident that Grant, or those who are very influential with the administration, will cause the removal of Secretary Bristow ere long and the matter will be allowed to "rest." These writers support their opinion by the views of men of considerable note and a strong array of facts, and the matter should be carefully watched by the

MR. JOHN McCLARTY, who was in charge of the gas works of this city for upwards of four years, and is now superintendent of the West Pittsburgh gas works, Pittsburgh, Pa., has recently patented an apparatus for manufacturing illuminating gas from petroleum in any shape. The beneficial results arising from the use of this process in connection with coal are such as to be apparent. He asserts that 40,000 feet of good illuminating gas may be manufactured in twenty-four hours with one "bench" of three retorts, and that one man is capable of easily operating three or four benches at the same time. He also claims greater cheapness for the gas thus manufactured, which is in itself the best recommendation for the apparatus.

DR. A. J. B. JENNER, of Detroit, is in trouble. It 27th of April last. After the honeymoon had waned and the pair settled down to "business," the good doctor found it necessary to exercise a little wholesome restraint over the actions of his wife, which he did by spreading her beauiiful little Grecian nose all over her countenance with his fist, her head under water while she was engaged in taking a bath. It may seem a little strange, but the amiable woman really got angry about it, and has brought a suit for divorce.

Says the Lansing Republican:

Certainly the Marquette MINING JOURNAL has shown democratic leanings, and one of its publishers was for four years (1869 to '72) a leader of the democratic minority in the house of representatives.

Most certainly the MINING JOURNAL has never shown anything of the kind, and the Republican cannot put its finger on anything that has appeared in its columns since 1868, that will warrant such an assertion. It is true the writer of this-the present sole editor and proprietor-is a democrat; but he has never written for, or published a line in, its location where he could publish a journal devoted to some other specialty than politics, and since establishing himself here has steadily and persistently abstained from the discussion of political questions, editorially, though claiming the right of every other citizen to express his views on the stump and at the polls. Upon second thought, perhaps, we are mis. taken in saying that the MINING JOURNAL has never discussed political questions-it has been and is now a firm advocate of protection to American manufactures; but we apprehend the Republican will not claim that fact as an evidence of "democratic leanings." For five years previous to the first of July last, the Mining JOURNAL was published by a firm in which republicans were partners, and one of the express stipuations was that the paper should never engage in the discussion of political questions-and it did not. It has never advocated the election of any man to office-the nearest it came to doing so was during the last senatorial contest, when it published the

The senatorial question is just now the subject of discussion with the political press of Michigan. The editors of this paper are not both Republicans, but if the one who isn't understands himself, both prefer Mr. Chandler to any other Republican in the State.

J. Webster C. is a clever, honest, well meaning granger, torty lots are spoken for. but altogether too Child-ish to properly represent the varied interests of Michigan in the U. S. Senate. So steadfast have we been in our non-political course, that last fall when Senator White, our own townsman, was being lauded by all the papers in days. We have heard that some parties from Marthe Upper Peninsula, with the exception of the Menominee Herald, the MINING JOURNAL uttered plies. Come along, you Marquetters; we are lonely ounces-a much better yield than the "Ontonagon" rock | excused for advocating his claims for more reasons

The Republican credits us with too much. We have never had the misfortune to serve more than one term in the legislature; and we did not aspire to the leadership of the minority. The Republican is conversant with our course as a legislator; can its editor point out any instance in which our course was prompted by partisan motives-except, perhaps, a single hopeless vote we gave for Walker

Credit us with being a democrat, if you please: but, at the same time do us the justice to admit that we do not carry our politics into our businessthat the MINING JOURNAL is now, and always will be, while under our control, strictly and exclusively non-partisan in character. Whatever may be the allegiance we owe to the party with which we have always acted, that party has no claims upon the ser vices of our paper-no more than it has a right to demand that the democratic tradesmen shall sell nothing but democratic wares to democratic men,

THE Hancock Journal has the following account of a horrible affair at Red Jacket: "One of the most atrocious crimes which we ever heard of was perpetrated in Red Jacket on Tuesday of last week. It seems that a little girl, seven or eight years old, a daughter of Louis Zweiger, was sent out by her mother between 4 and 6 o'clock in the afternoon to look after a cow. There were other children with her, and they went toward the swamp just north of the village; not finding the cow, the other children came away soon after, and left the little girl to hunt her un alone, and at 6 o'clock, seeing that she hadn't returned, her brother was sent out to look for her. He went to the place where she was last seen, and not seeing anything of her he called and shouted; received no answer he isturned. home without her, when search was again made, which resulted in finding the body about 4 o'clock the following morning in a pool near the Calumet dam by a friend of the family, who regarded her death as the result of an accident. Early in the forenoon an inquest was held before Justice D. T. Macdonald, and a verdict of accidental death rendered, but afterwards supicions were aroused as to the correctness of the verdict when a post-mortem examination was ordered, and made by Dr. Osborne, who found a bruise on the right temple and finger marks on both sides of the neck, and so seriously bruised and otherwise injured as to leave no doubt that the child was ravished and then murdered. The jury after being recalled and the facts laid before them, brought in a verdict in accordance with the above testimony. The village authorities have offered a reward of three hundred dollars for the detection and apprehension of the brute who committed the outrage, and quick justice will be meted out to him should be place himself within reach of the excited popu-

THE BLAIR PROCESS AT CLEVELAND.—The Cleveland (Ohio) Trade Review says: "There is some prospect of inaugurating an enterprise in Cleveland, which, it carried out, will add greatly to the importance of its iron metallurgy. It relates to the manufacture of iron and steel direct from the ore, without the use of the blast furnace or the all comes of getting married, which he did on the process of puddling or cementation. The enterprise is in the hands of a few leading gentlemen of spirit and capital, who are giving the subject thorough study, and investigating the work as done at the Blair mill, in Pittsburgh, and they will probably at an early day make a decided move in the matter. The advantages of this process are crucifying the flesh with a riding whip, and holding great enough to at once command the attention of all iron manufacturers. The cheapness and simplicity of the plant, the very greatly reduced expense occurring from the absence of blast and puddling furnaces, and the greater likelihood of obtaining pure iron by reason of the fact that the reducing temperature is not great enough to carry the impurities with the fron, are features which must commend themselves with the greatest force to all iron men. We hope our Cleveland friends will succeed in speedily accomplishing all they

FROM IRON RIVER.

IRON RIVER, August 7th, 1875. To-day the Ontonagon Silver Mining company's mill completed a test of four and one-half tons of columns, in advocacy of the principles or candidates | rock from the Scranton silver mine, which yielded of his party. He came to this county in search of a 1114 pounds of bullion. This is another evidence of the value of the veins in this district. I regard this a fair test; the ore was selected with a view to give the general average of the vein, while that treated from the Ontonagon mine furnished the poorest portion of the vein. It will be remembered that for two years past specimens of the very best quality have been sought after and taken away by visitors; also, that the Outonagon ore being the first treated in the new pans, a large portion of the amalgam remained coated to the metal and was not reported in the report of test.

On Monday, the 9th, the mill will commenced a test of the Superior Silver Mining company's ore, which, I think, will give a large yield.

Some few days ago a man and boy called at this port on their way westward. The man, I should judge, has traveled through this troublesome world for about thirty years, while the boy appeared to be only about fourteen or fifteen years old. They went on their way after a short stay here. A few days later a party from here were coasting along the shore and overtook the same man, but the boy had changed his pants for a more becoming costume. [To the Editor.]

MARQUETTE, Mich., Aug. 9.-In your issue of August 7th I find a quotation from the Chicago Journal, in which the names of Adams and Stafford are given undue prominence. Your comments on the same are a gross, and without evidence to the contrary, I must believe a malicious misrepreser tation of the facts. There are but three persons from whom you could have got any information as to the facts in the case, and I cannot believe that either of them would make any such misstatement as you

The facts are, that W. L. Wetmore, the president of the Marquette & Mackinac railroad company, was the only person connected with said company that had any appointment with Mr. Joy to meet him in Chicago. Believing the matters to be brought up at that meeting of great importance to the M. & M. R. R. Co., as well as to Marquette generally, Mr. Wetmore insisted that such of the resident directors as could leave their business should accompany him. Accordingly, Messrs. White and Pickands, and my self-all directors in said company-went with him to Chicago; and, as for myself, I had no other business in that city that would have taken me there at that time. I was present at the meeting with Mr. Joy, by request of Mr. Wetmore, as were also Messrs. White & Pickands. As far as the credit of which you speak is concerned, I ask for none, and care for none, and hope never to receive any through the columns of the MINING JOURNAL while under its present management; and I am greatly surprised that you should credit me with having been sent for by four such eminently practical men as Messrs. Joy, Wetmore, White and Pickands, in order to get my opinion of the cost of ties, having never made a railroad tie in my life. This was a grave error, which you will, doubtless, make haste

As to the "quiet assumption of importance, laughing stock," &c., that is all right, as your "piece" could not have been completed without something of this kind.

You make one truthful statement in your comments; that is, that Mr. Stafford never gave anyone authority to use his name in the connection in which It appears in your quotation. There were only two persons besides Mr. Stafford and myself that were in the least affected by the misstatement that appears in your quotation, and outside of those two persons-Messrs. Joy and Wetmore-it is a matter of perfect indifference to me what is thought, said, S. ADAMS.

Accompanying the above communication was a private note referring us to the three gentlemen mentioned as being present in Chicago at the time. We have no desire to do Mr. Adams any injustice in these columns, whatever may be our personal relations, (the tone of his letter foreshadows what those relations are-on his part) and our item was not written until after we had conversed with all three of the gentlemen he refers to. It is proper to add, however, that neither of them had any intimation of our intention to make an item of the matter; but the question of veracity is one between Mr. Adams and his references. Nor must Mr. Adams hold us responsible for what he is pleased to call "the misstatement that appears in your (our) quotation" from the Evening Journal. If he had continued his letter far enough to tell us how, and through whose instrumentality that "misstatement" appeared in the Chicago paper, he would have conferred a favor and perhaps thrown some light upon the subject. D.d he not call at the Evening Journal office, in person, and did not the editor or reporter of that paper obtain the information upon which the article was based from Mr. Adams himself? Or does Mr. Adams mean to say that the Evening Journal writer lied about the matter? He certainly obtained his information from somebody, and Mr. Adams himself exonerates everybody else.

About our item being a malicious misrepresentation. We simply corrected what Mr. Adams himself admits to have been a misstatement, and which he, if not himself responsible for it, should have been the first to correct by a communication to the paper in which it originally appeared. The only question he can properly raise is as to whether he authorized or gave to the Evening Journal the information which led to the misstatement being made. If he did not, his quarrel is with the Evening Journal,

With all due respect to the superior wisdom and ability of Mr. Adams, we suggest that there are other parties than those he names who were, or may be, affected by the Evening Journal's misstatements, the responsibility for which he has neglected to disavow. It was a publication which, whether true or false, ought not to have been made, and one which was calculated to work mischief only, by placing Mr. Joy in a delicate if not false position with the company of which he is president. And if the negotiations then and there had result in nothing-if his efforts to secure assistance in building the road fail, the fact may be ascribed to the false position in which he was placed by the Evening Journal publication. We happen to know that not only Mr. Joy, but those who had the conference with him were annoyed and chagrined at the publication, not because of the undue prominence given to any one, but because they feared that it would work an injury to the project in hand. Taking this view o' the matter, every person who feels an interest in the building of the road is affected to just the extent Mr. Adams' ill-advised interview with the Evening

Journal may affect the project for good or bad. Of course, Mr. Adams, our columns are always open to those who may feel aggrieved by anything we may have written and published. They will open wide for any account you may have to give of I

The only difference between the boys here and those that interview with the Evening Journal reporter of Oshkosh is that the Oshkosh boys wear wings however much bad blood you may display in its eight gallon keg as he used to, and he smashed in the

DETHE old adage that murder will out, seems about to be again verified. Bill Forrester, a Joliet convict, has given a version of the Nathan affair which aside from placing any particular confidence in his own truthfulness, is eminently plausible. He was, it will be remembered, once held upon the charge himself, but was acquitted. His | promising than ever. version is that the "job" was done by professional "cracksmen" who "stood in" with the police, the latter to receive share of the plunder, but that the murder of the old man Nathan was not dreamed of at the time, and was the result of a sudden impulse on the part of the burglars-He claims that it was the contemplation of this which hurried superintendent of police Jordan to his grave, and is now ruining Capts. McCord and Kennedy by driving them to drink.

That package containing $47,000, which was recently stolen from the United States treasury and about which Treasurer Spinner has had so many quakes and | time qualms, has been accounted for. A clerk named B. B. Halleck, who was one of Spinner's particular pets, has confessed to having abstracted it, but claims that he was instigated to the act by W. H. Ottman, a saloon-keeper. Ottman has been arrested, and as he is possessed of property sufficient to cover the loss, the stolen money will be made good. Spinner was greatly surprised at the duplicity of his pet. "To think," says he, "that the boy would have taken the money when I thought so much of him and trusted him so; dear me, I'll be damned if the ways of God are not mysterious in unravelling sorrow."

The kind of tock that is now used for top dressing our streets soon becomes disintegrated, whereas if the city procured a rock crusher a much better quality of stone could be used and a more durable street I would advise that an examination be made into the subject of a rock crusher, as I think it will be of great benefit to our city. Respectfully yours, E. M. SPALDING, City Surveyor.

THE STOLEN WILL.

The clock struck six just as the painting of the cabinet was completed, and the painter was deseending the step-ladder. The following persons ad witnessed the first act in the performance of Uncle McTavish's eccentric will: Prof. Garth, Mrs. Carth, his wife, Lucy McTavish (niece of Uncle McTavish on his sister's side), Mr. Townsend, the hawyer, and the new man-of-ail-work, Patrick Igo. John McTavish had died some weeks before. In his will be directed that a certain paper, which be had carefully kept hidden under his pillow throughout his long illness, should be upon his decease, locked in the top drawer of the yellow cabinet in Professor Garta's study, to remain there seven years, when it should be opened and read and its directions tulfilled. The cabinet should be regularly painted every year, and kept in periect repair. The witnesses above named were requested to assemble at the ceremory, and one person should be studiously excluded; that was Uncle Tavish's nephew on his brother's side, Frank. Him he had

"Well," said Pat, the new servant, a red haired and red bearded native of the "ould sod," to whom the proceedings had evidently appeared a species of necromancy, "I'm glad it's over, and I hope the old gentleman's mind is at peace.' "Are you excited, Lucy?" asked Mrs. Garth, a tall, stern lady, of the niece. "I must confess that I am," returned Miss Lucy, a slight, pretty girl. "I would give the world to know the contents of that paper!" and her manner confirmed her words. "And I not a penny," sighed the professor.

"Of course not?" snapped his wife. "You take no interest in anything outside of your rubbishy physiognomy books and Lavater stuff! Much good will your studies in that direction ever do you. hiere's even Pat, who came here yesterday, in a fever over this old man's strange will.'

"Dade, and I am sure," said Pat. "Well," remarked the lawyer, "the directions have been fulfilled. That is something, at any rate.' "Yes; and so, Pat, put up the ladder and go about your work," added Mrs. Garth.
"Where shall I put it, ma'am?"

'In the waste room, next to Miss Lucy's." Pat and the ladder disappeared, and the painter having been paid, at once followed. The evening passed very pleasantly. Mrs. Garth and the lawyer played chess in the parlor, Lucy sang at the piano, and the professor continued to read in his study till half-past nine, when he joined them. Sometime after ten Mrs. Garth went through the house to see that everything was secure. The parlor had been deserted at ten. The maids had retired earlier still; Pat was gone; the basket of silverware which he bad cleaned stood on the table. Mrs. Garth took charge of this, according to enstom, and then immediately went to her room. It was then a quarter to eleven o'clock, and she was positive that no one was still below stairs. Her last act had been to look into the study. Everything was just as it had been left by the doc-

All this being the case, it was rather surprising to and, next morning, when the painter re-appeared to obtain one of his tools, which he had accidentally left in the cabinet, that during the night the cabinet kad been unlocked, and the sealed paper written by John McTavish abstracted! Who had committed so skillful a robbery? The lawyer advised the sending for a detective. He came by the midday train-a short, stout, dark man, named Porter-and under his auspices a strict examination was made.

The drawer of the cabinet was so high that it could not be reached by the tallest man except by means of a ladder. This was the only conclusion that Porter could arrive at-that a ladder had been used. Mrs. Grath declared that the room was the same in every respect as she had left it. The professor, be- if you have to do it yourself. ing a nonentity, was not called upon to say anything. Shortly it followed that Lucy McTavish was only person in the house who had an actual interest | will please to consider this question settled. in the contents of the sealed paper-and the stepladder had been put into the room adjoining hers.

She appealed to them all, "Lucy," said Mrs. Garth, "I knew your cousin Frank was a scapegrace—the companion of rogues of all sorts-but I thought you a lady.'

But all the while the professor had been examin-ing the room, the furniture, the wet wall of the cabinet-everything, down to the minutest shred of lint on the floor.

"Lucy is innocent," said he, suddenly, and rmly. "Bring me the step-ladder and I shall They pooh-poohed his offer; but he resolutely persisted, and at length Pat brought the ladder. He mounted it.

"Now," said he, "you, Mr Porter, have over-looked an important circumstance. What do you observe here?" He indicated two punctures in the wall of the freshly painted cabinet, very near the top. "You see there are two cavities, both directed downward. Now, I maintain that there was no ladder used at all; but the thief elevated himself to where I now stand by means of these two There was a general titter at the absurdity.

"Laugh, if you please, but listen," answered the professor. First of all, we know the cabinet was robbed between half-past nine and a quarter to eleven o'clock—I know it, at any rate, and so you will presently see. The thief, being too short to reach the top drawer—as he knew before he entered he room-preferred to use, instead of a ladder, which was not available, except at the risk of waking Lucy, means just as good and nearer at hand. He employed a chair and a stool." The professor descended and went over to a blue velvet chair, on which was some sawdust-just a

"This is the chair he used. On it he placed an ettoman-this ottoman," he continued, taking up the largest in the room, "for here is an open seam in the bottom, as you perceive, out of which dropped the sawdust. He wore shoes on which there was red clay; he had crossed the stream, during the day, between here and the village, because this red clay is peculiar to the locality only. Mounted on the ottoman and chair, he found his position unsteady. He could not touch the wall tor fear of leaving the marks of his fingers on the fresh paint, but he had provided for that. He had brought along a common two-prouged fork. This he stuck in the soft wood, which accounts for the holes, and steadled himself by the handle. He held on, as we perceive, with the right hand, because he intended to use his left; therefore, he was a left-handed person. Now, examine the holes closely, and we see faint red marks, most probably of blood. But these last two days have been days of abstinence with us, and we have had no meat in the house, therefore, the fork must have been some one eise's and not one of ours, or these are not marks of blood at all. On stricter investigation I find them particles of red dust—in short, common brick dust. From this I understand that the thief was a servant, in the act of burnishing the knives and forks, when the thought struck him that with and forks, when the thought struck him that with one of his forks he could mount the cabinet as I have described, and open it. That he did so is shown by the fact that he instantly suspended his work, leaving the dust still chinging to the prongs, which communicated the same evidence to the painted wall. This must have been done before 11 o'clock last night, because at fitteen minutes of eleven the silverware was in my wife's hands and counted by her before she went to bed." All were listening breathlessly-one, rather uneasily. The professor, with a smile, proceeded, being again on the ladder.

"The thief was not used to the room, for he needed a light. He had now but one hand at his service, and taking from his pocket a match, he scraped it upon his knee, thus proving that he was a man, for no woman could have done that. It was a wax match, for here on the shelf of the cabinet I perceive, as you all may, small splashes of wax, just on a level with my chin as I now stand. This shows he held the burning match between his teeth while, with skeleton keys, he unlocked the eabinet and seized the paper. He was a man with a large monstache, for it caught fire, and here we find on the shelf several burnt hairs. It was a false moustache, for, as it was burning his face, he pulled it off, which caused these hairs to drop out. We see they are red in color, but, on closer examina-tion, I find the color a dye. Evidently, therefore, the man had dyed his bair, and in doing so thought it prudent to make the color of moustache and hair exactly similar. There was no barber in the village, so the man must have performed this dis-guise before he came to it. The only arrival by the stage yesterday was one man-and that was Patrick Igo-which proves conclusively, I think, that Patrick robbed the cabinet."

There was a general exclamation of astonishment. Every one turned to the Irishman—now Irishman no longer. He had pulled off his red beard and moustache, and Lucy recognized him in spite of his dyed red hair.

"Cousin Frank!" she cried, shocked.
"Correct, Lucy," said the young scapegrace.
"The professor has found me out sure enough. I was determined to discover what was in that sealed paper, and by a rather clever trick succeeded. I ommitted the theft exactly as the professor has described. I read the document from beginning to end before I went to sleep last night."
"And what was in it?" almost screamed Mrs.
Garth, her curiosity rising above every other emo-

"Here it is. Examine for yourself."

She opened the paper with trembling fingers. The sheet was perfectly blank.

"A hoax!" she exclaimed, enraged.
"A hoax," said Frank. "He was very eccentric, And that was all. Mr. Porter, the detective felt a hall, Thursday, August 5th. Considerable business Rambling through the city, to pass away the time, I heard the following story; I'il give to you in rhyme.

Julia was blessed with beauty, wit and grace, And poets loved to sing her sweet and charming face. Before her altar, lo! a numerous train Preferr'd their vows, yet all preferred in vain, Till charming Florio, born to conquer, came And touched the fair one with a new-felt flame. The flame she felt, and ill could she conceal What every look and action would reveal. With boldness then which seldom fails to move, He pleads the cause of marriage and of love; The course of nuptial joys he rounds, The fair one's eyes glance pleasure at the sounds. The youth open his knees enraptured fell; Then strange misfortune, oh! what words can tell. Tell, ye neglected sylphs who lap dogs guard, Why snatch'd you not away your precious ward ! Why suffered you the lover's weight to fall On the ill-fated neck of much loved Ball ? The favorite on his mistress casts his eyes,

Gives a melancholy howl and-dies.

Her eyes are fixed on guilty Florio first,

On him the storm of angry grief must burst;

That storm he fied. He loves a kinder fair,

Who's kind affection no other puppies share. Personal. - Geo. Cobb, and family, of Cleveland, Ohio, are in the city visiting their relatives here. HON, W. H. BARNUM, Lime Rock, Connecticut,

He said he had al-ways supposed they made band wagons water tight, but in less than ten seconds there was not a dry thread on him. A flash of lightning revealed the fact that he was under one of the elephants. He got out from under that elephant probably suddener tuan most men, but was immediately confronted by a female equestrian, with nothing on but some rosin on her feet. She told him to go way from there, and he said if she would hold her elephant he would emigrate. Smith's hair turned grey in a single night, and he got out and made tracks for Bostwick's Valley. When the lights went out the chief of police pro cured a torch and went around searching for the killed, wounded and missing. Approaching the dressing room a woman screamed, "Go away with that light, I have not got a rag on me." Mr. Hatch said, 'Madame, do not attempt to terrify the police in that way. We are inured to danger, schooled, as it were, to witness harrowing scenes. Do not mind me, madam, I am near sighted." She said she didn't care a dam. She said she couldn't afford, for $60 a month, to perform more than was on the bills, and begged him to lend her something to put over her. He said all he had was a pair of spectacles, and she was welcome to them. He came nearer, and after made hosts of friends both here and wherever they gazing into his mild blue eye, she jumped behind a camel and said, "Confound you, you are not near sighted at all." He sighed and went away, a sadder if not a wiser man.

> THE KING AND THE MAIDEN .- The King was visiting the village school, and when the examination was over he spoke to a bright little girl named Christinchen:

"Little maiden, you said your poem so well that I am sure you go to a very good school, and have an excellent teacher; so I must examine you a little : To which kingdom does this orange belong?"

"To the vegetable kingdom," said the fittle maid, without a moment's delay, while Herr Schunke could scarcely keep on his feet from anxiety and "And this?" taking a bright gold piece from his

THE TRANS-CONTINENTAL ROUTE, ETC. This great corporation now operates over two theusand (2,000) miles of its own road, and has "running arrangements" over nearly eight hundred miles of road owned by nents" over nearly such thurdred miss of road owned by other Companies. Taking Chicago as its starting point, the various lines owned by this Company radiate north, north-west and west, like the fingers on the human hand. With one line it reaches MILWAUKEE, FOND DULAC, GREEN BAY and MARQUETTE. With another it runs through MADISON, the capitel of Wisconsin, ELROY, and to ST. PAUL and MINNEAPOLIS, Another of its lines struckes far across Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and terminates in Central Dakota. Still another runs from Chicago through ELGUN and hOCKFORD to FREEPORT, and with connections there for Minnesota, and terminates in Central Dakota. Still another runs from Chicago through ELGIN and hOCK-FORD to FREEPORT, and with connections there for Galena, Dubuque, etc. Still another line of this corporation runs northwardly through JANESVILLE, FORT ATKINSON, WATERTOWN, to Fond du Lac, and beyond. However, the greatest and most important of the roads of this company, is their Omaha and California line, or as it is called, "THE TRANS-CONTINENTAL ROUTE." This last named is the Pronger line between Chicago and the Pacific Coast, and form the OVERLAND ROUTE. This line is the shortest rail line between Chicago and Omaha. The track is of the best steel rail, and is well ballasted, and as free from dust as a road can be made. The bridges are strong and durable, and all the appointments are first-class in every respect. The trains that run over this road are made up of elegant new Puilman Palace Drawing Room and Sieeping Coaches, built expressly for this line, luxurious, well lighted and well ventilated Lay Coaches, and pleasant lounging and smoking cars—all built by this company in their own shops. The cars are all equipped with the celebrated Miller Safety Platterm, and patent Buffers and couplings, Westinghouse Safety Air Brakes, and every other appliance that has been devised for the safety of passenger trains. All trains are run by telegraph, and are so regularly on time that one could safely set his watch by their arrivals or departures. In a word this GREAT LINE has the best and smoothest track, and the most elegant and comfortable equipment of any road in the West, and has no competitor

He states further that on the morning of the murder Hanton had assaulted the prisoner with his fist, knocking him down and using insulting language, and that Hanlon, even after being stabbed, drew a capstan bar and felled him to the deck, after doing which, he immediately fell back and expired. The prisoner, William Astrup by name, is a Dane, 28 years old, and resides in Cleveland, where he has a wife and child dependent upon him for support. He is somewhat deaf, and it is thought that owing to this peculiarity he trequently imagined without cause that he was being maligned by Hanlon, and brooded in quiet over the injustice of his tormentor. He bears about his head and person numerous wounds and bruises inflicted, it is alleged, by the victim Hanlon and the second mate, Mike Smith. Thomas Hanlon was, as far as known, a single man, and this was his first trip on board the Fayette Brown, he baving shipped at Cleveland some ten days previous to the fraces. The depth of the wound was about six inches, and in its passage the blade partially severed the great aorta. The prisoner exhibits considerable teeling at his unfortunate condition, and is a man of marked intelligence and respectable address. Cyrenius P. Black, prosecuting attorney, conducted the ex. amination on behalf of the people, and Messrs. Cochran and Cochran have been retained for the defence. Hanlon had no bar in his hands from the time he struck the prisoner with his fisc at the capstan until after he was stabbed; they did not clinch before Hanlon was stabted; they had not gone more than six feet from the place where the affair began until Hanlon was stabbed; I saw Hanlon bleeding before I went for the doctor-he was then sitting down; I heard Astrup hallo when he was hit with the bar; he did so when Hanlon hit him, and also when smith hit him; I saw the knife on the deck when Astrup was reaching for its after he had fallen; I had seen the blood from Hanlon at this time : the mate came from torward : the cook was getting breakfast, and the captain was in bed when I went for the doctor; when I went for the doctor the captain was looking out from under the canvass in his nightdress; I did not see Asthil touch a bar after he left his bar in the capstan; Smith took a bar and hit Astrup; I did not see a bar raised by any other man before Han-Ion was stabbed; Hanion took the bar he struck Astrup with off the deck; I don't know if it was the bar he had been heaving on; it was usual for the bars to be lying loose about the capstan; Astrup was directly towards the starboard side of the vessel; Hanlon was behind him; Hanlon was stabbed a little forward of the capstan on the starboard side; when Astrup struck Hanlon he had his hand up and was rushing torward towards Hanlon; it could not be over a minute from the time Astrup shook his fist until the stabbing took place; I heard no angry words between the parties before that morning; nor did I know of any ill-feeling between them before; I did not know of Hanlon or any of the crew making fun of Astrup at any time before that; a sheath knife is from six to'seven inches long; it is carried in a sheath at the back; it is usual for satiors to carry knives without points, but Astrup's knife was pointed; they are made without points, but they can be got with points; I saw Astrup on deck that morning; Hanlon was considerably larger than Astrup; I only knew Hanlon since we left Cleveland, and I noticed nothing ugly about him; Astrup acted as secend mate on the trip before this; I remember there was a lattle difficulty between Astrup and Hanlon before they went to the capstan; they had been passing the line inside the mizzen rigging, and the second mate ordered that it should be passed outside the rigging : Hanlon asked Astrup if he could not do as he was told, and Astrup said he wanted none of his lip, or that he would give him something he would not like; then they left the line as it was and went to work at something else; this was about tiree-quarters of an hour before the other affair took

THE result of the election in the Fourth ward on Tuesday last, which was held for the purpose of filling the vacancy caused by the removal from the ward of alderman Hursley, was as follows: Thos. Smith, independent, 35; Samuel E. Byrne, democrat, 46; Sidney Adams, 118. It will be recollected that Mr. Adams was defeated for the office of supervisor in the same ward last spring; and his name was not announced in connection with the office alderman until the morning of election day, last Tuesday. He was very active securing votes during the day, employing the services of two carriages and several men. He was also ably assisted by alderman Fraser from the Third ward, who stood zealously at the polls during the day offering tickets to the wayfaring man, who, even though a fool, might not err therein. It is with the keenest regret that we notice to-day the death of Mrs. Harriet H. Ely, wife of Samuel P. Ely, Esq., of this city, which occurred at Paris,

Returning to Rome on the homeward journey, Mr. Ely remained there some time, when, his wife's health began to fail. Growing worse, he moved her first to Switzerland, and finally to Paris. brain, and was so treated. Mrs. Ely's sufferings were intolerable and unceasing. Her busband took the most tender and entire care of her, never leaving her room for three weeks at a stretch, and finally, about the middle of July, removed her to a water cure. The effect of this treatment seemed to be very beneficial, and Mr. Ely was encouraged to lay plans for his own return home, rendered necessary by business affairs. He telegraphed for his daughters to sail for Zurope to take his place, which they did. Meanwhile Mrs. Ely suddenly grew worse and died-before her daughters reached Paris. The meagre details which we have are from cable telegrams, and only reached us on Monday last. Mr. Ely, with his usual thoughtful courtesy, did not forget to send the editor an apology for discontinuing his letters to this paper, which he promised to resume "as soon as his wife's health should be restored." It is now, we humbly trust and pray, fully

They will never forget her, and their sympathy and prayers will follow the bereaved family-that the remaining ones may be safely restored to each other and their native country, and that the gentle hand of Time may speedily erase their sorrow.

MASONIC EXCURSION.-We understand efforts are being made by the masonic fraternity of this place for a grand excursion, to come off as soon as the arrangements are perfected and a suitable steamer procured. The steamer will leave Marquette on the arrival of the morning train from the west, thus allowing ample opportunity for parties from along the line of the Marquette, Houghton & Ontonagon railroad to participate; arrangements will also be made so they can return home the same evening. On Friday last, while the schooner J. F. Card was in the neighborhood of Whitefish Point, she was struck by a severe gale, which carried away everything above decks and rendered her almost a total wreck. She was taken in tow by the propeller Annie L. Smith, and although leaking badly, probably reached her destination in safety. Two sailors who were in the rigging at the time were washed away and drowned.

THE furious storm of the past week has had the effect of considerably reducing the number of entries and clearances at this port, as well as the shipments of ore and pig
