City Brevities

Today's weather: Generally fair; stationary temperature.

Yesterday's temperatures: Seven a. m., 75 degrees; noon, 82; 7 p. m., 86. Maximum, 93 degrees; minimum, 65.

Mrs. F. C. Proctor, of Pequaming, was a Marquette visitor yesterday.

A. F. Brackett, of Norway, was in Marquette on business yesterday.

Miss D'Ooge, of the Normal faculty, left last evening for her home in Ypsilanti.

Mrs. Gehrand and son left last night to spend the summer in southern Wisconsin.

E. W. Allen and daughter, Marjorie, left yesterday afternoon for an Eastern trip.

Mrs. J. T. Gibson and Merle E. Gibson, of Amasa, spent yesterday and Monday in the city.

J. F. Anderson, clerk of the park, cemetery and street commission, has returned from a ten days' trip to Rock Island, Ill.

The members of the Marquette baseball team are requested to take the 3:30 o'clock car for the fair grounds to practice this afternoon.

The funeral of Mrs. Minnie Erickson will be held this afternoon, at 2 o'clock from the house and at 2:30 from the Swedish Lutheran church.

The funeral of Mrs. Emelie Caderette will be held from the French church at 9 o'clock Thursday morning, with interment in Holy Cross cemetery.

Misses Bessie and Mary McCarthy, who have been teaching in Ironwood the past year, have returned to spend the summer with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sheldis McCarthy. They are engaged to teach in Duluth next year.

Baseball Game—The Marquette second team will give a game at Fraternity Hall tonight, for which the Peerless orchestra will furnish the music. Admission will be fifty cents, a couple, extra ladies twenty-five cents.

Mrs. L. H. Drumney is in Milwaukee for a three weeks' visit.

Warmest Day of Year—All local temperature records for 1910 were smashed yesterday when the thermometer rose to 93 degrees. The minimum during the twenty-four hours ending last night at 7 o'clock was 75 degrees. The heat was accompanied by excessive humidity and little or no wind, which made it harder to withstand with comfort. Reports from Negaunee and Ishpeming, however, were that it was much hotter there, so much so that coming to Marquette was like stepping into a refrigerator.

Ordering Reserved Seats—Officers of the Marquette Lodge of Elks have received notice to send in their order for reserved seats for the parade in Detroit Thursday, July 14, and for the automobile parade the following day. Requests for reserved seats on either date may be sent to D. S. Donovan. The schedule of the special train from the copper country to St. Ignace on the Saturday preceding the convention has also been received. The train will arrive in Marquette at 11:55 a. m., and remain here for an hour to enable the passengers to get dinner.

Many Going to Escanaba—At a meeting of the Society St. Jean Baptiste, held Monday evening, great enthusiasm was displayed in favor of going to Escanaba in full force if possible next Saturday, to attend the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Institute Jacques-Cartier of that city. A special train will leave Marquette at 6:25 a. m. Saturday morning for the accommodation of all who wish to attend. The round trip rate will be $2.35, good returning until the first train north Monday morning. A special excursion train will leave Escanaba at 9 p. m. Saturday. The French people expect one of the largest celebrations ever held in this part of the country.

Fourth of July Program—Arrangements have been completed whereby Marquette and Ishpeming will play a postponed baseball game at the fair grounds the afternoon of July 4. The German Aid society will picnic at the fair grounds that day and an address will be delivered by Lieutenant Governor Patrick H. Kelley. Members of the Aid society will be furnished tickets to the ball game. It is expected that this combination of attractions will bring out a very large crowd. Euclid Magnus, of Boyne City, who is said to be a first-class first baseman, was expected to arrive in the city last night, and he will be given a try-out on the Marquette team. Magnus is an acquaintance of Mack and Clinton, both of whom speak of his ball playing abilities in the highest complimentary terms.

LETTERS HIDDEN IN BANK VAULT

Some New and Important Evidence Brought Out in Beddow Trial Yesterday.

What is considered by the representatives of the government as the most damaging evidence yet adduced in the trial of George H. Beddow was submitted in federal court yesterday, when two remittance deposit slips and accompanying letters that the books of the bank showed should have been sent to outside banks, representing credits of the Ironwood First National, were identified as having been hidden away in the vaults of the bank, where they were found after the receiver had been placed in charge. These papers were produced in connection with entries in the books of the Ironwood bank showing remittances to the National Copper bank of New York, which the New York bank never received.

The entries in the books covering these transactions were made by Beddow. One of the letters produced in evidence, said to have been found hidden away in the vault, was written by Beddow and the accompanying deposit slip by Larson, while in the other case, the letter was written by Larson and the deposit slip by Beddow. Carbon copies of the two letters were found in their proper place in the bank's files. The position of the defense with reference to these letters is that they were secreted in the vault by Larson, unknown to Beddow, who only made such entries on the books and wrote such letters as the memoranda received from Larson and Jahn required him to make, and that in these instances the defendant had no reason to suppose that the deposits were not actually sent, as the entries he made indicated.

Receiver Tillinghast was called to the stand early in the afternoon. The first question asked him by Mr. Clute was with reference to the safety deposit box found in the bank, to which Beddow still holds the key and which his attorneys claim in his personal property. Objection was promptly made by Attorney Riley, and the jury was excused while the question was argued before the court.

Beddow's Private Box Again.

In his argument to Judge Denison, Mr. Riley held that any evidence relative to the box was inadmissible, basing his statements on the constitution of the United States and several decisions of the federal courts bearing more or less directly on the point. Judge Denison held that the prosecution might introduce testimony tending to show that the box contained assets of the bank, but left the question of admitting the box as evidence or of compelling it to be opened undecided.

Mr. Tillinghast then stated that on one occasion he had seen the box open, it having been opened by Beddow shortly after the failure, and that he saw a note therein, signed by Lillian O. Beddow, which the defendant had said was the property of the bank. Mr. Tillinghast also testified that he had found nothing in the bank's record to indicate that Beddow had rented any private box.

On a cross-examination, Mr. Riley sought to show that the Lillian Beddow note, together with the note signed by the defendant, had been paid by another note of later date and a certificate of deposit, the sum of which was the same as the sum of the three notes. Mr. Tillinghast admitted that there was paper in the bank (such as it was) to indicate that the note he saw in the Beddow box had been paid in this manner.

Ex-Bank Examiner George E. Luther was the next witness. Mr. Luther closed up the bank at the time of the failure. He testified that after his attention had been called to the Stankle draft, concerning which so much testimony has previously been offered, that he called Beddow down to the bank. Mr. Luther said Beddow had said at that time that the draft was for stock purchased for him, which he could not pay, and that Larson had told him to fix it up by charging it to the Stankle account.

Mr. Riley took a queer tack in cross-examining Mr. Luther. He brought out that Luther was no longer a bank examiner and had given up that occupation shortly after the Ironwood failure. The witness was shown an interview published in the Ironwood News Record Nov. 9, 1908, in which he was reported to have commended the method of doing business in the First National bank. The witness declared that he had never made any such statements as were attributed to him. At this point, court adjourned for the day.

Mr. Clute states that it will take at least another day to complete the government's side of this case, and the defense expects that at least a day and a half will be consumed in hearing the testimony of their witnesses. Arguments of counsel and the court's charge to the jury follow the conclusion of the evidence, which make it extremely improbable that the case will be completed this week.

INSURE WITH PETER WHITE & CO

THEATRICAL.

Pierce Stock Company.

H. E. Pierce & Co., who will bring their associate players here for their initial engagement the week of Aug. 1, have made arrangements with the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic and the Northern Pacific railways, which will enable them to have the exclusive use of a seventy-foot baggage car for seven weeks, which will be of great advantage to them as a store house for the scenery that is not being used. The three plays that will be seen here on their first visit will be Robert Edson's greatest success, "Strongheart"; William Faverham's and Dustin Farnum's notable offering, "The Squaw Man," and another former vehicle of Robert Edson's, "Soldiers of Fortune," the same being a dramatization of Richard Harding Davis' famous novel of the same name. It would be impossible to get the scenery for these three productions on any stage at one time, so while "Strongheart" is being played, the scenery for the "Squaw Man" and "Soldiers of Fortune" will be reposing quietly in the new and modern car that will be utilized for that purpose. Thus it will be seen that it will only be necessary to have one production in the theater at a time, which will do away with any overcrowding of the stage, which often necessitates long and tiresome waits between acts.

WALL STREET STOCKS.

New York, June 21.—Paine, Webber & Co. say of today's stock market: "The trading was dull and featureless, with the price changes nominal excepting those railroads traversing the northwest, which were unfavorably influenced by the adverse crop reports. The pressure on Steel was said to be based on reports emanating from Washington indicating a pronounced desire on the part of many for a commission to be appointed to conduct an investigation of the corporation. A coterie of traders was said to be working for a recession, but did not succeed in dislodging much long stock. Until the various reports in circulation today with regard to the damage in the northwest are either refuted or confirmed, we would exercise caution."

Boston Stock Quotations.

Boston, June 21.—Today's stock market at Boston is summarized by Paine, Webber & Co. as follows: "The market opened firm. Lake and Hancock were the only active features, however. In the specialties there was good buying. Dullness continued throughout the session and the stocks left off about where they did yesterday, with the undertone fairly strong. What little change has occurred this week points to a higher level."

On account of the many questions of statewide importance that will come before the legislature next winter, the question of who will be the presiding officer of the house is of great concern to those interested in obtaining good legislation.

The speaker of the house has great powers. By his committee appointments he can further or obstruct legislation. He can have objectionable bills smothered, or he can force committees to report on measures, even if the members are hostile to them.

At present there are two candidates for the speakership, and a third may possibly enter the field. Colin Campbell, of Grand Rapids, speaker of the house, wishes to succeed himself, and under ordinary conditions he would be the logical candidate. Campbell was somewhat of a czar during the last session. At one time he aroused an aggressive insurgency which finally forced him to abandon some of his dictatorial tactics.

Campbell has a fight on his hands for re-election, and it is doubtful if he returns to the house to become a contestant for speaker's honors with his old enemy, Herbert Baker, of Cheboygan. Baker, who has served several terms in the house, had his eye on the speakership during the last legislature. Governor Warner and the administration favored Campbell, and Baker laid low, hiding his time. It soon came. The disregard and contempt shown by Campbell in relation to the new constitution, when a number of representatives who helped to frame it sat in the house, gave Baker an opening, and he led the insurging forces against the speaker. In this attack he was ably assisted by Representative Wirt Newkirk of Washburn, also an aspirant for the speakership, and Representative Louis C. Trampson of Lapeer, now candidate for congress in the Second district.

Baker is a farmer and a granger. He is a member of the executive committee of the state grange, and as such, is the logical representative in the house of that great body of Michigan farmers. During the last session of the legislature he organized the "Farmers Club," composed of members who follow agricultural pursuits. This organization, with its forty members, was the subject of many jibes from the representatives who were not initiated in the mysteries of the club. The organization soon became a factor in legislation, and Governor Warner placed the executive parlors at the disposal of the members, and the club used them as a meeting place.

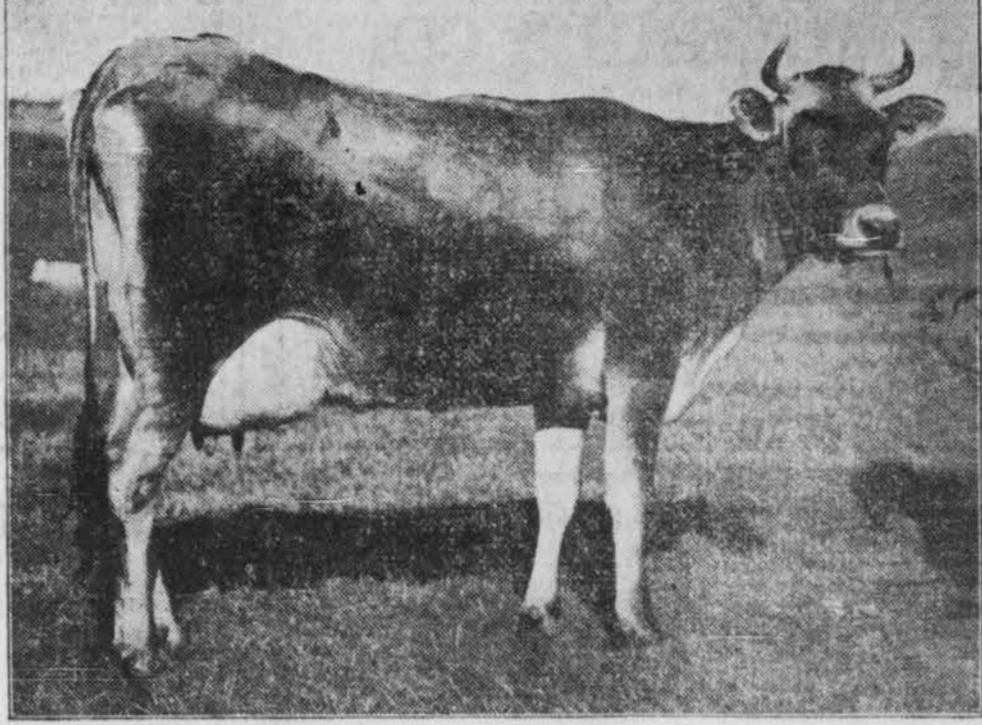

Baker is favorable to Chase S. Osborn. Should the upper peninsula man be elected governor, Baker's speaker, there is no doubt that the interests of the farmers of Michigan will be well taken care of. But while having the success of the grangers at all times at heart, Baker is broad enough not to allow the enthusiasm of some of the radical members to injure the legitimate manufacturing and commercial interests of the state.

Campbell is friendly to Kelley and has used his influence to further the candidacy of the lieutenant governor. He is a good parliamentarian and strictly honest. He is a brilliant speaker, quick at retort, and with his magnificent physique and strong voice, attracts attention on any legislative floor. Local political conditions in Kent county, his legislative district, make his election uncertain. If he is elected, he will be a formidable opponent to Farmer Baker.

Should he be defeated for speaker, he undoubtedly will become the floor leader and as such wield a powerful influence on all legislation.

SPEAKERSHIP FIGHT ATTRACTS ATTENTION

Campbell and Baker are Opposing Candidates—Both Are Now Seeking Votes.

Lansing, Mich., June 21.—(Special)—On account of the many questions of statewide importance that will come before the legislature next winter, the question of who will be the presiding officer of the house is of great concern to those interested in obtaining good legislation.

The speaker of the house has great powers. By his committee appointments he can further or obstruct legislation. He can have objectionable bills smothered, or he can force committees to report on measures, even if the members are hostile to them.

STREET RAILWAY. City Council Will Try to Secure New Route for Street Car Line.

The matter of removing the street car track from Iron street is still unsettled, but the council has taken steps to secure for the Marquette County Gas & Electric company the privilege of extending its line along the north side of the Chicago & Northwestern right-of-way from a point immediately north of the Cyr street crossing to Jackson street.

At the conference between the councilmen and Mr. McCorkindale held Monday evening, the city officials decided to apply to the management of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway company for the privilege of extending the line over the route mentioned. Mr. McCorkindale said that he would be perfectly willing to make this change, but he can see no advantage either for his company or its patrons in changing from Iron to Jackson streets.

The city officials believe that they will come to an understanding with the Northwestern and street railway people within a week or so, when preparations will be made for the commencing of the pavement work on Iron street.

BOYS ROBBED OF HERITAGE

Rev. W. Byron Forbush, in Addressing Normal Graduates, Declares Youth of the City Do Not Have the Chance That Is Afforded Their Country Cousins.

Parents Have Given Over the Moral and Spiritual, as Well as the Educational Training of Their Children to Public Schools, Declares the Speaker.

Before a good-sized audience composed largely of relatives and friends of the graduates, the eleventh annual commencement exercises of the Northern State Normal school were held in the opera house yesterday morning at 10:30 o'clock. On that occasion, sixty-six young men and women who have satisfactorily completed various courses of study received diplomas entitling them to teach in the public schools of Michigan.

The musical part of the program maintained its high standard of excellence. The piano duet, Grieg's "Daybreak," was played with good taste and feeling by Misses Helen Withey and Ruth Brotherton. The Normal semi-chorus sang the number from the opera Lucia di Lammermoor, "Land of Freedom, Land of Fortune" in a most acceptable manner. The violin number, "The Souvenir," of Franz Dradla, was played with marked delicacy of expression, which called forth an encore to which Miss Hadley very graciously responded.

A Marquette audience again had the pleasure of hearing Mrs. Alton True Roberts' powerful interpretation of music. Not only her friends but the public as well appreciate her generosity in giving so graciously of her great talent. The three songs sung by her were gems, which brought out to an unusual degree the sweetness and beauty of her high tones and also the lightness and facility necessary to the context.

The address to the graduates was delivered by Rev. W. Byron Forbush, pastor of the Woodward avenue Congregational church of Detroit, who took for his subject "Education of Princes." Dr. Forbush has made a life study of boys and their problems and delivered a forceful, instructive and interesting address. Briefly stated, his line of argument was that the urbanity of present day civilization has resulted in parents giving less personal attention to the intellectual, moral and spiritual development of their children, thereby throwing a greater and, in fact, impossible burden on the public schools. He said in part:

"All boys are princely, not only because they have princely opportunities but because there is something inherently princely in just being a boy. The agility and exuberant optimism of every normal boy are the envy of his elders. Then again, a boy is royal because of the princely work he has to do. Anything in our modern educational or industrial methods which tends to deaden boyish exuberance is wrong.

Teachers Have Hard Duty.
"It is the duty laid upon teachers to educate the coming princes of America, a duty made more difficult because of the change which has come over the life of the country in the last fifty years. How different are the American homes of today, as compared with those of a hundred or more years ago? In olden times the boy was raised in the home and his parents were also largely his teachers and priests. The boy worked with his father and learned to do all the different kinds of work about the pioneer home or farm. Nowadays, the father is frequently away from home all day and the mother, too, has emancipated herself from many of the home duties which were formerly expected of her.

"Now there is no longer that close championship between father and son and mother and son that formerly existed, and the boy is turned over to the school to be educated. Very frequently practically all the education the boy gets, intellectual, moral and spiritual, is what he gets in the school room. The result is that the boy is not getting that manual facility and manual alertness which he formerly obtained from constant association with his parents. The home has abdicated its pedagogical and priestly functions to the school and this is a condition that vitally affects the problem of educating our boys and girls. The rush to the cities has caused a change in the American mind. The country boy of years ago heard or saw but a very few things which constantly re-appeared before him and so became indelibly fixed on his memory and in his being. The city boy sees a continually changing succession of objects of interest, from which he gets no distinct impression of anything but an indistinct and confused idea of the whole, without anything in particular fixing itself on his memory. What in the country was a panorama in the city is a kinetoscope. "For this reason, the city schools do not have the kind of children to teach that are enrolled in the country schools. There is something lacking in the city child and the world owes it to him to restore him to his country heritage.

Square Pegs in Round Holes.
"Again, boys frequently drift into their life work by accident and choose their occupation without regard to whether they are by nature fitted for that kind of work. The teacher should stand between the boy and his future, and see that the round boy gets in the round hole and the square boy in the square hole.

"The colleges of this country have changed as well as the homes. In years gone by, few boys went to college and most of those who did go went at great sacrifice, on their own part and also of their parents, and went to college determined to make the most out of their opportunities. Today, many boys are sent to college and like most things that come easily, boys are apt to consider that they have little business there except to get as much fun out of the process as possible. The money spent in educating this kind of boys does not usually bring value received. However, the opportunity afforded by four years in college is there just the same for the boy who really desires to avail himself of it. The dilemma of modern education is to find the school that will actually fit any given boy to face the actual problems of life. Some such training he must have, or otherwise he fed into the hopper of some corporation to be discarded when his usefulness is gone. "The change in the home life has resulted in parents abdicating the moral education of their children to the school and Sunday school. The church and Sunday school get but 40 per cent of the boys and girls. Where are the other 60 per cent to get their moral training? Teachers should endeavor to impart ethics and morality. About three-fourths of our life is devoted to bringing up children. The only place where any systematic effort is made to study the child is in the Normal school. "The school alone can never solve the problem of fitting the child for life. The school must be aided by the parents. There is need of a return to the simplicity of the home; the home must get back to its former functions and perform its part in the intellectual, moral and spiritual education of its children. The problem will be solved by complexity of sacrifice and service."

UPPER PENINSULA CONCLAVE. Knights of King Arthur Held Enthusiastic and Successful Meeting.

The upper peninsula castles of the boys' semi-secret order, Knights of King Arthur, were well represented at the conclave held with Castle Marquette Monday afternoon and evening. The occasion was of particular interest because of the presence of Dr. W. Byron Forbush, of Detroit, the chief merlin and founder of the society. In the afternoon a baseball game was played between Castle Marquette and Castle Ishpenning which was won by Marquette by the score of 16 to 0.

At 5 o'clock eighty boys in uniform filed into the Guild Hall, where an open conclave was held, to which a number of the parents and friends of the members had been invited. At this meeting, Dr. Forbush gave a very interesting address, in which he explained the aims and ideals of the order. Rev. Howard Ziegler, of Ironwood, also spoke at this session.

Supper was served to the members of the order by the Young Woman's guild at 6:30 o'clock, and at 8 o'clock a provincial or secret conclave was held, at which reports from the various castles were received and other matters of business were considered.

Castles of the K. O. K. A. have been organized at St. Ignace, Sault Ste. Marie, Munising, Marquette, Calumet, Houghton, Negaunee, Ishpenning, Ironwood, Chassell, Menominee and Crystal Falls.

WILL HAVE MODERN OFFICE. Work to Be Started Today on New Mining Journal Counting Room.

Work will be begun today on the new Mining Journal counting room, which will be located on the street level, in the room now occupied by F. J. Crawford as a labor shop. While the repairs and changes are being made, Mr. Crawford will have his office on the second floor of The Mining Journal block, after which he will move into the present Mining Journal office room, which, however, will be extensively remodelled.

The new office of The Mining Journal, when completed, will be modernly equipped and furnished, with special attention to the convenience of the company's customers and patrons. It will contain a vault, a tile floor will be laid, and the furniture and furnishings will be in bank style of quarter-sawed oak. The present office, later to be occupied by Mr. Crawford, will be cut down to the street level and made into a room about twice its present size. These changes and others will give Mr. Crawford an office and store room in keeping with his high class and steadily increasing business.
