

YOUNG WOMAN WAS CALLED

MISS GLADYS STARRINE DIED SUDDENLY AT HOME OF PARENTS LAST NIGHT

Suddenly stricken with an affection of the heart Miss Gladys Starrine, a popular young woman of the city with a host of friends throughout Escanaba, passed away last night at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Starrine, at 1402 Wells avenue.

Miss Starrine had been suffering from a slight affection of the heart for the past few weeks. In the past few days it was thought that her condition had greatly improved. On Thursday afternoon she visited the Northern State fair and appeared to be enjoying excellent health. Yesterday morning she did not feel as well as usual and early in the afternoon her condition became critical. Physicians were in attendance at the home through out the afternoon and everything possible was accomplished to save the life of the young woman. Shortly before 9 o'clock she passed away.

The announcement of the death of Miss Starrine will come as a decided shock to a host of people throughout the city. Many of the friends and acquaintances of Miss Starrine did not know that she was ill and her sudden taking away will sincerely shock many people in all parts of Escanaba. Miss Starrine was a graduate of the Escanaba high school and after attending normal school for a year, served as a cadet kindergarten teacher in the public schools throughout last year.

Because of the poor state of her health she did not return to her regular work at the opening of school this fall.

She was 21 years of age and is survived by her parents, one brother and two sisters.

Funeral services over the body will be conducted on Tuesday afternoon.

WILLIAMS LIKES REVISED RULES

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 20.—"I believe the changes in the rules will be satisfactory to all concerned and will improve the game," said Dr. Williams while discussing the football situation at Minneapolis.

"Four tries to make ten yards will undoubtedly result in the development of the running game and will make it easier for the offensive team to advance the ball."

"The inside kick, which always has been fraught with danger, has been eliminated. This played to spread out the defensive backfield and the doing away with it looks like a wise move. The need of the inside kick will hardly be felt this year because the elimination of the twenty-yard zone on forward passes will allow passes to be made as far up the field as the offensive side can get men to receive the ball. The shortening of the field and the incidental creation of the ten-yard zone behind the goal line extends the possibilities of the forward pass. As a result it will be possible to make a touchdown by means of a forward pass. The fundamental idea of this ten-yard zone rule is to prevent the defensive back from closing in as the ball is rushed toward the goal line and thus make it easier to gain inside the twenty-five yard line. This will make it more difficult for the defensive side to make a stand in the shadow of its own goal line."

"The general tendency of the change will be to strengthen the attack and develop the running game, making more touchdowns possible. I believe the changes will lessen the element of chance and eliminate fakes in large measure. It seems that the better team will have more of a chance to win this year than formerly. From the standpoint of the spectator the game will be just as spectacular as heretofore and the running game will make things more interesting. There will be less likelihood of games resolving themselves into kicking duels when evenly matched teams meet."

PICKED UP WITH EVERY BONE BROKEN

Chicago, Sept. 20.—Carl R. Rasmussen, twenty-three years old, an employee of an express company and a prospective bridegroom, was killed today in a spectacular fall or leap from the top of a fire escape on the nineteenth floor of the Masonic Temple. The plunge carried the man across a twentyfoot alley and he struck on the roof of an adjoining building, several hundred feet below. Every bone in his body was broken.

Rasmussen was engaged to marry Miss Florence Bigderman of Libertyville, Ill., according to his friends, and the ceremony was to have been performed in a few weeks. The young woman was overcome with grief when informed of Rasmussen's tragic death and declared it was an accident.

At the coroner's inquest the jury returned an open verdict, being unable to decide from the testimony whether Rasmussen leaped from the building with the intention of committing suicide or accidentally fell.

Geo. Helm of Bark River was in the city yesterday on business.

VISITOR SURPRISED WITH EXHIBITS

E. F. Quintal, Proprietor of the Green Bay Business College has been in the city for the past two days. Mr. Quintal came here specially to make inspection of the farm products exhibition at the Northern Peninsula State Fair, and was greatly surprised at the great variety and superior quality of all farm exhibits. This coming from a man of Mr. Quintal's experience is convincing proof that the Northern Peninsula is an ideal farm and fruit country.

PROGRESSIVES FIRED GUN

FIRST MASS MEETING OF BULL MOOSE PARTY HELD IN ESCANABA LAST NIGHT

Dr. John R. H. Latchaw, of Chicago, former president of Findlay college, last night opened the National Progressive campaign in Escanaba at the city hall before an enthusiastic audience that partially filled the city hall. Dr. Latchaw is a convincing speaker and many of the points made by him in the address of last night were enthusiastically endorsed. Dr. Latchaw paid but little attention in his address last night to the Democratic party, referring only to the doctrine of tariff for revenue only but devoted the greater portion of his time to an explanation of the platform of the Progressive party and in attacking the Republican administration. Dr. Latchaw severely reprimanded President Taft and the Republican convention that nominated him in Chicago and gave individual attention to a number of the planks in the platform of the Roosevelt party.

Dr. Latchaw told the meeting that he had devoted his life to the study of practical economics and that while he was speaking under the direction of the National Bureau of the Progressive party, he was not a hired campaign spellbinder by any means.

The speaker took up the platform of the party, and discussed it in part, paying particular stress on the initiative and referendum and the right of the people to regulate their own domestic institutions in any way they might see fit. He touched on the right of the people to have a voice in electing their servants freely, advocating the extension of the primary system and also emphasized the right of the people to guide and control their officers after they have been elected.

The Payne-Aldrich tariff bill was attacked and President Taft's endorsement of it in his Winona speech was mentioned by the speaker as the last straw that was needed to sever his connection with the Republican party. The Democratic doctrine of "tariff for revenue only" came in for a similar treatment at the hands of the speaker.

The Aldrich currency bill was characterized as the greatest legislative menace the country had to fear as the establishment of this commission, with its executive committee of nine, would place the entire control of the country's finances in the hands of nine men or rather of five men as five could dominate the committee.

Dr. Latchaw concluded his remarks by likening the Republican party to the old moon, soon to pass into eternal darkness, the Democrats to the new moon, giving no light while the Progressives were the "full moon," where under the full orb of light of the whole truth all can find place to stand.

VISITOR IS ENTHUSIAST

BUFFALO MAN WHO ATTENDED CANADIAN EXPOSITION MAKES COMPARISON

Fred A. Mason, of Buffalo, N. Y., who recently attended the Canadian Exposition at Toronto as a representative of the Buffalo Chamber of Commerce, yesterday was the guest in the city of G. T. Stephenson and during the afternoon visited the Northern State Fair.

Last night Mr. Mason said: I have been coming to Escanaba for the past 20 years and my general impression of the surrounding district was that it was composed principally of sand, pine stumps and a stiff wind. The awakening that I received upon attending the fair this afternoon was nothing if not true. I am free to say that I am not a farmer but after visiting the exposition at Toronto this fall as the representative of the Buffalo Chamber of Commerce that I might make a comparison with that exhibit and the Pennsylvania state fair at Syracuse, I must say that the Toronto fair surpassed our fair in every particular and the products shown at the Northern State Fair in Escanaba, wholly outstrip many of the exhibits that I saw at the Canadian exposition. In Canada as you know a careful study has been made of agriculture for years and farming has been brought to a high state of perfection in many parts of that country and what I mean to say in comparing the exhibits here and those displayed at Toronto is that in proportion to the time that has been expended in agricultural work in this district as compared with that in Canada, Delta county takes the lead by a long margin. Delta county leads over the Canadian exhibits in potatoes and other root and garden crops by what I consider to be an immense margin. The interest that is shown in your fair here and the fine quality of your exhibits has convinced me that the Northern State Fair in Escanaba is destined to become one of the greatest institutions of its kind in the northwest."

BOATS WERE ON SAND BAR

The steamer Tomania with its tow, the Crete, ran on the sand bar off the south shore late on Thursday night and were held fast for several hours. The Romania finally worked herself loose and then pulled off her tow. A heavy fog covered the bay during Thursday night causing the captain of the Romania to lose his bearings and land on the bar.

ONLY A CITIZEN IF HUSBAND IS

If woman's suffrage is adopted at the November election, women not citizens will be seeking naturalization papers the next time thereafter an examination is held, provided of course they desire citizenship.

This raises an interesting situation, which is explained by Ferton A. Sturgis, naturalization examiner. When a woman marries, she assumes the nationality of her husband. Therefore any woman who marries an American citizen, whether he was born here or naturalized here, becomes herself an American citizen, regardless of where she was born. Therefore such women would not be forced to become naturalized, but would be permitted to vote if their husbands were eligible to the ballot.

On the other hand, if an American woman marries a man not an American citizen, she loses her citizenship. A case in point is that of the American girl who last week married a Chinese student at Ann Arbor. That woman, so far as citizenship is concerned, is a Chinese now, and could not vote if suffrage were granted, because Chinese cannot become citizens. On the other hand, should her husband die, her citizenship would revert to America automatically, without any process of law whatever, and she then would be permitted to vote.

In the case of unmarried women of foreign birth, they would have to go through the same process of law as a man in order to secure the ballot.

R. R. Kimball, general Agent for the Old Line Life Insurance Co., left last night for Wisconsin and will be absent from the city until Oct. 1. When returning to the city he will be accompanied by Mrs. Kimball.

MRS. I. KRATZE TOOK GUESSING PRIZE

Mrs. I. Kratze won the handsome fern offered by C. Peterson & Sons, florists, to the person guessing closest to the number of carnation buds that were enclosed in a jar at the firm's booth at the fair. There was a total of 1842 buds in the jar and Mrs. I. Kratze's guess was 1839, which was the closest guess to the correct number.

GLADSTONE SWEPT MEET

UPPER BAY CITY ATHLETES TOOK FIRST AND SECOND HONORS IN ALL BUT ONE OF PRINCIPAL EVENTS

Gladstone's entries in the athletic events at the fair grounds yesterday swept up all of the honors of the meet with the exception of a single event. The Gladstone athletes took first and second places in all of the running and jumping events and in the pole vault Corcoran of Escanaba took first place, while Kline of Gladstone was second.

The Gladstone athletes who swept up the honors at the meet were: Howard Nebel, Oliver Shampine, Roy Kline and Albert Nadden.

From the start to the finish of the meet Gladstone's athletes held the pole quickly eliminating local contenders in the running for honors early in the afternoon.

The only event in which the Gladstone entrants were seriously opposed was in the pole vault where Corcoran of Escanaba easily led and with the Gladstone lad landing in second place.

GLADSTONE WILL ACT

That the Gladstone city council plans to no longer delay action in connecting up the streets of that city with the new county road constructed this summer from Brampton to Chalson, is shown by the following from the Gladstone Reporter:

The matter of the North Hill contract came up at the meeting of the city council Monday night. W. L. Marble, president of the Gladstone Commercial Association, appeared before the council and recommended action. This matter has dragged on for more than a year. Last year money was raised to complete the city's part of the work, but it was not done, and this summer has passed and no action has been taken.

It is to the interest of every business man in Gladstone that something be done, as farmers in the vicinity of Perkins feel anything but pleasant over the way they have been treated, and they are even planning on a highway to Escanaba.

At Monday night's council meeting steps were taken to get bids on the work of grading from the city limits to the North Hill, and with this end in view, Alderman Murphy introduced the following resolution:

Resolved, that the city clerk advertise for bids, according to plans and specifications on file at the city clerk's office for grading the road from the city limits to connect with the hill now used. Bids to be in Sept. 30th, 1912. Motion declared carried.

SHOWERS AND COOLER TODAY

Cooler weather with showers is Escanaba's general weather prediction for today. Of general weather conditions Observer V. E. Jaki says:

The low pressure that covered the middle states yesterday morning, has developed into a well defined trough-like depression that extends from Minnesota southwest to Mexico, and has been attended by a slight rise in temperature over the Mississippi Valley, and general rains over the upper valley and Plains states and the Lakes. Over the northwestern states, the pressure has risen decidedly, and the weather become cooler, frosts again being reported this morning from some extreme northern mountain states. Showers may be expected in this vicinity tonight and probably Saturday. It will be cooler Saturday. The winds will be moderate variable, shifting to brisk west and northwest late tonight and Saturday.

BIG FAIR IS CLOSED

NORTHERN STATE FAIR CAME TO END WITH MONSTER CROWD IN ATTENDANCE

The second annual Northern State Fair, easily one of the most successful expositions of its kind ever arranged in the north country, came to a close at 9:30 o'clock last night.

All attendance records for county fairs in Delta county were broken yesterday afternoon when over 8,000 people from Delta county and all parts of the district, flocked to the fair grounds and made the undertaking a financial as well as a great industrial success.

Ideal weather conditions marked the forenoon and the afternoon but in the evening a heavy drizzle began that continued through the early portion of the night and slightly cut down the evening crowd at the fair.

While Sec. Strom last night was unable to issue an authoritative statement it is thought to be certain that the fair undertaking has more than broken even and that there will be a slight balance in the treasury when all accounts have been paid. With the establishment of such a record in the face of adverse weather conditions all of the fair officials are to be congratulated.

Escanaba paused yesterday to attend the big county show, practically every line of business being closed down for the afternoon to allow employers and employees alike to visit the fair. Visitors flocked to the city yesterday from all parts of the county and the surrounding district aiding in swelling the crowd to a point never before approached at a county fair in Delta county.

The excellence of the exhibits; the magnificent exposition building and the manner in which the fair was conducted excited the admiration of every one who attended the show. In spite of the adverse season, Delta county's soil productiveness showed (Continued on page eight)

DICKINSON MEN HERE

A party of five prominent Dickinson county men motored to Escanaba yesterday to attend the peninsula gathering of National Progressives that was staged here. All of the members of the party are men prominent in affairs of Dickinson county and following the Bull Moose meeting yesterday afternoon attended the Northern State fair and returned to their homes last night. The members of the party were: Louis J. Will, Iron Mountain; Frank Parent and Atty. J. C. Knight, Norway; Atty. T. C. Winegar and Dr. H. A. Newkirk, of Iron Mountain.

BUTTERS COMPANY STARTS OPERATIONS

Active operations by the Marshall Butters Lumber company, the concern that has taken over the project of the L'Anse Bay Lumber company at L'Anse, were commenced this week when the company put a force of men at work breaking ground for the foundations of the sawmill buildings. Two of the Messrs. Butters are in active charge of the operations.

The company has forty acres of land almost right in the village of L'Anse on the L'Anse bay shore. This land will be taken up by the mill buildings and lumber yards.

The company will also commence operations at once on the logging railroad that is to tap the immense tract of timber owned by the corporation. Four and one-half miles of this road will be completed by early winter so that logging operations may be commenced at that time. The company has established an office on the second floor of the L'Anse bank building and is planning aggressive operations in all departments.

The people of L'Anse are naturally greatly elated at the lumbering prospect. The Butters company will employ five hundred men almost from the start and it means a veritable boom for L'Anse. It will mean the employment of all of the available men in the village, an influx of new families, a new business era for a village that has been lying dormant for years.

The Butters mill will be a two band and resaw mill of the most modern equipment. It will have a capacity of 175,000 feet of lumber a day.

MANY PEOPLE GUESS PIGS' RIGHT WEIGHT

Louis Dault, of 511 Ludington street won the prize of $10 offered at the Escanaba Steam Laundry and Dye Works booth, for guessing the weight of two pigs that were shown at the booth. The weight of the two pigs was 110 pounds and 33 people who visited the booth guessed that weight.

To determine the winner of the prize offered at the booth lots were drawn and Mr. Dault was named as the winner.

BULL MOOSERS ORGANIZED

FOLLOWERS OF NATIONAL PROGRESSIVE PARTY FROM NUMBER OF COUNTIES IN PENINSULA MEET HERE

Representatives of the National Progressive party from several counties in the upper peninsula gathered in Escanaba yesterday and organized both congressional and district senatorial committees.

In addition, upon being advised that Atty. A. C. Cook of Iron Mountain, would be unable to accept the party's nomination for congressman from the upper peninsula, members of the congressional committee placed in combination for that office Pros. Atty. W. J. MacDonald, of Calumet who was consulted yesterday afternoon and announced that he will accept the nomination. Atty. MacDonald will join Dr. John Latchaw, who delivered an address in this city last, at Gladstone this evening where the Copper Country speaker will deliver one of the addresses at a mass meeting to be conducted at Swenson's hall.

The Bull Moosers in session here yesterday communicated with the National committee of the Progressive party yesterday and secured permission for Dr. Latchaw to remain in the peninsula for another week and conduct a general campaign throughout the district. Following are the dates to be filled next week in the peninsula by Dr. Latchaw: Manistique Monday; Sault Ste Marie Tuesday; Ishpeming Wednesday; Marquette Thursday; Iron Mountain Friday and Ironwood Saturday.

N. L. Field, of Rudyard, Chippewa county, was yesterday named as chairman of the congressional district committee for the National Progressive party and with George P. Shiras, of Marquette as secretary and treasurer. The members of the congressional committee are:

E. D. White of Rudyard, Chippewa county; Dr. William Elliott, Escanaba, Delta County; John D. Kerr, C. Almet, Houghton county; I. H. Hagen, Bessemer, Gogebic county; C. W. Bretz, Engadine, Mackinac county; E. R. Nelson, Ishpeming, Marquette county; Dr. J. R. Mitchell, Manistique, Schoolcraft county; are members of the committee for the counties named. The chairman and secretary were empowered to select members of the committee for the remaining counties in the district.

A senatorial committee was organized for this district as follows: O. V. Linden, Escanaba, chairman; J. H. D. Everett, Soo, secretary; Dr. F. L. Bright, Engadine, is the representative of Mackinac county on the body. The chairman and secretary were empowered to select members of the committee for Luce, Menominee and Schoolcraft counties. Atty. C. D. Symonds, of Stephenson, who was a candidate for the Republican nomination for senator from this district and was defeated by Atty. Wood of Manistique, was nominated by the Bull Moosers at the recent primary election but he has refused to accept that nomination and the committee will name the candidate for the Progressive party at an early meeting.

ROLLER RINK WILL BE OPENED TODAY

Peterson's roller rink will be thrown open to the public for the first time this season this afternoon when it is expected there will be a great outpouring of devotees of the winter sport. The local rink has been re-decorated and the floor made one of the best in the peninsula. The amusement place is opened this afternoon under an entirely new management with competent instructors in charge and with the idea held constantly in view of making the roller sport more popular than ever in Escanaba this fall and winter.

The rink will be opened on Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday evenings of each week and with matinees on Saturday and Sunday afternoons of each week.

VERDICT IS SET ASIDE

JURY IN UNITED STATES COURT ANSWERS SPECIAL QUESTION INCONSISTENTLY WITH DISASTROUS RESULTS TO MAN

Because a jury in the United States district court at Marquette submitted an inconsistent answer to one of two special questions that were submitted to them a verdict for $2,000 brought in by the jury in favor of Jerry Goodwill, of Escanaba, against the Escanaba Manufacturing Company, was set aside by the court and a verdict for the defendant company. The proceeding is a most unusual one and brought an unusual end to a case that occupied the attention of the United States court at Marquette throughout yesterday.

Mr. Goodwill lost one of his hands while operating a sifter at the local plant of the Escanaba Manufacturing Company and brought suit against the company for damages on the claim that the machine operated by him was defective. Two special questions were submitted to the jury and one of the questions was answered in the verdict consistent with the action of the jury in awarding the judgment while the other was in direct opposition to the awarding of a judgment and the court set aside the jury's verdict and awarded a decision to the defendant company.

COOK WILL NOT ACCEPT

In spite of the insistence of Bull Moosers in all parts of the district Atty. C. A. Cook of Iron Mountain has announced that he will be unable to accept that party's nomination for congress. The Iron Mountain Tribune Gazette says:

Despite A. C. Cook's refusal to be come a candidate for Congress on the Progressive ticket, announced in this paper several weeks ago, and reiterated repeatedly since then, the Marquette Mining Journal came out yesterday with a column article booming Mr. Cook's candidacy. It claimed that an alright Progressive organization had been completed in the Upper Peninsula and that Delta County politicians were especially anxious to get Mr. Cook into the race for congress. When interviewed this morning, Mr. Cook said that he positively would not run, that he was not out for office, and that those who gave publicity to the matter yesterday knew of the attitude.

OPPOSED EMPLOYES SIGNING AWAY LIVES

Lansing, Sept. 20.—About seventy-five employers of labor and representatives of industrial accident insurance companies gathered in Representative hall yesterday afternoon for a conference with the state industrial accident commission, to discuss certain phases of the new compensation system recently established.

In calling the conference to order, Chairman Kinnane of the commission described a system placed in vogue by certain employers, which he emphatically declared will be strongly opposed by the commission. Mr. Kinnane said that under the declarations which employes are required to sign on these forms, the workman virtually signs away their lives insofar as collecting damages for any accident incurred in their daily work is concerned.

The chairman denounced the proposed system as an attempt to evade the law and relieve employers of all responsibility for injuries incurred by their employes, stating that the commission will not allow the forms to be used.

Turning his attention then to other phases of the law, Mr. Kinnane discussed the cost of the industrial accident compensation system proposed under the law, and stated that over 3,000 firms have at present signified their intention of adopting the system, and declared that in his opinion, judging by experience, the new deal in industrial activities will not run in to high cost of some employers have feared.

A general discussion is to be had on various features of the work provided for by the act.

George Rheams and John Van Englefoot of Bark River, took in the Delta County Fair here yesterday.

SIMPLIFY THE PRIMARY LAW.

The next legislature will be asked to simplify and render more practicable the primary election laws of this state.

At the recent Wayne county Republican convention resolutions were adopted during the 1913 state law making body to improve and simplify the primary election laws by so changing the method of party enrollment that every man may have an opportunity to vote at his party primaries "free from unnecessary and burdensome formalities."

It is probable that the state convention, to be held in Detroit, September 24, will adopt similar, if not more specific resolutions.

It is the generally expressed opinion of both Republicans and Democrats, that the affidavit enrollment feature of the present primary law will be stricken out.

Alex J. Groesbeck, of Detroit, chairman of the Republican state central committee, favors giving the voters two opportunities to enroll each year.

once at the spring election and again on primary election day. He argues that by adding one more member for each precinct the election boards will be able to take care of the enrollment and voting on each of these days, and thus do away with much of the heavy expense now involved in carrying out the provisions of the law for enrollment of voters the first Monday in April preceding the August primary election and on the last Saturday in January of each year.

GOVERNOR EBERHARD IS PARTY'S CHOICE

St. Paul, Sept. 20.—With the closing of the polls on Minnesota's first primary election for state offices more than twenty-four hours away, returns throughout the state still are in a chaotic condition.

Two candidates in the Republican party, where contests really existed it practically is assured, have received the nomination. They are A. O. Eberhart, candidate for the governorship, and James Manahan, candidate for congressman at large.

Senator Knute Nelson is leading James Peterson of Minneapolis in a close race for the United States senatorship nomination, with the probability that the incumbent will be renominated.

Conceding that Governor Eberhart has won the nomination, Hugh Halbert, one of the Roosevelt leaders in Minnesota, today sent telegrams to Senator Dixon and Colonel Roosevelt concerning the advisability of placing a state Progressive ticket in the field by petition.

NOGI AND WIFE BURIED WITH SOLEMN CEREMONY

Tokio, Sept. 20.—The double funeral of Gen. Count Maresuke Nogi, supreme military councillor of Japan, and his wife, the Countess Nogi, who committed suicide on the night of Sept. 13, just as the body of the late Emperor Mutsuhito passed out of Tokio city on its way to the imperial tomb at Monoyama, was held today with impressive ceremony at the Aoyama cemetery in the presence of enormous crowds.

The funeral cortege left the Nogi residence in Akasaki, a Tokio suburb at 5 o'clock this afternoon and passed through the streets of the capital. The body of Japan's great warrior was borne on a gun carriage while the casket containing the body of the countess was carried in a hearse. The pallbearers were chosen from the highest ranks of the Japanese army and navy. One regiment of infantry acted as a guard of honor.

Decorations which had been bestowed upon Gen. Nogi by the ruler of Great Britain were carried in the procession by British officers.

Representatives of the special foreign envoys who came to attend the funeral of the late Japanese monarch and the president, ambassadors and ministers participated in the procession which altogether numbered upwards of 50,000 persons. Marching behind the coffins were great numbers of relatives of soldiers killed at Port Arthur while serving under Gen. Nogi in the spring of 1904.

The ritualistic ceremony at the great funeral hall was extremely impressive and was attended by immense orderly crowds. All the foreign diplomats had seats within the temple. Prince Arthur of Connaught personally laid a floral tribute upon the coffin. Ambassador Bryan sent to sacred trees.

After the Shinto rites had been performed, bugle salutes blared forth and a triple volley was fired over the graves, thus bringing to an end the ceremony of laying to rest of the bodies of the hero of Port Arthur and his wife.

Keep to the right and avoid danger.

TURN TABLES ON 35 HAT SMASHERS

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 20.—The happy habits of breaking straw hats during the autumn season had a crimp put in it when thirty-five young and handsome policemen were sent out as decoys for the hat smashers, each wearing a straw hat. Thirty-five merry young men full of highlanded jollity fitted a wallop on the crown of each summer lid. By an odd coincidence just thirty-five young men wore lovely back eyes when they faced police judge and bore the general appearance of thirty-five nondescript articles, which had been dragged in by thirty-five cats. It must be added that the thirty-five straw hats were reported a total loss. The thirty-five, who muscularly insisted upon the conventional derby and who didn't pick the right people, were fined $7.50 each.

BOSTON MARKETS

Activity and strength continued in the big market today with Amalgamated, Steel, Union Pacific and Reading the features with the public sentiment very much improved. The Utah Copper strike situation has not improved any today and with this out put and the Mexican cut off, higher prices for the copper metal seems inevitable.

East Butte was the strong active stock in the local market with much higher prices predicted. We look for a continuance of the upward swing until prices have reached a much higher level.

NEW YORK MARKETS

The fact that the market held well and maintained the advance in great part which was established last Tuesday did much toward encouraging the interests which were responsible for the recent upturn to renew operations for the advance, and as a consequence some time rather more buoyancy was displayed today than has been witnessed for some time. The engagement of a moderate consignment of Gold for import accompanied by the rather well defined reports that New York would bid in London for a portion of the arrivals of new gold on Monday and the expectation that the bank statement would present a rather satisfactory exhibit did much towards crystallizing the cheerful sentiment which has been in evidence for some time. We believe that the general trend is still upward, but of course reactions will occur from time to time.

IRON TRADE REVIEW

The Iron Trade Review says: While the outlook for continued record breaking business in iron and steel products for the first half of next year could hardly be brighter, the disposition of some interests to advance prices rapidly is deplored by conservative leaders in the trade. Men in very high positions give assurance that there will be no run away market and that the prevailing policy will be one of safeguarding and spreading out present prosperity.

The announcement by the Republic Iron & Steel Co. of a price of 1.35 on steel bars for delivery during the first quarter of 1913 came after a little quiet contracting on a basis of 1.35 C for the first quarter and 1.40 C for the second quarter. The announcement of an advance of only $1.00 a ton over the lowest prevailing price was received with such favor by buyers that orders were liberally entered with the Republic company and to a limited extent with a few other companies which were willing to take business at 1.35 C for the first quarter. On the whole, however, the policy of steel companies is to take orders very cautiously and from day to day it has become more difficult for buyers to cover for their requirements after January 1. On shapes and plates the selling policy has been even more conservative and a very limited amount of buying has been done for first quarter at 1.40 C. Some companies are positively refusing to take any orders on shapes, plates and bars for next year's delivery. Eastern Pennsylvania companies have again advanced prices from $1.00 to $2.00 per ton for prompt delivery of plates and shapes.

Further sharp advances in pig iron have followed heavy buying. At Buffalo after orders for about 50,000 tons had been placed, some interests advanced their quotations to $16.000 furnace for No. 2X and malleable for first half of next year, and at Cleveland prices were advanced from 75 cents to $1.000 after sales of from 20,000 to 30,000 tons had been made. Very high quotations made by some furnaces amounted to withdrawals from the market and a few competitors are willing to sell at lower prices. In the central west, many furnaces have sold more than half of their estimated production up to July 1, 1913. For steel making irons there is heavy inquiry at Pittsburg for about 85,000 tons of Bessemer, and a Youngstown company is confidently expected to buy 60,000 tons of basic for delivery after April 1.

The rail buying movement for next year is now under way. The eastern lines as well as western systems are covering for their requirements. The Pennsylvania and B. & O. orders are expected to be closed very soon and will be heavier than for several years.

The Corrector of Destinies

Being Told of Randolph Mason as Related by His Private Secretary, Courland Parks
The Copper Bonds

By Melville Davison Post

Copyright by Edward J. Clode

I knew that Jean Balduc was from the far north the moment Pietro brought him in from the door. There is a close-sitting air of the provinces on all those who come from there into New York. The smartest tailors, the most Parisian modistes cannot dislodge it. It is the atmosphere of his own land minted into the man, lying deeper than the cut of his coat. I put Jean Balduc up in British America—his big, tank, hard body belonged in the open, a rugged, roomy, primal open. His light blue eyes were from remote spruce forests reflected on the glimmering snow-crust. His hair was that blue-black which the French carried for violent contrast into the white north. His manner and speech were abrupt and direct.

He demanded an audience with Randolph Mason. I tried first to get a little history out of the big fellow from which to determine the advisability of such an audience. I got only a few crazy fragments. He had come to New York to even up a score with Barnsfield, the copper emperor on Broadway.

He wished to get at the man within the purloins of the law, if such a thing was possible. If not, he knew another way, very common in his country and direct—and, if not productive of monetary results, at least the balm of Gilead to one's injured sensibilities. He had some other business to settle with Barnsfield (not his own affair), which would require dancing steps and truce flags; but, when that was cleaned up and ended, it would be the Indian cheek on the stock of the Winchester and all white flags down.

I took him to Randolph Mason, and he told his story, walking up and down the length of the room and driving, now and then, his clenched right hand into the palm of his left for emphasis. He was from Huron county on the south shore of Lake Superior. Earlier he had come from the Jacques Cartier river in the Dominion. He had been a factor in the affairs of Huron county; he knew every man, woman and child in it, every tract of land, every nook and corner of it. Three years before he had made a house-to-house, man-to-man canvass of the county for treasurer, and got in with a majority to spare. He had gained, too, the goodwill of the people, their confidence and their hospitable friendship. Then, like the locusts of Biblical record, came the emissaries of Barnsfield to purchase the mineral rights under all the lands in the county.

It was not known that there was any copper in Huron county. Indeed, eminent geologists and practical prospectors had long agreed that the county was barren. These emissaries of Barnsfield explained that he was not misled about the sterility of the land. He knew that he was paying out good money for worthless rock, clay and gravel; but his plan was to corrupt the prospecting engineer of the Great Lakes Railroad company—have him secretly report to the company the existence of copper in this county. Then he, Barnsfield, would come generously forward and offer to transfer to the railroad the entire mineral rights of the county, provided the company would build a line through it to his wharf at Plymouth on the south shore of Lake Superior. This would enable him to load ore from the known copper regions directly on cars from the lake boats at Plymouth, and shorten the haul to his market by two hundred miles.

This story was gladly swallowed by the natives. They hoped for the coming of a railroad into the county, as the advent of a sort of commercial Messiah. Once or more they had voted large bond subscriptions to lure in such an enterprise, but it was of no avail. Lake Superior remained the only path of commerce.

In a few months these agents had obtained the mineral rights of almost the entire county. A few land-owners along the lake held out against them, and finally, after exhausting their ingenuity, Barnsfield's men came to Jean Balduc for assistance. They explained that these land-owners were blocking the prosperity of the whole people. The only chance of an iron highway to the south was being allowed out.

Balduc said he would go to these men and induce them to join in the sale. If he were assured from headquarters that the railroad plan would be carried through, they took him to Duluth, and to Barnsfield. He had the plan from Barnsfield's mouth. He was shown maps and profiles of the proposed route, elaborate plans and specifications of a great wharf and warehouses which Barnsfield expected to build at Plymouth when the railroad came, drawings for an addition to the town—indeed, all the paper details for a city. Balduc was introduced to the engineer of the Great Lakes Railroad company and read his report.

Barnsfield talked very frankly. His plan was not philanthropic. He would get back his money in a year from interest-paying rates from the lake. At present, his way was the money of one line; a rival would mean competition and a fair cut; it would make his town of Plymouth a somewhat better place on the lake, and this would bring large profits to him. He did not want Jean Balduc's assistance for mere good-will. He was quite willing to pay a thousand dollars for each land-owner whom Balduc could induce to sell, the money to be paid when his deeds were made to the railroad company. The strength of the plan lay in having the entire county in shape for direct transfer to the Great Lakes railroad. So large a bait could not fall of success, nor was there any moral wrong in foliating these worthless mineral rights on the company. The directors of it were notorious land thieves; a half-shirt was due them.

Jean Balduc was convinced and elated. He would gladly have lent his aid to the scheme without compensation, out of interest in the people of the county; but here was Barnsfield about to reap enormous sums from the venture, and he might as well have the money which was offered. They agreed, then, that Barnsfield should pay him one thousand dollars for every land-owner who made a deed for the mineral rights under his land, the money to be paid when the transfer was made by Barnsfield to the Great Lakes Railroad company. There were thirty-four of these men.

Balduc's popularity, the reputation he had established with the people and his prestige as county treasurer gave weight to his words. He went back to his people, assured them that he had investigated Barnsfield's plan and that it would certainly be carried out. He had seen the very surveys for the road, the estimates, the profiles. Finally he secured the deeds of nineteen of these recalcitrant land-owners. The others could not be induced to sell. Barnsfield marked their names off his list, expressed himself satisfied with the matter and put all his deeds to record. The county, now at the gateway of its fortunes, rejoiced. A great mass meeting was held in the court house; a vote of thanks was awarded Jean Balduc; he was carried to his home on the shoulders of his admiring fellows; tar-barrels were burned on the hills; horses were paraded; the local papers ran their election roosters and eagles.

Then came the gray morning, and the gradual rising of the sun. The minions of Barnsfield vanished. Months passed, and no engineer of the Great Lakes railroad sighted his transit into Huron county. No carts were trundled across her rivers, no Italian came to make a footpath for the iron beast; but, instead, a little man in spectacles arrived from Marquette and staked out a shipping wharf at Plymouth for the Lake Shore Steamship company. To inquiries he replied that Barnsfield wished to take the copper out of Huron county, and the steamship company must have a wharf from which to load it. Copper! The county sat literally with its jaws agape. But was this merely another subterfuge of Barnsfield? It was not. A little later a well-known superintendent from the regular mining region came with workmen and uncovered the copper-bearing strata. It was copper territory! The whole county richer than the Indies!

Jean Balduc stopped here in his narrative, drew down the muscles of his face until his eyes narrowed to pale slits. He crushed and ground the flaps of his coat pockets in his big hands. His mind was evidently crammed with incidents—vivid, crowding incidents: A flood of indignation poured over Jean Balduc. He was cursed, waking and sleeping, as with a Roman anathema. Even Barnsfield, chucking in his den in New York, goaded him. He would pay the nineteen thousand dollars when the deeds were transferred to the Great Lakes Railroad company—if he were living then.

Enraged was the only solution. Jean Balduc determined to close up his affairs as treasurer of the county, come to New York, collect from Barnsfield the twenty-eight thousand dollars which he owed Huron county for taxes on his mineral rights, transfer it to the county, and then settle his own affair with Barnsfield. After that, if he got away, he would go back to the Jacques Cartier river; but he would likely not get away.

"Have you seen Barnsfield?" said Randolph Mason.

"Yes," replied the man; "I went to him yesterday to collect these taxes, and he tried to beat me even on that. He was hard up, he said, he had no ready money; but he would give me bonds of the Empire Copper company. If I would take these bonds at par and turn over the tax receipts to him, I refused, and he asked me to come back today at one o'clock."

Randolph Mason turned to me. "What are these bonds worth?" he said.

"They are not listed on the stock exchange," I answered, "but there is a curb market for them at seventy-five cents."

Randolph Mason walked over to the window and stood looking out at the heavy snow-lakes driving against the glass. The big northerner walked, but Mason remained motionless, his hands behind him. Finally, the man took up his hat and put it on.

"Well," he said, "is there any truth in it?"

Mason turned abruptly. "Go back to Barnsfield," he said, "and take his bonds at par for the taxes. Mr. Parks will accompany you and write into the tax receipts that these taxes are paid in full by the delivery to you of the bonds, setting out the number and denomination, as you receive them. Give Barnsfield the receipts, and come back to me."

The man was aghast. "Why, sir," he said, "you cannot mean that! I would be a damned fool to do that. The county would be losing ten thousand dollars to take the bonds at par."

"Obey me," said Randolph Mason, and he turned back to the window.

"All right," said the big fellow; "you're the doctor. What you say goes, but it certainly does sound damn fool."

I went with him to Barnsfield. We crossed the snow-clad street, walked in under a gigantic granite arch and took a steel cage to the twenty-fourth floor. A limp youth led us to the copper magnate in a wing of the building above Broadway. Barnsfield was inclined a little to display in his setting. There was a silk Oriental rug on the floor, on the walls were rare prints, with here and there a gross imitation of a master. Barnsfield evidently took his art as prescribed by the foreign agents. The only table in the room was a huge piece of shining mahogany heavy with carvings in atrocious taste, the sort of thing which the full pocket gets when it leaves its selection to the dealer. Behind it was Barnsfield. I got the impression of something cold and pudgy, when I looked at him. A like impression awaits the spectator before the glass box at the end of the line in the National Aquarium at Naples—a deep-sea thing in a nest of weeds.

He was a tall man, fattened out of shape, fat crowding his eyes back, distending his jaws, sagging his chin. His hair was light and thin, brushed smooth to his pool. His eyes were dull, the eyes which Victor Hugo warned against, the cloudy eyes covering mines, rifle-pits, trenches manned with cannon shotted to the muzzle and the fuse smoking. A fat hand, illuminated by a great Kafir diamond, flopped about on the mahogany table. He showed no apparent interest at the arrival of Balduc, but he was a bit uneasy over me. His fingers wandered to an electric button, the nails scratching the rim of it.

"Mr. Barnsfield," began Balduc. "I came back about those taxes."

Barnsfield looked inquiringly at me. "Yes," he said. He wished to know who I was before his answers became more than monosyllabic.

"That's my lawyer's secretary," said Balduc. "I have concluded to take your chips and whetstones. They are better than nothing; but I want Mr. Parks to look at them."

The explanation cleared Barnsfield's face. If Balduc was bringing Huron county up to be quietly sheared of ten thousand dollars, a lawyer's secretary, merely to examine the wording of the bonds, was a detail to be pleased over. He dived down into the drawers of his desk, fished out a package of bonds and laid them on the table.

"Good five per cents," he said, "secured by a mortgage on all the copper properties in the county, including plants, tram-roads and improvements to be hereafter made. In six months they will be worth a hundred and twenty."

I looked carefully at the bonds. They were in the usual form of such securities, printed on bank-note paper, with a picture on the back of a huge copper pot, tipped over, pouring out a stream of gold pieces. They were of a first issue of the Empire Copper company, limited to a million dollars, and in denominations of one thousand. I smiled at the confidence of Barnsfield. There were exactly twenty-eight of these in the pack. He had planned them up for Balduc.

Barnsfield patted the bundle of securities with his fat hand. "There are the bonds," he said; "now give me the tax receipts signed by you as treasurer."

Balduc took a big leather pocket-book from his coat and handed me the tax receipts. I wrote into them, "Paid this day by the delivery to the treasurer of Huron county of twenty-eight bonds of the Empire Copper company, numbered three hundred and fifty to three hundred and seventy-seven inclusive." Then Balduc signed them and handed them over to Barnsfield.

He placed the package in a pigeon-hole of his desk, and came up from behind it transfused. The chill in the air was gone; the hidden foe-feels were melted; the low-lying fog was golden in the sun. He had not imagined that the thing could be done so easily. He had looked for long wrangling, delays, a siege. It was like the answer to prayer put into one's hands while they were still clasped. One ought to go wreathed in smiles when events waited at one's beck so courteously.

He chortled softly in his throat when he was well back into his chair, and beamed on us; then he talked out and sell them for what I could get. I sold the bonds on the curb for seventy-five cents on the dollar and got the cash in large bills. Randolph Mason handed this money to Jean Balduc and told him to go back to the Jacques Cartier river. The man was puzzled and angry. Was this all that Barnsfield could do—cause him to collect the taxes of Huron county at a loss of some nine thousand dollars, embzzle the money and hide out for the rest of his life? He could do better than that. The open way of the great north was a better one. He would send the money to Huron county; then he would go to Barnsfield's little informal dinner and square the account with him.

I came forward then, and begged Barnsfield to explain what he meant by his plan. As the matter stood, Balduc could not do even as he himself suggested. He could not send the money to Huron county, and leave New York clear. The sum he had lacked nine thousand dollars of paying the taxes. He had surrendered and accepted for the taxes in full, twenty-eight thousand dollars. If he sent back nineteen thousand, he would be instantly charged with theft of the other nine. Explanations would hardly avail him. He would certainly be extradited and imprisoned.

Randolph Mason went over to a bookcase, got down a volume of Reports of the State of Michigan, and sat down with it between the two of us as a tutor might do with puzzled little boys. He read the case, marking with his finger in the book, very carefully to me. I saw instantly the intent of his plan, but he went on, explaining in lucid detail the effect of it on Balduc, on Barnsfield, on Huron county, the equities which it adjusted, the necessity of government which it imposed, the penalties which it evaded, and the ancient, correct, accurate doctrine of law upon which this decision of the Michigan courts is founded.

The tension in Jean Balduc's big body relaxed, the pressure in his face ebbed. He understood the whole scheme to the end now. I do not know of any emasculated language which could give the force and directness of Balduc's own words. He got slowly to his feet, stretched out his arms, filled his big lungs. "By God," he said, "you have got the fat thief on the cross!"

Then he turned to me. "Mr. Parks," he went on, "I suppose you despised me down to the ground when I agreed to eat with that puffy-throated viper; but I only wanted to get a last chance at him, to tell him what I thought of him, and then to jam his head on the table among his pots. We will go up there tonight, you and I. We will show him how he has caught his own legs in his man-trap. I will tell him some things which he needs to hear; but we will not eat with him. If I were starving in the snow-drifts of Hudson bay, and he came to find me with a load from the company store, I would not eat with him. I would eat; but I would kill him first."

Barnsfield, like every parvenu, wished to point out for our admiration all the treasures in his hideous, showy palace before we went in to dinner. The place might have been the storehouse of Kild in the golden properties in the county, including plants, tram-roads and improvements to be hereafter made. In six months they will be worth a hundred and twenty."

He placed the package in a pigeon-hole of his desk, and came up from behind it transfused. The chill in the air was gone; the hidden foe-feels were melted; the low-lying fog was golden in the sun. He had not imagined that the thing could be done so easily. He had looked for long wrangling, delays, a siege. It was like the answer to prayer put into one's hands while they were still clasped. One ought to go wreathed in smiles when events waited at one's beck so courteously.

He chortled softly in his throat when he was well back into his chair, and beamed on us; then he talked out and sell them for what I could get. I sold the bonds on the curb for seventy-five cents on the dollar and got the cash in large bills. Randolph Mason handed this money to Jean Balduc and told him to go back to the Jacques Cartier river. The man was puzzled and angry. Was this all that Barnsfield could do—cause him to collect the taxes of Huron county at a loss of some nine thousand dollars, embzzle the money and hide out for the rest of his life? He could do better than that. The open way of the great north was a better one. He would send the money to Huron county; then he would go to Barnsfield's little informal dinner and square the account with him.

I came forward then, and begged Barnsfield to explain what he meant by his plan. As the matter stood, Balduc could not do even as he himself suggested. He could not send the money to Huron county, and leave New York clear. The sum he had lacked nine thousand dollars of paying the taxes. He had surrendered and accepted for the taxes in full, twenty-eight thousand dollars. If he sent back nineteen thousand, he would be instantly charged with theft of the other nine. Explanations would hardly avail him. He would certainly be extradited and imprisoned.

Randolph Mason went over to a bookcase, got down a volume of Reports of the State of Michigan, and sat down with it between the two of us as a tutor might do with puzzled little boys. He read the case, marking with his finger in the book, very carefully to me. I saw instantly the intent of his plan, but he went on, explaining in lucid detail the effect of it on Balduc, on Barnsfield, on Huron county, the equities which it adjusted, the necessity of government which it imposed, the penalties which it evaded, and the ancient, correct, accurate doctrine of law upon which this decision of the Michigan courts is founded.

The tension in Jean Balduc's big body relaxed, the pressure in his face ebbed. He understood the whole scheme to the end now. I do not know of any emasculated language which could give the force and directness of Balduc's own words. He got slowly to his feet, stretched out his arms, filled his big lungs. "By God," he said, "you have got the fat thief on the cross!"

Then he turned to me. "Mr. Parks," he went on, "I suppose you despised me down to the ground when I agreed to eat with that puffy-throated viper; but I only wanted to get a last chance at him, to tell him what I thought of him, and then to jam his head on the table among his pots. We will go up there tonight, you and I. We will show him how he has caught his own legs in his man-trap. I will tell him some things which he needs to hear; but we will not eat with him. If I were starving in the snow-drifts of Hudson bay, and he came to find me with a load from the company store, I would not eat with him. I would eat; but I would kill him first."

Barnsfield, like every parvenu, wished to point out for our admiration all the treasures in his hideous, showy palace before we went in to dinner. The place might have been the storehouse of Kild in the golden

Happy Thought.

Among the devices for helping a shut-in this seems the cleverest: One of the wealthy girls in a large town invited twenty of her girl friends to an afternoon tea and proposed a plan which went right to their hearts. She knew of an elderly woman, a bright, cheerful person, who had dearly loved her kurd and was interested in the outside world, and who had been shut up in her room through an injury to her hip. What a blessing a telephone would be to her, and it might be put into her room if each one of the girls would pledge 10 cents a month. Of course, it was done without delay. The phone was on a table at the invalid's elbow and the girls called her up and talked to her a little while every day and told her the news, and she called up old friends who had almost forgotten her; and so it was like perpetual fresh air and sunshine to that dull little room. And it was so easily done. One did not have to be wealthy to do it—only one had to think, or to be told.

The Reason.
"I expect to die in harness."
"Then I take it for granted you have a stable position."

Management.
"Why does a cat chase her tail?"
"I suppose it is because the cat, being strictly a domestic animal, wants to make both ends meet."

Its Class.
"Do you believe a chicken fight is a brutal crime?"
"I must say, I think it is a feat deed."

A college education will not hurt a young man if he is willing to learn something after he graduates.

His hair was light and thin, brushed smooth to his pool. His eyes were dull, the eyes which Victor Hugo warned against, the cloudy eyes covering mines, rifle-pits, trenches manned with cannon shotted to the muzzle and the fuse smoking. A fat hand, illuminated by a great Kafir diamond, flopped about on the mahogany table. He showed no apparent interest at the arrival of Balduc, but he was a bit uneasy over me. His fingers wandered to an electric button, the nails scratching the rim of it.

"Mr. Barnsfield," began Balduc. "I came back about those taxes."

Barnsfield looked inquiringly at me. "Yes," he said. He wished to know who I was before his answers became more than monosyllabic.

He was glad to see Jean Balduc again, pleased to meet me. He was athirst for news from the copper land, aching with wonder about the inexplicable delay of the Great Lakes railroad in building its line. It was his dearest, most closely cherished hope to see the citizens of Huron county wax rich from the development which he intended should be made on the south shore of Lake Superior. He hinted vaguely at large good fortune which the future held for Balduc, a future of which he, Barnsfield, was in some esoteric way the directing overlord. He wanted a long, intimate, personal talk with Balduc. He must come that night with him to dine, and I, too; he especially wished me to come. I had found favor in his sight. There would be only the three of us—his family was in Florida. It would be an informal, friendly dinner.

I looked to see the deep fires in Jean Balduc break through; but he accepted the invitation on the spot for the two of us at eight o'clock that evening.

Barnsfield lighted us to the door with smiles, and there we left him, treading his pudgy hands and thanking Providence that the human game, like no other, lacked instinct to protect it.

We went back to the office without a word. Randolph Mason looked at the bonds, and then directed me to go

TELLS OF THE WORK OF GOOD WILL FARM

At the annual meeting of the Good Will Farm and Home Finding association, the superintendent, Mrs. Gertrude M. Walker, submitted her annual report. It dealt at some length with her attendance on the annual meeting of the National Association of Charities and Corrections at Cleveland in June. That portion of the report directly concerned with the affairs of the association is here given:

"The special committee appointed at last winter's meeting to strengthen our financial condition sent out about 125 letters. The aims and results of our work were set forth, and three definite requests were made—that our collectors be given right-of-way and assisted in their work, that collections be made on the payrolls, and that the corporations make a contribution direct, if consistent with their policies. The replies without exception were full of encouragement. Where no reply was made, cooperation has since been assured by the welcome given to our workers, and the general result has been increased confidence in the willingness of the public to support Good Will Farm.

"The Newport Mining company, of Milwaukee, operating in Ironwood and Benesmer, sent us a check of $225 in lieu of any soliciting from employees. The Oliver Iron Mining company, of Duluth, and the Verona, of Cleveland, each sent a check of $100, without any restrictions. Some gifts of $10 and $5 came from individuals, and there were a few pledges. A very kind letter has just been received from a general manager of a large group of mines, in which we are assured of every facility for soliciting from the employes, but declining to make collections on the payroll. The problem for us to solve is how to make the men remember to put their gifts in their pockets before they leave home in the morning. To forget it twice or three times makes the collection of twenty-five cents of no benefit, for it is consumed in the expense of collection.

"The monthly statement for August shows our financial condition. We need $1,000 to clear us of debt, and the approach of winter is not very reassuring. But we are very thankful to James MacNaughton for making an arrangement by which we are to get our winter's coal at the Isle Royal coal dock, and at cost, thus saving about eight miles of travel and a substantial reduction in price.

"Following the discussion at the winter's meeting a carload of crushed lime rock was purchased, to be spread over the land for the purpose of correcting the acidity of the soil. About two-thirds was used and the remainder will be plowed in this fall. Good results already show in the garden crops.

"We have agreed to sell to C. C. Douglas a corner of our back forty that adjoins his property, for $50, and that amount will about pay for the new fencing required in different parts of the farm. Our stable floor is being replaced with concrete. It will be necessary to renew or replace the inside tank that furnishes us with water.

The report sent to the state board for the year ending June 30, last, is appended. It shows the following:

Number of children June, 30, 1911, 27; number of children received during the year, 61; total, 88.

FIVE RESERVES IN WATERY GRAVES

Chicago, Sept. 20.—Five naval apprentices were drowned and five are missing as the result of the capsizing of a cutter from the United States naval training station at North Chicago, victims were recovered and identified. It is believed that the five boys unaccounted for also were drowned.

The party left the training station shortly after 2 o'clock and after cruising about until nearly 4 o'clock the cutter was headed for North Chicago. A few minutes later, while the cutter was north of Lake Forest, a squall struck the boat. The sails were lowered and an anchor was thrown into the water. Gunner's Mate Negris, it is said, planned to let the cutter ride out the storm, but the waves soon were running so high that the boat dragged its anchor and gradually was being driven into the beach. When within two hundred feet of the shore the cutter was overturned by the wind and waves and its occupants were thrown into the water.

Rescuing Boat is Capsized.
Captain W. F. Fulam, commandant of the naval training station, saw the danger of the apprentices from his headquarters and sent a motorboat to the rescue, but this craft was capsized before it had gone far and the men in charge of it were obliged to swim back to the shore. Later a force of men was sent along the shore to where the cutter had been wrecked and every effort was made to rescue the apprentices.

Many of the boys were able to swim ashore. Several battled with the wind and waves and finally floated ashore on oars and pieces of wreckage. A number were rescued from the surf by officers of the training station and cared for at houses near the scene of the wreck.

The boat in which the apprentices went for the practice sail had a capacity of sixty and was not overcrowded, according to the officers of the naval training station.

One Life Saved by a Pulmotor.
A. L. Raymond, one of the boys taken from the water, was resuscitated by a pulmotor, after he had been worked on over for several hours. This reduced the list of the identified drowned to five.

A pulmotor was sent from Chicago soon after the bodies of the victims were recovered. The only body that showed signs of life was that of Raymond, and experts worked over the prostrate form for more than an hour before there was any hope of reviving him. He was removed to the hospital of the training station.

Gunner's Mate M. N. Negris, who was in charge of the cutter in which the boys were drowned, after adding in their rescue disappeared. He is said to have told friends that he held himself responsible in a measure for the wreck and that he feared it might affect his mind.

When last seen Negris was hysterical. Officers of the naval training station fear that he may have committed suicide. No trace of him had been found by those searching for him at a late hour tonight.

OFFICERS BEGIN PROBE OF KALAMAZOO SPOOKS:
BUILDER SAYS ITS HEAT

Kalamazoo, Mich., Sept. 20.—Strange noises emanating from the walls of their abodes and shrieks and groans heard during the past few nights by a number of residents in various parts of the city have led them to believe that they are harboring spooks, and they have made complaints to the officers.

Investigations of some of the mysterious sounds have been made without result, and small boys whom it was at first believed might have caused the noises by playing "tick-tack" were learned to have been in bed and asleep when the ghostly outcries were heard.

In every instance where the sounds were heard they came from the walls of recently constructed houses, which should be free from closeted skeletons and nooky visitors.

A solution of the matter has been advanced by a well known builder, who declared that the temperature is the cause of the disturbances. "The continued hot weather," says he "has caused the woodwork of the houses to expand, and during the cooler hours of the night contraction takes place. It is the almost imperceptible movement of the timbers in the dwellings, which have not been thoroughly dried, that causes the sounds which are heard in the dead of night are anything but pleasing."

ANN ARBOR GIRL BRIDE OF CHINAMAN

Ann Arbor, Mich., Sept. 20.—This whole town is agog over a wedding that occurred last Sunday, and has just "leaked out." The marriage was that of a Chinese student in the University of Michigan, and an American girl, also a student of the university. The marriage took place at the home of the bride's parents, in this city, and Rev. W. O. Raymond, curate of the Episcopal church, performed the ceremony.

The bride was Miss Mae Watkins, a 1912 literary student and the man whom she married was Tiam Franking, of Amoy, China, a junior law student and one of the law debaters, and a graduate of the Grand Rapids high school.

The marriage was the culmination of a romance that started several years ago, when Franking first came to this country and entered the Ann Arbor high school, in which Miss Watkins was then a student. From then till now, the pathway of Cupid has been beset with all sorts of obstacles. At one time opposition on the part of Mr. and Mrs. Watkins was so great that it is said to have been the reason for Franking's leaving the city for a year during which he studied and graduated from the Grand Rapids high school but when he came back, the intimacy was again taken up. It is said that the parents were finally won over to the marriage, rather than lose their daughter out of their lives.

Rev. Mr. Raymond last night admitted that he had married the couple but stated that before doing so he had questioned the father and the mother of the bride, and that they said to him, "personally counts more with us than does race," after that Rev. Mr. Raymond no longer hesitated to marry the couple.

The friends of the bride have tried for months to keep her from marrying the man, and have tried in every way to break off the friendship, but all to no avail. Even the unfortunate stories of other Ann Arbor girls who had married foreign students, were of no avail, for according to the bride, she is never to be obliged to live in China, nor in any foreign country if she does not want to. Now that the marriage has taken place, the friends of the girl have forsaken her, and they claim they will have nothing further to do with her.

For the time being, the young couple will reside with Mrs. Franking's parents. Mr. Franking will keep on with his studies in the law department but Mrs. Franking is undecided as to whether she will or not. It is thought by her friends, she intends to wait and see how she is received by the other co-eds. Franking is reputed to be wealthy and to the minister who married them, he said he was a Christian.

TIGHT FIT HOSE COST PART OF LEGS

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 20.—Her love for tight-fitting hosiery cost a Philadelphia young woman the lower portion of her limbs in St. Michael's hospital.

The hospital surgeons, who refused to give her name, because she was a private patient, told the story of the high price paid for vanity. The young woman, said to have been employed in a Market street department store, always demanded that her shapely extremities be clad in garments of silk or lisle that would fit the closest.

Recently when she complained of pains she thought were to rheumatism she was told by her associates that her tight stockings were impeding the circulation of the blood.

But she laughed at them and insisted on continuing to wear her favorite hosiery. Serious trouble followed, first in her legs, then began to spread upward so alarmingly that amputation of both legs just below the knees was regarded as necessary to save her life.

TIGER, LOOSE ON SHIP IN GALE, PERILS CREW

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 20.—Seamen of the British refrigerator Koranna, which wallowed into port here Wednesday with a rich cargo from the far east, told the story of how a Bengal tiger, loosed from its cage on the ship's deck during a heavy storm in the Indian Ocean, drove the members of the crew to the rigging and below the hatches, and kept them prisoners for more than four hours.

The tiger was shipped with the cargo at Calcutta on July 24. On the night of August 20, while the Koranna was driving before a terrific gale, the animal ate its way through the bars of the cage to the deck.

The crew on deck scrambled to the rigging. Those below barred the doors and hatches. Chief Officer Smith and Second Officer Warren held the bridge and navigated the ship, until a sudden turn of the vessel sent the tiger rolling into the sea. Ordered by the loss of the pet, Abdul Haroon, the Malay stevedore of the tiger, leaped into the sea. The animal at once was blocked by the waves which picked him up.

BULL MOOSERS DROPPED FROM REPUBLICAN PARTY

New York, Sept. 20.—The Republican national committee today accepted the resignations of its members from Minnesota, Oklahoma and Ohio, and declared vacant the seats held by members from New Jersey, West Virginia and North Carolina, who are Roosevelt supporters. Successors were named to retiring members from Oklahoma, Ohio, New Jersey and North Carolina.

The committee refused to recognize a telegram from Russ Avery of California, announcing his resignation, and voted to expel him for disloyalty to the Republican party.

Chairman Hilles was empowered to appoint a subcommittee of three to recommend a successor to Mr. Avery.

In the cases of William Edwards of West Virginia, whose seat was declared vacant, and I. A. Caswell of Minnesota, who resigned, the committee voted to ask the state committee of West Virginia and Minnesota, respectively, to recommend their successors. Mr. Edwards' seat was de-

The PHANTOM OF THE OPERA

By Gaston Leroux
Author of
THE MYSTERY OF THE YELLOW ROOM and THE PERFUME OF THE LADY IN BLACK

SYNOPSIS.

Consternation is caused on the last night that the Opera is managed by Debiennes and Poligny because of the appearance of a ghost, said to have been in evidence on several previous occasions. Christine Daae, a member of the opera company, is called upon to fill a very important part and scores a great success. Count de Chagny and his brother Raoul are among those who applaud the singer. Raoul tries to see Christine in the dressing room, but is unable to do so and later discovers that some one is making love to her. She emerges alone, and upon entering the room he finds it empty. While the farewell ceremony for the retiring managers is going on, the Opera Ghost appears and informs the new managers that Box No. 5 is reserved for him. Box No. 5 is sold with disastrous results. The managers receive a letter from the Opera Ghost calling attention to the error. Christine Daae writes Raoul that she had gone to visit the grave of her father. He goes also, and in the night follows her to the church.

CHAPTER V. (Continued).

And she saw a little boy running fast, in spite of the outcries and the indignation of a worthy lady in black. The little boy ran into the sea, dressed as he was, and brought her back her scarf. Boy and scarf were both soaked through. The lady in black made a great fuss, but Christine laughed merrily and kissed the little boy, who was none other than the Vicomte Raoul de Chagny, staying at Lannion with his aunt.

During the season they saw each other and played together almost every day. At the aunt's request, seconded by Professor Valerius, Daae consented to give the young vicount some violin lessons. In this way Raoul learned to love the same arts that had charmed Christine's childhood. They also both had the same calm and dreamy little cast of mind. They delighted in stories, in old Breton legends, and their favorite sport was to go and ask for them at the cottage-doors, like beggars:

"Ma'am . . . or, 'Kind gentleman . . . have you a little story to tell us, please?'"

And it seldom happened that they did not have one "given" them; for nearly every old Breton grandame has, at least once in her life, seen the "korrigan" dance by moonlight on the heather.

But their great treat was, in the twilight, in the great silence of the evening, after the sun had set in the sea, when Daae came and sat down by them on the roadside and, in a low voice, as though fearing lest he should frighten the ghosts whom he evoked, told them the legends of the land of the north. And the moment he stopped, the children would ask for more.

There was one story that began: "A king sat in a little boat on one of those deep, still lakes that open like a bright eye in the midst of the Norwegian mountains . . . And another:

"Little Lottie thought of everything and nothing. Her hair was golden as the sun's rays and her soul as clear and blue as her eyes. She wheeled her mother, was kind to her doll, took great care of her frock and her little red shoes and her fiddle, but most of all loved, when she went to sleep, to hear the Angel of Music."

While the old man told this story, Raoul looked at Christine's blue eyes and golden hair; and Christine thought that Lottie was very lucky to hear the Angel of Music when she went to sleep. The Angel of Music played a part in all Daddy Daae's tales; and he maintained that every great musician, every great artist received a visit from the Angel at least once in his life. Sometimes the Angel leans over their cradles, as happened to Lottie, and that is how there are little prodigies who play the fiddle at six better than men at fifty, which, you must admit, is very wonderful. Sometimes, the Angel comes much later, because the children are naughty and won't learn their lessons or practice their scales. And, sometimes, he does not come at all, because the children have a bad heart or a bad conscience.

None one ever sees the Angel; but he is heard by those who are meant to hear him. He often comes when they least expect him, when they are sad and disheartened. Then their ears suddenly perceive celestial harmonies, a divine voice, which they remember all their lives. Persons who are visited by the Angel quiver with a thrill unknown to the rest of mankind. And they cannot touch an instrument, or open their mouths to sing, without producing sounds that put all other human sounds to shame. Then people who do not know that the Angel has visited those persons say that they have genius.

Little Christine asked her father if he had heard the Angel of Music. But Daddy Daae shook his head sadly; and then his eyes lit up, as he said: "You will hear him one day, my child! When I am in heaven, I will send him to you!"

Daddy was beginning to cough at that time.

Three years later, Raoul and Christine met again at Perros. Professor Valerius was dead, but his widow remained in France with Daddy Daae and his daughter, who continued to play the violin and sing, wrapping in their dream of harmony their kind patroness, who seemed henceforth to live on music alone. The young man, as he now was, had come to Perros on the chance of finding them and went straight to the house in which

Three years later, Raoul and Christine met again at Perros. Professor Valerius was dead, but his widow remained in France with Daddy Daae and his daughter, who continued to play the violin and sing, wrapping in their dream of harmony their kind patroness, who seemed henceforth to live on music alone. The young man, as he now was, had come to Perros on the chance of finding them and went straight to the house in which they used to stay. He first saw the old man; and then Christine entered, carrying the tea-tray. She flushed at the sight of Raoul, who went up to her and kissed her. She asked him a few questions, performed her duties as hostess prettily, took up the tray again and left the room. Then she ran into the garden and took refuge on a bench, a prey to feelings that stirred her young heart for the first time. Raoul followed her and they talked till the evening, very shyly. They were quite changed, cautious as two diplomatists, and told each other things that had nothing to do with their budding sentiments. When they took leave of each other by the roadside, Raoul, pressing a kiss on Christine's trembling hand, said: "Mademoiselle, I shall never forget you!"

And he went away regretting his words, for he knew that Christine could not be the wife of the Vicomte de Chagny.

As for Christine, she tried not to think of him and devoted herself wholly to her art. She made wonderful progress and those who heard her prophesied that she would be the greatest singer in the world. Meanwhile, the father died; and, suddenly, she seemed to have lost with him, her voice, her soul and her genius. She retained just, but only just, enough of this to enter the conservatoire, where she did not distinguish herself at all, attending the classes without enthusiasm and taking a prize only to please old Mamma Valerius, with whom she continued to live.

The first time that Raoul saw Christine at the opera, he was charmed by the girl's beauty and by the sweet images of the past which it evoked, but was rather surprised at the negative side of her art. He returned to listen to her. He followed her in the wings. He waited for her behind a Jacob's ladder. He tried to attract her attention. More than once, he walked after her to the door of her box, but she did not see him. She seemed, for that matter, to see nobody. She was all indifference. Raoul suffered, for she was very beautiful and he was shy and dared not confess his love, even to himself. And then came the lightning-flash of the gala performance—the heavens torn asunder and an angel's voice heard upon earth for the delight of mankind and the utter capture of his heart.

And then . . . and then there was that man's voice behind the door—"You must love me!"—and no one in the room.

Why did she laugh when he reminded her of the incident of the scarf? Why did she not recognize him? And why had she written to him? . . . Perros was reached at last. Raoul walked into the smoky sitting-room of the Setting Sun and at once saw Christine standing before him, smiling and showing no astonishment.

"So you have come!" she said. "I felt that I should find you here, when I came back from mass. Some one told me so, at the church."

"Who?" asked Raoul, taking her little hand in his.

"Why, my poor father, who is dead."

There was a silence; and then Raoul asked:

"Did your father tell you that I love you, Christine, and that I cannot live without you?"

Christine blushed to the eyes and turned away her head. In a trembling voice, she said:

"Me? You are dreaming, my friend!"

And she burst out laughing to put herself in countenance.

"Don't laugh, Christine; I am quite serious," Raoul answered.

And she replied gravely: "I did not make you come to tell me such things as that."

"You 'made me come,' Christine; you knew that your letter would not leave me indignant and that I should hasten to Perros. How can you have thought that, if you did not think I loved you?"

"I thought you would remember our games here, as children, in which my father so often joined. I really don't know what I thought. . . . Perhaps I was wrong to write to you. This anniversary and your sudden appearance in my room at the opera the other evening reminded me of the time long past and made me write to you as the little girl that I then was."

There was something in Christine's attitude that seemed to Raoul not natural. He did not feel any hostility in her; far from it; the distressed affection shining in her eyes told him that. But why was this affection distressed? That was what he wished to know and what was irritating him.

"When you saw me in your dressing-room, was that the first time you noticed me, Christine?"

She was incapable of lying.

"No," she said, "I had seen you several times in your brother's box. And also on the stage!"

"I Have Decided to Tell You Something Serious, Very Serious."

and unhappily. "Well, I will answer for you. It was because there was some one in the room who was in your way, Christine, some one that you did not wish to know that you could be interested in any one else!"

"If any one was in my way, my friend," Christine broke in coldly, "if any one was in my way, that evening, it was yourself, since I told you to leave the room!"

"Yes, so that you might remain with the other!"

"What are you saying, monsieur?" asked the girl excitedly. "And to what other do you refer?"

"To the man to whom you said, 'I sing only for you . . . tonight I gave you my soul and I am dead!'"

Christine seized Raoul's arm and clutched it with a strength which no one would have suspected in so frail a creature.

"Then you were listening behind the door?"

"Yes, because I love you . . . And I heard everything. . . ."

"You heard what?"

And the young girl, becoming strangely calm, released Raoul's arm.

"He said to you, 'Christine, you must love me!'"

At these words, a deathly pallor spread over Christine's face, dark rings formed round her eyes, she staggered and seemed on the point of swooning. Raoul darted forward, with arms outstretched, but Christine had overcome her passing faintness and said, in a low voice:

"Go on! Go on! Tell me all you heard!"

At an utter loss to understand, Raoul answered: "I heard him reply, when you said you had given him your soul, 'Your soul is a beautiful thing, child, and I thank you. No emperor ever received so fair a gift. The angels wept tonight!'"

Christine carried her hand to her heart, a prey to indescribable emotion. Her eyes stared before her like a madwoman's. Raoul was terror-stricken. But suddenly Christine's eyes moistened and two great tears trickled, like two pearls, down her ivory cheeks.

"Christine!"

"Raoul!"

The young man tried to take her in his arms, but she escaped and fled in great disorder.

While Christine remained locked in her room, Raoul was at his wit's end what to do. He refused to breakfast. He was terribly concerned and bitterly grieved to see the hours, which he had hoped to find so sweet, slip past without the presence of the young Swedish girl. Why did she not come to roam with him through the country where they had so many memories in common? He heard that she had had a mass said, that morning, for the repose of her father's soul and spent a long time praying in the little church and on the father's tomb. Then, as she seemed to have nothing more to do at Perros and, in fact, was doing nothing there, why did she not go back to Paris at once?

Raoul walked away, dejectedly, to the graveyard in which the charron stood and was indeed alone among the tombs, reading the inscriptions; but, when he turned behind the apex, he was suddenly struck by the dazzling note of the flowers that struggled over the white ground. They were marvelous red roses that had blossomed in the morning, in the snow, giving a glimpse of life among the dead, for death was all around him. It also, like the flowers, issued from the ground, which had hung back a number of its corpses. Skeletons and skulls by the hundreds were heaped against the wall of the church, laid in position by a wire that ran the whole gruesome stack visible. Dead men's bones, arranged in rows, the bricks, to form the first course upon which the walls of the sanctuary had been built. The door of the cemetery opened in the middle of that busy structure, as is often seen in old Breton churches.

Raoul said a prayer for Daae and then, painfully impressed by all those eternal smiles on the mouths of skulls, he climbed the slope and sat down on the edge of the heath overlooking the sea. The wind fell with the evening. Raoul was surrounded by icy darkness, but he did not feel the cold. It was here, he remembered, that he used to come with little Christine to see the Korrigan dance at the rising of the moon. He had never seen any, though his eyes were good, whereas Christine, who was a little shortsighted, pretended that she had seen many. He smiled at the thought and then suddenly gave a start. A voice behind him said:

"Do you think the Korrigan will come this evening?"

It was Christine. He tried to speak. She put her gloved hand on his mouth.

"Listen, Raoul, I have decided to tell you something serious, very serious. . . . Do you remember the legend of the Angel of Music?"

"I do indeed," he said. "I believe it was here that your father first told it to us."

"And it was here that he said, 'When I am in heaven, my child, I will send him to you.' Well, Raoul, my father is in heaven, and I have been visited by the Angel of Music."

"I have no doubt of it," replied the young man gravely, for it seemed to him that his friend, in obedience to a pious thought, was connecting the memory of her father with the brilliancy of her last triumph.

Christine appeared astonished at the Vicomte de Chagny's coolness:

"How do you understand it?" she asked, bringing her pale face so close to his that he might have thought that Christine was going to give him a kiss; but she only wanted to read his eyes in spite of the dark.

"I understand," he said, "that no human being can sing as you sang the other evening without the intervention of some miracle. No professor on earth can teach you such accents as those. You have heard the Angel of Music, Christine."

"Yes," she said solemnly, "in my dressing-room. That is where he comes to give me my lessons daily."

"In your dressing-room?" he echoed stupidly.

"Yes, that is where I have heard him; and I have not been the only one to hear him."

"Who else heard him, Christine?"

"You, my friend."

"If I heard the Angel of Music?"

"Yes, the other evening. It was he who was talking when you were listening behind the door. It was he who said, 'You must love me.' But I then thought that I was the only one to hear his voice. Imagine my astonishment when you told me this morning that you could hear him too!"

Raoul burst out laughing. The first rays of the moon came and shrouded the two young people in their light. Christine turned on Raoul with a hostile air. Her eyes, usually so gentle, flashed fire.

"What are you laughing at? You think you heard a man's voice, I suppose?"

"Well . . . replied the young man, whose face began to grow covered in the face of Christine's determined attitude.

Experiment in Ostrich Breeding. A new rival to South Africa in the matter of ostrich breeding has come forward. This is the state of Las Beyla, a little colony in the southwest of Baluchistan, whence news comes that a certain sum is to be set apart for experiment in breeding the birds.

The KITCHEN CABINET

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Rub hinges with a feather dipped in oil and they will not squeak.

A slice of lemon or a sprig of parsley eaten after onions will destroy the odor.

Pennyroyal will keep off mosquitoes.

Use a clothes pin to handle a screw when putting it into hard wood.

To freshen the air in a sick room, put a few drops of oil of lavender into hot water. It leaves a most agreeable odor.

Place a piece of glass over the cook book when using it. It serves two purposes, holds the book open and keeps it clean.

To save a child from slipping in the bath tub, lay a turkish towel in the bottom of the tub.

The moment you are prompted to rub your eyes, that moment stop using them.

When making cream of tomato soup, add the hot tomatoes to the milk instead of milk to the tomatoes, as it is not so apt to curdle.

When camping, and a rolling pin is needed, a large round bottle serves very well.

Do not try to test mushrooms for a dark color with a silver spoon, for it is not a good test for a poisonous variety.

Clean the meat chopper by running dry bread or crackers through it.

Fried apples with fried onions, both cooked together, are excellent with a pork chop.

To remove stains of iodine from the hands, use ammonia.

Keep the fingers covered with salt when cleaning a fowl, as it prevents the fingers from slipping.

Ivory is cleaned with lemon and salt; afterwards wash in soap suds.

To improve tough meat, rub it well with a cut lemon. This acid softens the fibers.

When a loaf of bread has become stale, dip it in water and place in a paper bag in a hot oven.

When picking flowers in the woods, provide yourself with a paper bag to put them in. Fold over the top to keep them from the air, and they will be fresh when you arrive at home.

of whipped cream. Mix half the sugar with the flour, bring the milk to the boiling point, add the sugar and flour and cook ten minutes. Beat the egg yolks, add the remaining sugar and cook all together until smooth. Fill a tumbler half full of this mixture and fill it with sweetened whipped cream.

SOMETHING TO EAT.

When a novel and unusual filling for a cake is desired, try this: Bake the cake in two layers and frost them both separately. Take a cup of raisins and simmer gently for an hour or more with a few teaspoonsful of lemon juice. Spread this, well drained, over the frosted layer, then turn the other layer, frosting side down; over this, and put together. Cover with frosting. When cut, the raisins will be between the two layers of frosting. Chopped nuts are an addition to this filling.

Irish Stew.—Take two or three pounds from the neck, cut into small pieces, add enough water to cover, and simmer for an hour, then add potatoes, carrots, onions and turnips cut in small pieces, and cook for several hours at the simmering point. Serve hot, after seasoning well with salt.

Peach Pie.—Line a pie plate with crust, then lay in peeled, stoned and sliced peaches, sprinkling sugar liberally over them in proportion to their sweetness. Allow three peach kernels chopped fine to every pie. Pour in a very little water and bake with cross bars of pastry for a top crust.

Rice Fudding.—Place in a buttered pudding dish a layer of cold boiled rice, season with cream, nutmeg and sugar. Cover this with a layer of quince or apple preserves, then add another layer of rice and fruit, and over the top place a meringue made of the whites of two eggs beaten stiff and four tablespoonsful of sugar added. Bake in a slow oven and serve cold with cream.

Sponge Bananas.—Cover the bottom of a baking dish with small sponge cakes or lady fingers. Upon this put a layer of peeled bananas whole. Sprinkle with sugar, add bits of butter and the juice of a lemon, cover with chopped nuts and bake fifteen minutes in a moderate oven. Serve with a custard or cream.

When suffering from a nervous headache, try walking slowly backward for about ten minutes, placing first the ball of the foot on the floor and then the heel.

A teaspoonful of turpentine added to the boiler of clothes will greatly aid in the whitening process.

In sudden attacks of illness, when a fire must be built and not a quicker remedy is at hand, take the stove lid, wrap it in paper and a cloth and use it to apply heat.

Newspaper used to rub windows will keep them bright; also they make a fine polish for the kitchen range. Always have a folded paper and wax to rub the flat iron, and a bundle of newspapers makes a good rest for the feet when ironing.

Saturate palls and tube with glycerine and they will not shrink.

Often a tight shoe may be stretched by applying a cloth wrung out of boiling water.

A small fire in a clean grate is the best of ventilators.

A spoonful of vinegar put into water that fowls are cooked in makes them more tender.

An old bedspread makes a good sponge cloth, and the small pieces are fine for wash cloths.

When preparing meat for sausage, time is saved if the salt and spices are mixed and added before grinding.

Layer cakes will not stick to the pan if after they are greased a little flour is dusted over them.

Cream a little old will not curdle in coffee if beaten before using.

IT'S LUCKY THAT PUGS CHANGED THEIR JOBS

What They Once Were:
Ad Wolgast—Bootblack.
P. McFarland—Butcher boy.
K. O. Brown—Hot-dog peddler.
Mike Gibbons—Railroad fellow.
Al Falser—Fine boiler-maker.
Johnny Kilbane—A nice little clerk.
Jack Johnson—A cotton carrier.

Ah! these are the happy days—yes 'um! These are the merry, princely, pompous, prosperous days of the boxing boys. Yes! verily 'tis true. Fighting is in flower. Nowadays and fighter—ahem—we mean boxer—who even talks or fight for less than $20,000 or $30,000 is regarded very lacking in culture, very frangible de brie, don't cha know, horribly pork and beanish to say the least, and should be ostracized from the front porches of the elcat.

Don't pick us out to ask why. Maybe it's the high cost of living—maybe it's just a little peculiar jealousy between Rockefeller, Carnegie, Johnson and Wolgast in their little game of "cornering cash." But whatever it is! These fellows talk about thousands of dollars like we would the weather. Johnson will box Jeanette for oh—ah—well, say $30,000 and some moving pictures or retire. And there is a frantic Frenchman, Victor Breyer is his name, who is willing to give that amount, but Jack is probably waiting for even more.

Wolgast demanded $22,500 for a ten-round, no decision contest with Packey McFarland. He got $2,500. Also he offered to exhibit three times in exchange for a roll of bills valued at $56,000—yes, indeed. McFarland's usual rate is $10,000 for ten rounds, or $1,000 a round—but he is young and ambitious.

Johnny Kilbane and Mike Gibbons have failing eyesight, also, and it's difficult for them to see anything below $5,000 a job.

The Happy Days.
These are the happy days, sure enough. We laugh as we weakly place our hand in the pocket where our money ought to be—and find it cold and deserted.

But listen! We have no grouch, mind you, nor have we just been beaten up, and it's not Friday; we have only been wandered over by a few stray thoughts as to the high-priced individuals would amount to if they had not turned fighters—just supposing they woke up and found it all a dream.

Lil' Arthur, for instance—that $1,000 a minute shadow who was demanding $30,000 for a few minutes' work. He couldn't earn 90 cents a day doing anything else. Not so long ago Jack was getting just that amount for juggling hales of cotton down on the wharves in Galveston, and if he hadn't discovered a punch he would be there yet. Jack never even had one automobile then—he actually walked. No bright lights then, no champagne or sumptuous repasts of chicken. In those days, at irregular intervals, Jack could be heard drinking his thumb-seasoned stew and surrounding a few stray beans in the corner of some alleyway refreshment parlor. And our bookkeeper has just figured it up that if Jack could have his 90 cents a day it would take him just 102 years, 1 month and 17 days to save as much as he would have received for boxing Joe Jeanette thirty minutes.

Ad Was Good Bootblack.
As for Champion Wolgast—well! If Ad was still working at his old trade he would still be shining shoes in a barber shop. We could all go down there and have our shoes polished. Maybe Jimmy Coffroth, McCarey and Billy Gibson wouldn't enjoy being shined about now!

Then there's McFarland. If he had not discovered that he was clever he would still be enjoying his old romantic job in Chicago's stockyards and would be lucky if he ever saw $1,000.

Mike Gibbons would be grinding his nose in the railroad shops at $2 a day instead of dazzling like a diamond in a ring.

K. O. Brown would probably be keeping that left hand busy selling hot-dog and sauerkraut at Coney Island. Al Falser, when not working as a boiler-maker could keep from starving by posing as a mountain for a moving picture show.

"Oh, why should the spirit of mortal be proud!"

Please don't misunderstand us now; we think they deserve all the more credit for their success. We may have used a great many "ifs"—but just remember that the "if-ers" don't count, neither do the "was-ers"—it's the "is-ers."

Good Qualities.
He alone is worthy of respect who knows what is of use to himself and others, and who labors to control his self-will. Each man has his own fortune in his hands; as the artist has a piece of rude matter, which he is to fashion to a certain shape. But the art of living rightly is like all arts; the capacity alone is born with us; it must be learned, and practiced with incessant care.

An article that has real merit should in time become popular. That such is the case with Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been attested by many dealers. Here is one of them. H. W. Hendrickson, Ohio Falls, Ind., writes: "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best for coughs, colds and croup, and is my best seller." For sale by all dealers.

PRICES TO BE HIGH THIS FALL

A representative of one of the wholesale concerns handling fruit in this county is authority for the assertion that the outlook for cheap fruit this fall is not as good as it was a few weeks ago. The extended period of wet weather in July and August injured the fruit crop to some extent, and now the farmers and commission men are having difficulty getting as many cars as they need to take care of their shipments. The car shortage is already causing heavy losses in the lower peninsula, and there is a heavy demand for cars in the west, where both the grain and fruit crops are large.

The Armour car trust has practical control of the car situation in the lower peninsula, and the movement of fruit this fall will be much more expensive than ever before, as an additional charge for ice has recently been imposed. A few years ago the being charge for each car shipped from the lower part of the state to the upper peninsula was $12, but now there is a charge of $35 a car. The freight and ice charges on Concord grapes amount to about five-cents a basket. Grapes are now selling in the lower peninsula at from eleven to fifteen cents a basket, wholesale, and the retail dealers have to ask twenty-five cents a basket for choice stock. The minimum charge on a carload of grapes is at the rate of 24,000 pounds. As a rule, 3,000 baskets are loaded into a car.

The freight service to the upper peninsula is not nearly as good as it was a year ago, it is said, as the railroads are not running as many trains. Carload shipments out of Chicago on Monday night, do not reach here until Wednesday noon, whereas formerly the run was made in less than twenty-four hours. The railroads are running fewer trains and pulling heavier loads.

It is not believed that Concord grapes will sell at less than eighteen to twenty cents a basket this fall, whereas many times in the past they have sold for from twelve to fifteen cents in large lots.

Impatience.
Some people become discouraged because Opportunity doesn't respond whenever they whistle for it.

CARPENTERS' UNION MAY AID SIDNA ALLEN

Des Moines, Iowa, Sept. 20.—A proposition that the International Carpenters' union, in convention at Washington, D. C., extend aid to Sidna Allen, the Virginia mountaineer captured last Saturday in connection with the Hillesville court house murders, will be brought before the convention tomorrow by representatives of the Des Moines union, according to an announcement here today.

ST. JOSEPH'S TEAM GO TO FLAT ROCK

Members of St. Joseph's baseball team will go to Flat Rock team at the county fair this week. The Maple Ridge squad by a heavy score and as St. Joseph's have before this season trimmed Flat Rock the local lads claim the right to the title of amateur champions in Delta county. The game of Sunday however is scheduled as a championship game and considerable interest will be centered in the outcome not only by friends of the players of this city but throughout the Flat Rock district.

WOLVERINES TO HAVE A NEW ATHLETIC TRAINER.

Ann Arbor, Sept. 20.—There is a new athletic trainer at Ann Arbor, and his name is "Steve" Farrell, but it is certain he will be known as "Doc" before he has been in charge very long. He was asked if he had any rules for keeping men in condition.

"Well," he said, "it is really just a matter of living right. If they do that they will be in good health and also in condition."

In method he will be about like Kranzelein as far as diet goes. "Doc" used to believe in giving the men a rather wide latitude in the matter of food, and after visiting some training tables it was a shock to see the Michigan players' meals. Dessert was not unknown and it will not be under Farrell's either.

BIG FAIR IS CLOSED

up to the fair to excellent advantage, providing exhibits of farm and garden products that are to be approached in but few sections of the country.

Those who have been interested in promoting the fair of this year are more than pleased with the success that has attended their efforts and all are encouraged to begin work immediately toward the building up for next year a bigger and better fair, ever surpassing the admirable record of this year.

To no one is more credit due for the success of the fair of this year than Sec. T. E. Strom. Mr. Strom has been the man behind the gun from the beginning to the end. It was Mr. Strom who sold advance space in the exposition building for a sufficient amount to exhibitors to allow the construction of the big permanent building. It was Mr. Strom who looked after the fair features before the big show began and it was the same individual who was constantly on the job from the beginning to the end of the undertaking. To him Delta county owes a debt that can never be repaid as he has made the Northern State fair a fixture in Escanaba and an institution that is bound to be perpetuated through years to come.

LINEUP IN G.O.P. MEET IS UNKNOWN

Detroit Sept. 20.—Not in the memory of the old timer has there been as little information regarding the preference of the delegates to a state convention as there is now.

The convention will be held on next Tuesday and right now the busy little predictors who always tell in advance who is going to be nominated are forced to confess that they don't know what is coming off.

Two reasons are responsible. One is that the friction in the state due to the information of the third party has shoved the nomination of state officers into the back ground. The other is that it has not been decided what Wayne is to do. With Martindale a candidate for governor Wayne held back and did not offer a candidate for any other state office. George Lord was candidate for secretary of state but withdrew. Will A. Waite was mentioned for the job and also held off since the primary there has been much talk of Mr. Martindale standing for his old job of secretary of state.

But Coleman G. Vaughan of St. Johns has been busy garnering delegates for this job and George Lush of Bay City is also a candidate. Now Wayne is sure to insist on a place on the Republican ticket. It is entitled to it by all the rules of politics and it is always particularly anxious for one job so that it will have a member on the state board of equalization.

Also Wayne has 219 delegates in the state convention this time, the new apportionment jumping it from 192. With 219 delegates some wonders can be worked.

So this puts the situation up in the air. Any number of combinations are possible. Whatever office Wayne decides to go after it is pretty sure to get, especially as a majority of the delegates to the state convention are not tied up very solidly on candidates.

So there can be no direct lineup all the way around until Wayne makes up its mind.

About the only thing that looks like a cinch is the nomination of Grant Fellows for Attorney General. Gus Carlton also looks like a winner for land commissioner, and that ends the apparent certainties.

There is a heavy undercurrent of talk about opposition to Justice Steere and Kuhn but the opposition has not centered on any one as yet. Whether Wayne will present a candidate for the supreme bench is a big question.

The scrap between Dr. Seidmorde and Auditor General Fuller for that job is also in the dark, so far as the prospective result is known.

From the look of things right now little will be known before Monday of what the convention is going to do.

SAYS UEWRITTEN LAW JUSTIFIES ACTIONS

Chicago, Sept. 20.—The question, "is it right to try to foist a 'borrowed baby' upon a man to make him believe he is the father of it?" was frankly discussed and answered on the witness stand in Municipal Judge Seboth's court by Rose Moody, prosecuting witness against J. H. McNelly, a Wood lawn, caterer, and Thomas J. Balhatchett a Hyde Park physician.

"When you borrowed that baby to make McNelly believe you were the mother and that he was its father, you knew your purpose was immoral and improper, didn't you?" asked Perley Bishop, counsel for McNelly.

"No, I did not," replied Miss Moody with emphasis.

"Did you think it was right or wrong?"

"I thought it was both right and wrong," said the young woman.

"How do you distinguish between the right and the wrong in this regard?"

"It was wrong, because I represented that I was the mother of the child," she said. "It was right to do as I did to make Mr. McNelly support me. I would have got two borrowed babies if by doing so I could have made him do his duty by me. He is a rich caterer, and I was only a girl in his store. He treated me meanly."

"I received only $11 dollars from McNelly during my illness and $75 from Dr. Balhatchett, yet I paid Dr. Balhatchett $200 for his services in attending me."

At this point Miss Moody fainted and fell forward in the witness chair. Judge Seboth and two women who sat in front seats in the courtroom carried her into the jury room. Restoratives were applied and she resumed the stand.

Miss Moody was closely questioned as to visits made by her to midwives to get receipts for money paid them by her. She admitted that these receipts were to be used to deceive McNelly concerning the baby. She declared McNelly sent her to Dr. Balhatchett to have an operation performed, and this was held to be admissible, as both men are charged with conspiracy to perform an operation.

The girl charged that a trap was set for her one day when she met McNelly in Lawyer Bishop's office, and a stenographer was hidden behind a bookcase to take down what she said.

McNelly, who is charged with misconduct with the young woman while she was employed by him in his confectionery shop at Sixty-third street and Lexington avenue, sat silent and gloomy behind his counsel. He denies any improper conduct with her or that he sent her to Dr. Balhatchett. He says Miss Moody demanded $3,500 of him, and makes her charges because he refused to give up the money.

SAVES BABY'S LIFE, GOES BACK TO CELL

Grand Rapids, Sept. 20.—Unguarded and alone Bert McClellan given one week's parole from the reformatory at Ionia, where he is serving a two-year sentence for robbing the express office at the Union depot, walked down to the station, purchased a ticket to Ionia, and made the trip back to the prison. He had the satisfaction of knowing, however, that his week's stay in this city had resulted in saving the life of his 2-year-old baby, whose illness had obtained his parole.

One week ago Gov. Osborn gave McClellan a parole to allow him to visit his wife and child in this city. Physicians said there was little hope for the child's recovery and prominent business men petitioned the governor to release McClellan for a time.

As he started McClellan said: "It is hard to go back but the governor trusted me and I would not violate the confidence he has shown in me."

McClellan was left entirely unguarded on his trip to this city. No surveillance was kept over him and the police department had no instructions relative to watching him.
