Vickye:

Attached are your proofs--Don really came across! Try to get them back to us as soon as you can.

Vickye, I've been thinking about your comment on the article "All God's Critters..." in the last paper, and the upcoming article you said you've done, reflecting some of your personal views on obesity.

I respect you for having definite views on things and for not hesitating to speak them. But careful consideration has to be given before personal feelings are put into print.

It's always a struggle for an editor to draw the necessary line between publishing personal views on matters of public concern, which is okay, and using columns to air strictly personal concerns or beefs. The latter should be avoided. We can talk about this more next week.
