Lockout Prospect for Radio Artists

London—Variety artists who persist in accepting contracts to broadcast are faced with a possible stage boycott.

Music hall managers are in arms against radio because they claim it is causing them huge losses. They declare they lost $50,000 in admission fees when the Victoria Palace Music Hall broadcast a program while the King and Queen were in attendance.

Charles Gulliver, a leading manager, has been foremost in his opposition to broadcasting by variety artists, and many other managers are now taking his attitude.

Recently Norman Lee, revue writer, announced that he would have to forego an agreement with the British Broadcasting Company to put on a performance, because of the attitude of Gulliver for whom he has written many productions. Miss Maudie Scott, Miss Ella Retford and other stars have recently cancelled broadcasting contracts.

Makes every coffee cent count—because of its concentrated flavor THE economy of M-J-B is merely a lesson in simple arithmetic. Here it is— M-J-B is a concentrated coffee. That means it is extra-rich in strength and flavor. We blend it that way—always have. And that's why you can use less of M-J-B to the cup and still enjoy a fine, flavor-rich cup of coffee. Now consider that the average family uses 40 cups of coffee per week and you begin to realize how M-J-B makes every coffee-cent count. You get more in the way of coffee contentment and it costs you less in the long run. Isn't that, after all, the only kind of economy that counts? M-J-B Coffee meets every taste in Coffee

TORNADO HITS INDIANAPOLIS

Nearly a million dollars worth of property was destroyed and more than 40 people were injured when a sudden tornado swooped down on Indianapolis just at dusk. This picture shows how wreckage torn from houses nearly buried a row of automobiles parked by the curb in a residence district.

IN NEW YORK

New York, May 23.—They are telling about Broadway a tale concerning one of those lunch counters that advertise with a large sign, "A meal a minute," "a snack a second," or something of the sort.

The other day, while hundreds were gobbling down their food, a young man entered wearing a gold badge and several diners pointed admiringly in his direction.

"What's the big deal?" asked a stranger.

"Oh, he did a bowl of soup, a sandwich, a piece of pie and coffee in forty-seven seconds the other day."

Hell's Kitchen gave a banquet to Policeman Pat Diamond a few days ago.

That's something to write about, because the Kitchen's past reputation has been one of presenting bluecoats with lead, and little else.

Pat Diamond covered its length and breadth in the days when a riot a day kept the doctors away from their offices. It was Pat's code never to draw a gun. Any fight he couldn't settle without pumping a man full of lead had to be "some" battle. And that battle was never fought—at least not in his presence.

The gangsters knew this. They learned that they might get a crack over the head, but they knew that they'd never get a bullet through the heart—and Pat had many opportunities.

He can go back to County Derby now with his mind at peace, for of the many cops that came and went in the bad days of the Kitchen, he never killed a man.

Pat—like all who have watched—has seen times changed. Today a sinister machine draws up, a shot is fired and a gangster takes the sidewalk and the grave. The machine goes on, and frightened onlookers conveniently forget to remember its number. It isn't safe.

That's far different from those old Gas House days when the gangs of years ago fought it out with pieces of pipe and bricks. Then, only a few bones were broken, and a good time was had by all.

In the Civil War, New York saw the famous draft-dodger hunts. Many gangs joined the police in hunting down the dodgers and battling with them when they offered resistance.

Some say that this was the way the New York police force became so largely Irish. Once Gas House gangs got in the habit of helping the police, they swung in to the police point of view. What is more, they found that they could fight and actually get paid for it.

SCOTCH INVENTION

Hopkins: I hear you have invented a new machine. What is it?

Inventor: It's a revolving nest. When the hen lays an egg, the nest revolves and the egg falls into a receptacle underneath. The hen turns around, and, seeing no egg, thinks she has made a mistake, and promptly lays another.

RESTRICTION OF OIL MOVEMENT HITS SNAG

Washington, May 23.—(AP)—The movement to voluntarily restrict the production of crude oil is finding increasing obstacles.

A meeting of oil men and government officials here today, called in the hope of formulating a definite restriction plan, produced no apparent result except to disclose that the oil producers are themselves divided on the subject while the government is reserving judgment. Another meeting is to convene in New York on Wednesday.

To what extent the withdrawal of the Gulf company may reflect the personal opinions of Secretary Mellon remains undisclosed.

Claims New Dances Develop Odd Gaits

Paris—French devotees of the Charleston and the black bottom develop a peculiar manner of walking, according to a Paris critic.

Charlestoners, he said, develop what he describes as "knock knees," while the habitual black bottomers attain an unconscious double shuffle of the ball of the foot.

The "Charleston" walk, says the critic, has become a recognized feature of the promenade along the great Parisian boulevards. Strangely enough, he adds, the Americans don't seem to have attained it. He thinks that is because the prevalence of sport in America provides in itself an easy, graceful carriage that defies the influence of exotic dance steps.

Does illness keep you from your work? A GIRL who earns her living—whether in store, office, factory or home—realizes the necessity of regular attendance at her place of employment. For this reason she works on day after day. When she becomes tired out and run-down, she feels that she must keep at her work without taking time to rest. Thousands of girls have found that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored them to a normal physical condition, and has made them fit for work. These two women testify to that fact: HEALTHY AND STRONG Silvertown, Oregon: "I am writing to tell you how much your medicine has helped me. I was doing canner work, canning, sealing, etc., but had to quit work when sick as I would be so weak I could hardly walk across the room. A friend of mine told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have found relief when sick and it helps me more each time. Every one says I am a healthier and stronger girl. I am recommending the Vegetable Compound to all my friends." Julia Schmidt, 113 Willow St., Silvertown, Oregon. LOOK AS YOUNG Fruitdale, South Dakota: "I felt badly. It seemed like my back broke all to pieces and I couldn't stoop down to get anything from the floor. Then a friend told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. So I did, and it sure has helped me. I can work all day long and I feel so good. I am 38 years old and I look just as young as if I were 20. I am glad to answer letters from any one about this medicine because it has done me good." Mrs. Francis F. Fajardo, Box 31, Fruitdale, South Dakota. Remember this package. Several weeks ago, a wild goose made its appearance on the farm of Dave Thill of Fayette. At first it was quite timid but soon became accustomed to take its place with the turkeys and chickens at feeding time. To all appearances it is just a part of the farm flock. It is believed that it is a late hatched bird, and at the time that its companions, based on their northward bound trip, was too exhausted to continue the flight. It was then in a poor and weak condition, but is now, according to a statement by Mr. Thill so fat, that it can scarcely fly at all. He believes that she has stolen a nest somewhere on his place and members of the family are watching developments with unusual interest.

Attorney Advocates Looser Booze Laws

Indianapolis, May 25.—(AP)—Reconsideration of legislative phases of prohibition was urged upon Governor Ed Jackson today by Attorney General Arthur L. Gilliom, who pointed out that whisky unlawfully obtained had been used in the treatment of the governor's wife in her recent illness.

In a letter to the governor, the attorney general urged him to recommend to the next legislature that amend the Wright bone dry law, passed two years ago, to permit the use of whisky under proper precautions, for medicinal purposes.

"We must bring about a better enforcement of the liquor law before we start tearing it down," was the reaction of E. S. Shumaker, superintendent of the Indiana Anti-Saloon League. Shumaker said that whisky possesses no medicinal qualities which pure grain alcohol does not have. Sale of the latter by registered pharmacists upon physicians' prescriptions is permitted but whisky or other intoxicants are barred for all purposes.

Talks on Health

By Dr. Morris Fishbein

The Soda Habit as a Cure-All for Stomach Aches.

When the tired business man leaves the quick lunch counter on a busy day and returns to his office, he sometimes begins to complain of stomach ache an hour or so later. He may belch either air or the gastric juice from the stomach; he may feel distended, and sometimes he complains of pain in the region of the stomach and of distinness.

Usually a friend in the office recommends to him that he get some soda at the nearest drug counter and that this will give him relief. Sometimes it does and thereupon soda becomes to him a panacea for all disorders of the stomach regardless of their cause.

Not infrequently the symptoms complained of are simply the result of eating too rapidly and swallowing a great deal of air in the process.

Digestion of food in the stomach does not proceed without the presence of a certain amount of acid. If sodium bicarbonate is used in large amounts it either stops digestion entirely or forces the membranes of the stomach to give off even more acid in an attempt to neutralize the alkali soda. Besides, much of the soda may be taken up by the blood and given off through the kidneys, placing an unusual burden on these organs.

In the case of any disability associated with the digestion of food and accompanied by severe symptoms the patient will do better to find out whether the disability is actual or only the result of bad eating habits.

A physician who investigates such a case will examine the secretions of the stomach as to the amount of acid they contain and will determine whether or not the acids need neutralization. He will also study the movement of the stomach to determine if it is passing the food along properly.

Since the symptoms referred to are not infrequently the first signs of an erosion of the stomach wall, leading perhaps to gastric ulcer or to more serious conditions, the patient will do better to place his reliance on diagnosis than on too frequent doses of baking soda.

Jungle Breath

THE RING OF DEATH

GRUESOME ORNAMENT, mystifying, deadly. At its touch men fell in an agonizing paralysis and died. No one knew its origin. Only a few knew its terrible secret. It was one of the baffling mysteries of Porto Verde.

Porto Verde, a jungle-fringed town in South America, where Elsie Marberry, a girl from the United States, encountered the enmity of a plotting band of cutthroats, a murderous gang to whom killing was as casual a performance as eating or sleeping.

A man named Vilak saved her and solved the mystery of the ring. A strange man but shrewd and courageous. Not since Sherlock Holmes has fiction produced a greater detective character. Not in years has a more entertaining adventure story been written than the story that introduces him--"Jungle Breath," by Ben Lucien Burman.

"Jungle Breath" is a story for every member of the family. Clean wholesome, red-blooded adventure. Romance. Mystery.

It starts in The Press Sunday, May 29. Watch for the opening installment.

OLD DAYS AGAIN ON MISSISSIPPI

U. S. Barge Line Reclaims Stream for River Traffic.

Dubuque, Ia., (AP)—The chant of the river roustabouts greets the coming of summer on the upper Mississippi after a lapse of 40 years.

Hammers ring along the levees and from St. Louis to St. Paul and Minneapolis there is such activity as the Father of Waters has not seen in this generation.

The river is coming into its own again.

A federal barge line begins operation this month after years of preparation and experiment, carrying freight up and down the mighty stream piled since the 50's only by ferryboats and an occasional excursion steamer.

Three towboats, two of them near completion in Dubuque boatyards, and 15 barges will inaugurate the river service between the Twin Cities and St. Louis. Another towboat and 45 more barges to be built this summer will complete a $2,000,000 fleet.

The government has tested the route with ballasted shallow-water barges and has pronounced it practical. Two million dollars have been spent on the channel from Minneapolis to Prescott, Wis., and congress has authorized a $2,780,000 navigation dam at Hastings, Minn. Minneapolis, St. Paul and Dubuque are spending another million for modern river-and-rail terminals.

The new river days may not match in picturesqueness the post bellum era when the race of the Robert E. Lee and the Natchez between St. Louis and New Orleans was a great sporting event and when Mark Twain immortalized river life.

But the new days will be busier ones.

Last year 10 times as much freight was hauled on the Mississippi as in 1884, when packets crowded the levees. Traffic has grown tremendously on the low-Mississippi since the war, with downstream barges from St. Louis carrying agricultural commodities to Memphis and New Orleans and returning laden with bauxite ore, sugar, coffee from Brazil and burlaps from India.

The northwest is watching the experiment eagerly, hoping to find in movement of grain by water the cheaper transportation heralded as one solution for agricultural ills.

R. W. Babson Discusses Farm Crops and Prices

Babson Park, Mass., May 21.—In view of the low prices for many farm products last year, and the feeling of pessimism in many farming sections, Mr. Babson was asked to give his views on the crop outlook for this fall. His official statement is as follows:

Effect of Weather.
“The advent of a new season opens the old question—how many acres will the farmers plant and what will be the final crop output? Statisticians show that while acreage is important, the final yield per acre and actual output depend primarily on growing conditions. So far, we have witnessed an early spring, but of course severe storms have covered many farming areas; freezing weather has affected the Northwest, and now severe floods in the Mississippi Valley are causing great damage to crops, particularly cotton. The flood disaster means a sharp reduction of long staple cotton in the Mississippi Valley. A great portion of the acreage will be planted to cotton and other groups the moment the flood subsides. Nevertheless, considerable area will be abandoned, which means that a larger reduction in total cotton acreage will actually take place than was originally planned by the farmer. There has never been a spring free from some inclement weather. However, from now on is the time of year to expect more favorable weather.”

Introduced to artificially stimulate the market for farm products. This was defeated. There is always great danger in artificial methods to increase price. It is far better to work out our problems through the normal course of supply and demand. The trouble is, world production has increased substantially. During the war this country was called upon to feed a large portion of Europe. Today this is not the case. Our present great problem is adjusting the rate of world as well as domestic output to a level that does not greatly exceed demand. In view of declining prices and unfavorable conditions in certain agricultural sections, it would seem as though a sincere effort would be made to cut down acreage. So far this is not the case.

Acreage in Crops.
“Preliminary reports show that intended plantings favor an increase in acreage of corn 2%, oats 3%, barley 14%, potatoes 15%, sweet potatoes 23%, and peanuts 38%. Only three leading products show a decline in intended plantings—flax 11%, rice 7%, and tobacco 3%. Even in the South where it is estimated that it is necessary to cut the cotton acreage 30% in order to form a foundation that will show a more equal condition between supply and demand, there is little hope of a cut of more than 20%. Even in the case where cotton acreage is lower, the balance of acreage is being utilized for feed and food crops.

“In the case of potatoes, the increase of 14% with average yields would produce over 410,000,000 bushels, or nearly a record crop. While this does not mean a burdensome supply per capita, it is a sharp increase over the crops of the last two years. It is easily seen that there are problems in each crop, cutting down some such as cotton and flax and avoiding an abnormal increase in others such as potatoes and feeds.

“It is surprising to find that while the prices of certain grains such as corn, oats, and rye were low last year, the actual tonnage of the ten leading farm products was the third largest on record. Given normal growing conditions, and inasmuch as acreage this year in the aggregate has not been cut more than 2%, there is no basis today for assuming that the 1927 crop production will fall materially under a year ago or under the average of recent years. As I said in the beginning, growing conditions are the controlling influence. During the past few years we have heard a great deal about 1927 being a year without a summer. This may or may not be true, but it is not wise to take an unduly pessimistic attitude on the crops for the current year. There has never been a serious world shortage of grains or foodstuffs and such a picture does not loom up at the present time. Fortunately, there is not a heavy carry-over of farm products. The farmers have done well to work off the large crops into channels of consumption. Even the carry-over of cotton which earlier in the season was expected to be around 7,000,000 bales on August 3 has been cut down materially through increased exports and heavier domestic consumption. This is a repetition of the old story that lower prices quickly increase the rate of per capita consumption.

Outlook Favorable.
“Summing up the agricultural situation, the farmers of this country are in a somewhat better position. By this I mean that in recent years a great portion of the heavy debts that accrued in 1921 have been worked off. The large crops of last year have been fairly well consumed. The season to date while spotty, is in the aggregate a normal year, although the season is prematurely advanced. The acreage, despite lower prices, has not been materially cut—approximately the same as in 1926. Now the decisive factor is the weather. No one knows what will take place. There will be storms and cold weather and there may even be an early fall, yet despite all this there is a good outlook for an average crop year.
“Taking the country as a whole, and all lines of industry, business continues to hold up well. There are more evidences of improvement, some of which are seasonal. Business stands at 8% above normal which is exceptionally good.”
