AMBASSADOR MAKES GOOD IMPRESSION

MORROW WELL RECEIVED BY MEXICAN OFFICIALS

BY DAVID LAWRENCE.

Copyright 1927, by the Escanaba Press. Washington, Nov. 22.—Senator Manuel Tellez, the Mexican ambassador to the United States, who has just returned from Mexico City, told this correspondent today that the new American ambassador, Dwight W. Morrow, had made a very favorable impression in his first conferences with Mexican officials.

Senator Tellez said that everybody was hopeful that the American ambassador would succeed in developing a new understanding of Mexico's problems and a better appreciation of Mexico's opportunity to do business with the rest of the world. The Mexican ambassador had not received the text as yet of the decision of the supreme court of Mexico on the oil land controversy but pointed out that the court usually delivered its opinions orally and then designated a justice to write the opinion for the record.

To Ask Revalidation.

Judging by the press reports of what the court said, however, the facts and circumstances in subsequent cases were the same as in the one decided there probably would be the usual number of decisions to conform to precedent. In Mexico it takes five decisions to establish a binding precedent. The Mexican courts, however, if the principle involved is the same and the facts are in accord with previous cases, usually decides a number of cases the same way and the precedent is then set.

The procedure for American companies now will be to file applications for routine revalidation of their titles under the existing law and any properties acquired before 1917, whether or not there has been any positive act of drilling, will be definitely designated as permanently in the possession of their lawful owners. All properties acquired since 1917, however, must conform to the law and fifty-year concessions will be granted. The theory of the Mexican government is that fifty years is long enough for minerals to be extracted and if it is not, there probably will be little difficulty in getting renewals on favorable terms as it always will be to the interest of the Mexican government to encourage production because tax receipts depend to no small extent on royalties from production.

Issues Still Pending.

There is at present a number of issues pending between the United States and Mexico but none is considered as acute as the controversy over oil lands. It is possible that a new commercial treaty may be negotiated embodying some of these issues so that all matters in dispute between Mexico and the United States will be cleared up. In any event the atmosphere is ripe for such an undertaking and it would not be surprising if before Mr. Morrow leaves his present post he will try to bring about such an agreement.

Junkers Plane Is Forced to Return After Starting Hop

Horta, Azores, Nov. 22.—(P)—After what appeared to be a favorable start this evening on its long relayed trans-Atlantic flight from the Azores to Newfoundland, the Junkers plane D-1280 came back to port a few hours later. She was in tow and while no exact details of her misadventure are yet available it is supposed that her heavy weight did not permit of the continuance of the flight.

ADJOURN COAL RATES HEARING

Northwestern Consumers to Be Heard Nov. 29 at Minneapolis

Washington, Nov. 22.—(P)—After eliciting today the views of consumers and of railroads only indirectly concerned in the contest over lake cargo coal rates, the Interstate Commerce Commission adjourned the hearings on the subject until November 29, when northwestern consumers will be heard in Minneapolis.

Governor Christianson of Minnesota, told the commission today that he represented the multitude of northwestern consumers of coal in protesting against the temporary refusal of the commission to allow roads serving West Virginia, Tennessee and Kentucky to reduce lake cargo coal rates to 20 cents per ton.

Northern Roads Cut Rates.

Mose Glenn, chairman of the Kentucky railroad commission, likewise filed a statement favoring the southern reduction.

W. N. King, counsel for the New York Central, and speaking for the principal coal roads serving Ohio and Pennsylvania, declared that the latest stages of the controversy began when the commission last summer ordered a cut in lake cargo rates from Ohio and Pennsylvania of 20 cents per ton, which the southern roads are now endeavoring to parallel for their own territory.

Attorneys for the Norfolk and Western and Louisville and Nashville railroads declared that the carriers they represented might consider this a way out, but the proposal was questioned on behalf of the Chesapeake and Ohio, one of the other large coal carriers.

LOSE APPEAL FROM SENTENCE OF DEATH

Northwestern Consumers to Be Heard Nov. 29 at Minneapolis

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 22.—(P)—The execution of Ruth Snyder and Henry Judd Gray "probably will be" the week of January 9, William J. Armstrong, clerk of the court of appeals, said tonight.

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 22.—(P)—Ruth Snyder, the blonde New York housewife, who denied her guilt to the last, and Henry Judd Gray, her mild-mannered paramour, who told freely how they both strangled and beat Ruth's half-sleeping husband to death today lost their joint appeal from sentence of death.

Both are in the death house at Sing Sing. The date of execution is expected to be set by the court of appeals here tomorrow. If Mrs. Snyder dies, she will be the third woman executed in New York state.

Mrs. Snyder's confession before trial which she repudiated as forced from her while nervous and overworked weighed against her in the court of appeals decision today which affirmed the death penalty.

The court did not consider the evidence except as to whether it concerned the point of appeal which was that the trial was unfair because the defendants were tried jointly instead of separately.

The decision found the trial had been scrupulously fair, and that Ruth's own early confession removed the possibility of substantial injury, to her from presentation to the trial jury of Judd's confession.

At the trial, Ruth was often defiant and blazing and always keen. She put the whole blame on Gray. Judd followed her on the stand, confessing freely, seeming to ease his own conscience and making no plea for mercy.

The evidence showed that in their relations she often showed dominance.

Her most descriptive phrase of her paramour was brought out from her correspondence as: "Darnd loveable little cuss."

The story brought out by the trial was that Albert J. Snyder, yachting magazine editor, and Ruth went to a Saturday night party in Queens Village, their greater New York home, on Mar. 19, last. Judd Gray waited, concealed in the Snyder home.

After Snyder's return and retirement to sleep, Ruth and Judd had some drinks. Ruth maintained that Judd then beat her husband with a window with weight and strangled him with wire. Gray said that Snyder seemed to go getting the better of their struggle and Ruth helped him kill her husband.

Gray asserted that Ruth had been urging him for a long time to kill Snyder, and told how he plotted the killing, even buying the window sash weight in another city while traveling about New York state, selling corsets, his regular occupation. He expressed his sorrow at the trouble he brought on his own wife and daughter.

Evidence showed Mrs. Snyder increased her husband's life insurance to approximately $500,000, just previous to his death.

CALLES HELPED STRIKE, CHARGE

Sent $100,000 to England, Statement of Hearst Papers Today

New York, Nov. 22.—(P)—The Hearst newspapers, tomorrow in the ninth of a series of articles, copyrighted by the Washington Herald, will say that President Calles of Mexico aided the coal strike in England last year with $100,000.

The Mexican president ordered his treasury department to cable the money to the Mexican minister in London, June 4, 1926, the article will say, while the British empire was still feeling the effects of the general strike that had terminated May 12, last year.

A translation of what is purported to be the presidential order says that Calles ordered the money delivered to the fund of the coal miners' union, as a secret aid contributed by the government of Mexico to the maintenance of the ideals of the proletariat.

Before extending this aid to the British coal strikers, the article will say, Calles authorized an American writer, Dr. Ernest H. Gruening, to study the situation in England and ordered a pay warrant for $10,000 drawn in favor of Dr. Gruening.

Fac-similes of the two purported presidential orders, documents which the article will say are from the Mexican secret archives, will be printed.

Evidence in the possession of Hearst papers, the article will say, shows that the Mexican government also sent $250,000 to Arcos, Ltd., of London, the Russian trade organization raided by British police for further transfer to Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet foreign minister.

Marine Patrol in Fight With Bandits

Managua, Nicaragua, Nov. 22.—(P)—A joint combat patrol of U. S. marines and national guards under Lieut. H. Satterfield engaged a group of bandits yesterday afternoon six miles northeast of Telepaneca. Three of the bandits were killed. There were no casualties among the marines or guards.

Patrols are sent out daily from Occotal, but apart from minor engagements and skirmishes there has been no fighting near the Honduras border, according to information received by Col. Louis M. Gulek, in command of the marines. Some malcontents from Honduras cross the border occasionally to join the forces of the rebel, General Sardinia, but the frontier is being watched closely to prevent this as far as possible.

Lansing, Nov. 22.—(P)—W. W. Potter, attorney general, served notice today that a hearing in Sault Ste. Marie, November 30, would be held to discuss the decree to carry out Judge Louis H. Feed's order throwing the House of David colony into receivership and exiling Benjamin Purcell.

Defense and prosecution attorneys will confer upon the details incident to carrying out Judge Feed's mandate. An agreement as to the terms of the decree is hoped for. Otherwise, the court will dictate the terms.

STATEMENT ISSUED AT CONFERENCE

NEWSPAPER MEN HEAR OBJECTIONS MADE VERBALLY

Washington, Nov. 22.—(P)—In unqualified terms President Coolidge let it be known today that the first specific attempt to force the Republican convention to nominate him as its candidate next year had incurred his displeasure.

Breaking a silence of nearly four months, the White House disclosed the president's views in a sharp criticism of the movement started by a Boston broker to circulate the country by a chain letter system in an endeavor to build up such a dominant sentiment for Mr. Coolidge that his nomination by the Republicans would amount to a nationwide demand.

In a direct and positive manner it was made known that the president disapproved the circulation of the petitions, that he failed to see that any good could come from the move and that he hoped that their circulation would be discontinued.

The manner in which this first amplification of what Mr. Coolidge is thinking in connection with his political future since his famous Black Hills "do not choose" statement of August 2, brought forth a situation of constants and contrasts. Like his pronouncement last summer, today's statement was made to newspaper correspondents and again it caused a stir such as only something of first importance can do.

But, unlike the statement of August 2 which was neatly typed on small plain white slips of paper and handed to the correspondents personally by the president, today's announcement was made verbally and without the authority of a direct quotation.

On August 2 his declaration was made to newspaper men in an unadorned classroom of a prairie town schoolhouse; today the first amplification was pronounced amid the luxury of a White House office.

Direct Quotation Not Allowed. And even as the first broadcast was received with a mixture of feelings as to just what Mr. Coolidge meant, the amplification caused by a tendency to gather force for that group which believes the president intends to leave the White House on March 4, 1929.

Made during a regular presidential conference with the Washington correspondents, today's declaration, under the rules, could not be published as a direct quotation, nor presented as an official White House declaration. The rules require that whatever is made known on behalf of the president at these conferences must be published on the news writers' own responsibility and while the bi-weekly meetings have come to be considered in at least a semi-official light, news stories derived therefrom never have claimed the unqualified authority which obtains from a written document.

After Mr. Coolidge's opposition to the circulation had been disclosed, a request was made to permit publication of his views as a direct quotation from the president, but it was ruled that the statement would have to be presented in the same way as other White House news.

Tax Reduction Set at $235,820,000 by Ways and Means Committee

Washington, Nov. 22.—(P)—Disposing in rapid order of all major issues entering into the question of tax reduction, the house ways and means committee today approved a program calling for a total cut in revenue rates of $235,820,000.

The program is expected to be whipped into bill form immediately so that reading of the measure may be started before the week-end for possible change in its provisions.

While the committee, according to its own computations, kept well within the $250,000,000 maximum reduction set by itself, it exceeded by slightly more than $10,000,000, the figure proposed by the treasury.

It also refused to adhere to any of the major recommendations submitted by the department.

Out Corporation Tax. Chairman Green explained that the committee in placing the total prospective cut at nearly $236,000,000, had used its own figures and that is certain estimates submitted by Undersecretary Mills of the treasury had been taken as a basis, the total reduction would approximate $249,000,000.

At the outset of its session today, the committee by a vote of 22 to 1, approved reduction of the tax rate on corporation incomes from 13 1/2 to 11 1/2 against the 12 per cent suggested by Secretary Mellon.

This action came after rejection, 16 to 7, of a proposal to cut the rate to 11 per cent.

The committee estimated the loss in revenue by this reduction at $166,000,000, while Mr. Green said the treasury figures would call for a loss of $180,000,000.

A motion also was approved to increase from $2,000 to $3,000 the exemption granted domestic corporations with a net income of $25,000 or less. The estimated loss in revenue was placed at $12,000,000.

On another vote, 18 to 5, the sales tax on automobiles was lifted from 3 to 1 1/2 per cent, after a move to reduce it to 2 per cent had failed, 17 to 4. The estimated loss in revenue is $35,000,000.

The committee balloted 15 to 3 to increase from 75 cents to $1 the exemption on admission tickets. A move to raise the exemption to $1.50 was reflected 13 to 8 and another proposal to exempt up to $3 was defeated 15 to 1. The loss to the treasury is estimated at $8,000,000.

At the same time, the committee voted 13 to 8 to increase from 10 to 25 per cent the tax on $5 or higher priced tickets to boxing matches, estimating the increase at $500,000.

Another ballot, 15 to 1, cut in half club dues. The tax on stock transfers was cut from 2 to 1 cent on $100 of value; the 1 cent tax on the sale of produce on exchange was repealed and the tax on wines was restored to its pre-war level.

Witnesses Testify in Trial Against Young Farmer

Laverne, Ala., Nov. 22.—(P)—Eye-witness accounts of the seizure of Annie May Sommons, a negro, by a group of five white men who fogged her in July, 1925, were given a jury trial here today in the trial of Shelby Gregory, young farmer, for complicity in the lashing.

Gregory is the first of 34 men indicted in connection with a series of floggings in this county to be tried.

Today's proceedings were enlivened by an encounter in the courtroom between newspaper photographers and Cecil Davis, as a former grand titan of the Ku Klux Klan, who had been summoned as a witness.

Enraged over the efforts of photographers to get his picture, he smashed the plates in one camera before the cameraman recovered from his surprise at the attack.

Several witnesses today told how five men had kidnapped the Sommons woman from the home of Lee Henderson, a negro, and fogged her.

NO UPRISINGS IN COLORADO STRIKE AREA

NATIONAL GUARD ON WATCH; STRIKERS WILL APPEAL

Denver, Colo., Nov. 22.—(P)—The Colorado coal fields, torn by an I. W. W. strike for more than five weeks were quiet today as national guard troops took charge of the northern Colorado territory where five strikers were killed and a score injured by state police yesterday.

Carrying out their plans formed at a mass meeting the night before, the strikers staged no demonstrations of any kind in northern Colorado today. With the strikers remaining in their homes, the little coal mining villages of Erie, Frederic took on a deserted look as hardly a person appeared on the streets, where for the last few weeks the miners have gathered daily to discuss the strike situation.

A number of the strikers wounded in yesterday's clash still were in a serious condition today but no new deaths were reported.

Columbine mine in Weld county where the shooting occurred yesterday has been made headquarters for the national guard troops, but three companies have been sent to other mines in the northern field.

Fighting For Principle. J. C. Nesbit, one of the strike committee in the northern field, told the Associated Press today that there absolutely would be no violence. He added that the miners were going to stay away from work until they were granted the Jacksonville wage scale, and that they were going to win the strike by peaceful means.

Mr. Nesbit's statement conformed with one made early today by David Sheehan, member of a committee representing the strikers that they "were fighting for a principle" and would not resort to violence. The statement followed secret meetings of the strikers at Lafayette and Erie.

In his statement, Mr. Sheehan declared the men who freed on the strikers were "hired assassins of John D. Rockefeller, Jr.," and that the strikers might protest to Gov. W. H. Adams against the use of state guardsmen.

Mr. Rockefeller at New York would make no statement about the charge that the men who fired on the striking miners in Colorado were his "hired assassins."

Fields Are Quiet. An appeal to withhold the military and restrict state police to their "legitimate business of protecting the public peace without prejudice to the strikers," was telegraphed from New York to Governor Adams by Forest Bailey, director of the American Civil Liberties Union.

None of the northern Colorado mines attempted to operate today and the owners did not make known their plans for resuming work in that part of the state. In the southern Colorado fields, the mines reported slightly increased working forces. In Huerfano county, once the hotbed of the strike, there was no activity on the part of the strikers today. In Las Animas county in southern Colorado, five men were arrested on picketing charges near Aguilera, but no serious disturbances were reported.

Members of the Weld county coroner's jury will fix responsibility for two of the five deaths yesterday, two of the Columbine mine today to look over the place where the strikers met their deaths. The jury will testify in Greeley tomorrow to bear testimony concerning the deaths. On the following day, a Boulder county coroner's jury will conduct an inquest over the three remaining strikers who were killed. All of the state police who opened fire with their pistols on the group of strikers have been called as witnesses.

Governor Green on Grand Island for Short Visit

Marquette, Nov. 22.—(P)—Gov. Fred W. Green and a party of friends are on Grand Island for a few days. It was learned here Tuesday night. With him are Judge A. D. Wood, state parole commissioner, and R. F. Dean of Lansing.

It was reported in Lansing that the governor left Camp Kennedy, where he was snow-bound for several days, Sunday, and went to Grand Island Monday.

Police Score First in War on Rival Chicago Gangsters; 1 Dead

Chicago, Nov. 22.—(P)—The police scored first today in the grim war to the death between rival gangsters for control of gambling and bootlegging privileges.

A gangster was dead from a police bullet, 13 others alleged by police to be implicated in plots to kill their rivals faced charges ranging from disorderly conduct to conspiracy to commit murder, and police squads with machine guns in armored automobiles searched for new gangsters to conquer.

Even "Scar Face" Al Capone, one of the few gang leaders to escape death in the gang war of extermination two years ago and the object of an assassination plot in the present feud, did not escape authorities.

Immaculately groomed, even to suits and a cane, the youthful

Capone, surrounded by surly, grim-faced body guards, appeared in police court today to answer to a charge of disorderly conduct which was dismissed.

Then, still surrounded by his lieutenants, he was whisked away to his hotel which virtually has been transformed into an armed fortress.

Shortly after Capone's trip to court one of his enemies, Joseph Herbert, brother of "Big Earl" Herbert, bodyguard of Joe Salita, South Side gangster recently acquitted of murder.

Herbert's body was found in a doorway on the South Side where he had died after being shot by a police squad, summoned by a saloon keeper who said Herbert and a companion had threatened him when he refused to buy Salita's beer.

GILES FORCED BACK TO LAND

Aviator Had Started Hope to Australia; Plane Goes "Haywire"

Los Angeles, Nov. 22.—(P)—Capt. Frederick A. Giles, who set out today from San Francisco in a trans-Pacific flight to Australia, informed the Examiner by telephone tonight that he had been forced back after traveling 500 miles to sea and had landed near the William Randolph Hearst ranch at San Simeon, Cal.

Utterly beyond his trans-Pacific biplane went completely "haywire," 500 miles out at sea—went spinning into an "air pocket" and finally turned upside down, scattering his charts, his food and his instruments into the ocean below, Giles said.

And then, Captain Giles turned his damaged plane right side up again, making a wild guess as to her direction and sent her roaring back to the mainland to make a perfect and safe landing a mile south of the Hearst ranch at San Simeon, 50 miles from San Luis Obispo.

"I never expected to make it," he said over the telephone from the Hearst ranch tonight. "My center section trailing wires had snapped; I had dumped my main gas tanks to lighten the strain on the broken plane and the chances were just about zero. But luck stayed with me—I hit the coast about 60 miles north of where I landed, and had to keep my ship in the air for all that distance before I finally found a landing place at San Simeon."

"Well, what are you going to do?" he was then asked. Like a flash, "Why I'm going to try again," he laughed. "I'm going to fix the ship and fly her back to San Francisco. And then, as soon as the moon's full and I can get new charts, I'll be off again. I've started to fly to Australia and by George, I'm going to do it."

"One more thing," he said. "I think that my whole experience solves definitely the mystery of what happened to the lost Dole racer. I had a biplane and it was only by the sheerest luck that I survived what I went through. A monoplane is much less stable than a biplane; it wouldn't have had a chance in the weather that turned me over. You can see what must have happened."

Giles made his perfect three-point landing at San Simeon at 3:20 o'clock this afternoon. Eight hours before he had hopped from Mills field in a perfect take-off.

From the moment he passed the Farallone islands he was lost. Ships at sea kept sharp lookout for him, but reported nothing. Uneasiness began to grow as the hours passed and the ships he should have passed failed to report him.

Ran Into Bad Weather. "The weather was fine until I got about 300 miles out, when it started getting bad. Cloudy with rain squalls," said the flyer, "and I began to feel those air pockets they have out there over the Pacific—the same things that must have spelled curtains for Jack Frost and Bill Erwin and Augy Pedlar and Miss Doran, you know."

"It wasn't bad enough to stop me, though; I figured I'd get through. But my luck was out—or maybe it's 'in'. Four hundred and eighty miles out I ran into utterly foul weather. The clouds were very thick and low and there were incessant rain squalls. There wasn't much wind, but the pockets were awful."

Lock Sheriff in Cell; 2 Prisoners Escape from Jail

Ithaca, Mich., Nov. 22.—(P)—Darmon Hamp and Lawrence Stillman, charged with robbery, escaped from the Grace county jail here today after locking Sheriff Jay L. Smith in one of the cells. Smith was released by his daughter, Creta, who heard his cries and opened the cell with a duplicate set of keys. Five other prisoners remained in their cells.

Sheriff Smith was met by Stillman as the former started his morning inspection and struck over the head with the butt of a pistol. The sheriff's keys were taken from him and he was dumped in a cell. It is thought the men escaped in an automobile waiting them near the jail.

Hamp and Stillman were charged with robbing the Simmons brothers' warehouse of Alma, Mich., two months ago.

May Ask for Grand Jury Investigation Following Charges

Lansing, Nov. 22.—(P)—Unless federal agents who have been investigating conditions in and near Port Huron divulge additional information it is improbable that the St. Clair county prosecutor or the state will ask for a grand jury investigation.

W. W. Potter, attorney general, conferred here today with Jesse F. Wolcott, St. Clair prosecuting attorney.

According to Wolcott, the federal men have demanded that he petition the circuit judge for a grand jury inquiry. The federal agents, however, refused to reveal their proof, the names of witnesses or their evidence, Wolcott said.

The prosecutor stated as nearly as he could determine the only charge made by the federal men is that the Port Huron police and the county sheriff's department may have been lax in enforcing the law. Nothing has been laid before him alleging criminal action on the part of any officer, he stated.

In view of the circumstances and the secrecy of the federal operatives, Attorney General Potter agreed with Wolcott that there is no justifiable ground for asking for a grand jury. The attorney general took the position that if the federal agents have proof of wrongdoing and refuse to reveal it to the state and county officials they should seek a federal grand jury inquiry.

Murder of Young Business Man Is Laid to Negress

Wrightsville, Ga., Nov. 22.—(P)—The murder of Fred Daley, young business man, was laid today to Leona Rogers, a negro woman.

Police who arrested her on a warrant charging murder said that when they entered her home in Dublin, near here, she poured kerosene on her clothes and tried to set them afire, and later tried to bleed herself to death by pricking her arms.

Daley was shot to death in his automobile late Monday night in front of his boarding place here and the 30-year-old negress was traced by prints of high-heeled shoes. Gloves, found under the car, were said to be hers.

The woman told various accounts, police said, but in her cell here, she stoutly denied that she had seen Daley for ten days before the shooting. She declared he was the father of her five-year-old son.

Two negro men who were said to have been seen with the Rogers woman the night of the killing, were held today as material witnesses. One was said to have lent her a .32 calibre pistol and at the coroner's inquest which was not completed today, it was testified that the young bachelor had been slain with such a weapon.

Wants Coolidge to Open Negotiations to Outlaw All War

Washington, Nov. 22.—(P)—A resolution which would request President Coolidge to enter negotiations with France and "like minded nations" for treaties outlawing war has been prepared by Senator Capper, Republican, Kansas, for submission to the next congress.

Senator Capper, who is a member of the senate foreign relations committee, proposes also that the treaties should provide that the governments were "not to give aid and comfort" to aggressor nations in warfare.

In the preamble of his resolution the text of which was made public today, Senator Capper recalls the willingness expressed last April by Foreign Minister Briand of France to negotiate a treaty with the United States to outlaw war and calls attention that the present arbitration treaty between France and the United States expires next February.

SOVIET BOATS ON BLACK SEA

War Vessels Out to Recapture Former Russian Steamers

Bucharest, Nov. 22.—(P)—The reported sudden appearance on the Black Sea of several Soviet war vessels pushed politics of the front page of Rumanian newspapers today and caused what appeared a real scare throughout the country.

For several days, Soviet torpedo boats have been reported patrolling the routes usually followed by Rumanian and foreign mail and passenger steamers, causing the Rumanian admiralty to arm all its larger vessels. The purpose of the Soviet vessels is said to be to capture all vessels formerly belonging to the White Russian Wrangel fleet, but Rumanian vessels are taking no chances.

The secret police sent a wireless to the captain of the steamship Rumania, enroute from Constantinople to Constanza, warning him that two Russian torpedo boats were cruising on the Black Sea, intending to capture former Wrangel vessels.

Although the Rumania does not come within this category, the captain ordered all lights extinguished immediately and started full speed toward Constanza. The passengers had a thrilling midnight race at top speed across the Black Sea in complete darkness, and the steamer arrived four hours ahead of time. The passengers declared that the Rumania was pursued all the way across, but this could not be verified.

The steamer Dacla leaving for Alexandria and the steamer Princess Maria leaving for Constantinople today had detachments of marines aboard.

The steamer Gheorghe Patro, which formerly belonged to the Wrangles fleet, fears to leave Constanza because of possible capture by the Soviet vessels.

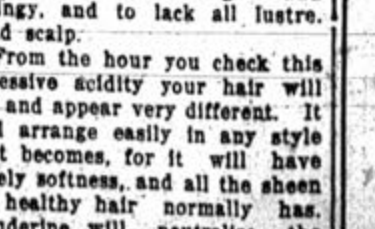

Rumanian marine officials at Constanza today sent a wireless message to the captain of the steamer Rascanun, enroute from Constantinople to Constanza, telling him that among his passengers were eight Russians with false passports who intended to provoke a revolt among the crew of the vessel.

Has Held Maneuvers. Rumanian captains also have been warned to be on the lookout for Bolshevik pirates who are said to be increasingly active since the expulsion of Leon Trotsky from the Communist party in Russia and whose intention is alleged to start a widespread revolt among Black Sea towns from Odessa to Constantinople.

At intervals during the last three months, the Soviet fleet is stated to have held maneuvers near the Rumanian, Bulgarian and Turkish coasts, causing much apprehension in those countries. At Constanza, recently, several Soviet destroyers came inside Rumanian territorial waters in plain view of army and navy officers who hurried to prepare resistance to any attack.

Have You Acid Scalp?

If your hair won't keep the simplest wave for several days, there is probably too much acidity. A condition that causes hair to be stubbornly straight and stringy, and to lack all lustre, acid scalp.

From the hour you check this excessive acidity your hair will act and appear very different. It will arrange easily in any style that becomes, for it will have lovely softness, and all the sheen all healthy hair normally has. Danderine will neutralize the acid, and actually dissolve every particle of dandruff scale. Your hair won't need anything else to keep it fresh, wholesome, and free from the least objectionable taint that is too often noticed in otherwise fastidious women.

Counsel for State Will Not Be Heard by Supreme Court

Washington, Nov. 22.—(P)—In deciding that it was unnecessary to hear counsel for the state in the appeal of Arthur Rich, wealthy Michigan youth now serving a life sentence for a criminal attack upon a young woman, the supreme court took action today which, under customary procedure, indicates dismissal of the appeal on an early decision day.

Interrupting counsel for the youth in his argument that the state had no right to transfer the Rich trial to another court after it had started, justices of the court took an opposite view and after consultation on the bench, Chief Justice Taft announced that counsel for the state would not be required to present their argument.

Basing his plea for the intervention of the federal courts upon the ground that he had been deprived of a constitutional right in the vicinity of the crime when he had been removed by the state for trial in an adjoining court, counsel for Rich asserted that the controversy was of national importance because it involved the right of states to move criminal prosecutions after they had failed to obtain conviction in another court.

Find Mutilated Bodies of Three

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 22.—(P)—The mutilated bodies of Mrs. Johnnie Clark, 36, her daughter, Mabel, 16, and her niece, Marie Miller, 6, negroes, were discovered this evening by William Clark, Bethlehem Steel company employe, husband of the slain woman, when he returned to his small flat in a row of tenements in First street, Lackawanna, N. Y.

Under a raincoat were the bodies of his wife and niece, battered, hacked and slashed. A few feet from the bodies, upright against the stove, was a blood-stained mason's hammer. The body of his daughter had been covered with her own coat. Upright against the wall near the body was a blood-spattered axe. In his daughter's hand was a carving knife, blood-covered, and with every indication that it had been placed in her hand by the slayer.

The only apparent motive for the crime is robbery, as Clark told detectives he had given his wife his pay envelope containing $50 on Monday night. No money was found in the house.

BRAIN TESTS FOR SOLDIERS

War Department Adopts New Set of Intelligence Tests

Washington—Intelligence tests for applicants for enlistment, with a view of weeding out unsuitable persons are being used by the Department of War, according to an announcement just issued. The full text of the statement follows:

In its continuous search for new and improved methods, the adoption of which will render the service more effective and efficient in peace time as well as in the event of a national emergency, the War Department has recently inaugurated an innovation in the use of an intelligence to determine the suitability of applicants for first enlistment in the Regular Army. These tests were designed with the view of segregating and rejecting before enlistment from among the so-called border line class, those who have heretofore been enlisted and later discharged for some deficiency which could not be definitely established as disqualifying without such a test.

Cover Wide Field. The tests are comprehensive and cover a wide field. They have been placed in operation only after a careful study by a board of officers convened for the purpose of considering the advisability of such a test and formulating designs which might be relied upon to produce the desired results.

The necessary equipment having been prepared the test was given a preliminary try-out in one recruiting district in each of the nine Corps Areas in the United States. The reports of the results obtained in this connection were so gratifying, and the recommendations so favorable to adoption, that it has been decided to introduce the tests for use throughout the entire Recruiting Service.

Woman's Club Flays Fashion Designer

Minneapolis, Nov. 22.—(P)—Members of the Minneapolis Woman's club sent a letter today to the New York manager of Paul Poiret, Paris fashion designer, characterizing Poiret's recent performance here as an imposition and "the biggest farce yet put over on the American people."

"Paid under protest" was written on the $2,000 check given Poiret after club members had met a $500 deficit in box office receipts, the club heads announced.

Offer Prizes for Best Snapshots for High School Annual

Nearly all the pictures for the 1928 "Escanaban," have been taken, Mr. Swanson, advisor of the annual staff, has announced.

However, in order that the best snapshots can be secured to complete the group, the high school athletic association has offered two prizes, one to be awarded to the person who hands in the best snapshot and the other to the person who hands in the best group of snapshots. The prizes offered are season tickets to the basketball games. One person cannot receive both prizes, so it is expected that many snapshots will be turned over to the annual staff. Snapshots must be of students who are attending Escanaba high school at the present time.

Second Husband Hangs Selt But Wife Is Bigamist

Centerville, Mich., Nov. 22.—(P)—Despite the fact that her second husband committed suicide so that he would not have to testify against her, Mrs. Mary E. Johnson-Wood was found guilty of bigamy by a jury here today. Arthur E. Wood, 62, a drayman, and father of ten children, told authorities after a quarrel that she had married him without a divorce from Frank Johnson of Battle Creek.

Mrs. Johnson-Wood was arrested, and Wood, repenting his action, hanged himself in August in the hope, it was indicated, that he would save her from a prison term.

Following Wood's death the authorities pressed the charge and the woman was placed on trial here yesterday. The case went to the jury early today and the verdict was returned four hours later. Nine men and three women made up the jury.

Los Angeles, Nov. 22.—(P)—Thomas Johnson, former superintendent of public instruction, today got an answer in the Ingham circuit court denying the allegation of the attorney general that there was a shortage of approximately $2,000 in his accounts. Johnson averred that all funds have been accounted for, that he sent money out of his own pocket for which he has never been reimbursed and that the state owes him back salary.

Chicago — Clarence Rowland, for several years a member of the American League staff of umpires, seeks to return to his former position as big league manager.

Rowland won a pennant and world series with the Chicago White Sox in 1917 and feels that he is still capable of turning in a good job as manager.

It is understood Rowland has let it be known that he would welcome a chance at Cleveland, to succeed Jack McCallister, doomed to go.

Rowland admits he much prefers a managerial job and says he took up umpiring merely to keep in close touch with the game.

AMUSEMENTS

AT THE DELFT. Discovered—a book that contains the sources of all present-day motion picture "gags!" According to Douglas MacLean, it's the "Arabian Nights" and the smiling comedian discovered its comprehensive scope while conducting his researches preparatory to filming "Soft Cushions" the modern comedy tale with an Arabian Nights setting which Paramount brings to the Delft today.

"Humor changes its form with the age but the fundamental thing that makes a given incident funny hasn't changed since somebody dropped the first banana peel," MacLean claims. "The proof of it is that the 'Arabian Nights' tales contain the basis for every comedy 'gag' developed by our funniest modern humorists.

"The late George Randolph Chester, who wrote the original screen story of 'Soft Cushions' realized this fact. That is why it was possible for him to evolve an absolutely modern comedy—one that could be played just as well in twentieth century clothes and settings—against the more colorful background of the Orient a thousand years ago.

"Chester wrote a fast-moving story with plenty of screen 'gags' and our staff writers added some of their own. Despite the ancient background, everything in the story is modern. Yet a thorough reading of the 'Arabian Nights' will prove that they were all unconscious plagiarists; every funny thought suggested has its roots in this older record of contemporary humor!"

ESCANABA HAS 'LUCKY LINDIES'

Two Youths Uninjured When Their Rebuilt Plane Crashes

Beginners' luck is no myth. Three months hard work by three amateur aviation enthusiasts culminated yesterday morning about 11 o'clock, when their ship went into a tail spin and crashed just west of the athletic field here, while Wilford Pataja, 19, of Laurium, Mich., with Orrin McClosky, 20, of Wells, had it up on a test flight.

The plane was a rebuilt affair, having been assembled by Pataja, his brother and a friend in their evenings and spare time. It was equipped with spurs as a landing gear instead of the usual wheels to facilitate landing on the snow.

It was recently completed and Pataja, who had only about an hour's instruction in flying, piloted the plane on two or three successful flights. Yesterday morning he took off with McClosky as passenger, and while flying at about an altitude of 300 feet the plane went into a spin. He managed to right it just above ground, but it dropped into another, striking the ground

Deer Are Easy to Catch in Isabella

While some hunters have come back only with stories of how difficult it is to hunt deer this season, a report comes from an Isabella resident that he caught one in his arms last Thursday. Several witnesses have attested to the authenticity of the report. According to the story told, the small doe had battled with a dog for several hours until both animals were exhausted. Victor Chandonnals of Isabella intervened in the struggle, shoed the dog away and picked up the small deer in his arms, carrying it to his home. When the deer was sufficiently rested, he allowed it to escape into the woods.

Marcel Venne of Iroquois Falls, Ont., spells Escanaba as he probably pronounces it, when he addressed a letter to the "city clerk, Skennobie, Michigan", it reached City Clerk Carl E. to production and a greater variety and spread of customers. We have shifted our merchandising methods to a great degree from advance orders to hand-to-mouth buying—making for less inventories and thus less hazards in price movements.

HOOPER ON PROSPERITY.
Has the business cycle been abolished, or will we have a periodic repetition of old-fashioned "hard times"?

Here is the opinion of Herbert Hoover, as given in an interview just printed in the Magazine of Wall Street:

"I can say that I believe that the profound forces which have been in motion in the whole business world, particularly during the past 15 years, are making for greater stability, and have, in my view, greatly mitigated the violence of the business cycle.

"It seems impossible that the old terror-stricken panic can ever return, and I fervently hope that these periodic stretches of heart-breaking unemployment, back-breaking prices to farmers, bankruptcies to business men through no fault of their own, are on their way to history if only continue wise.

"Many factors contribute to this hope. The Federal Reserve System has already proved its ability to guarantee against money panics. It gives a large measure of assurance of a continuous flow of credit. Business concerns have today larger working capitals of their own. I. e., less proportion of inventories carried on bank loans. All this contributes to freedom from interruption of production and distribution through accidental or artificial restriction of credit.

"One of the supposed broader causes of the business cycle was that in the rise from a slump, increased employment brought larger savings and profits, that these savings and profits sought employment in expansion of industry which in time brought about over-expansion and over-production, thence the slump again. One might conceive this to be true if the variety of business was limited and if increased production did not bring about decreased costs and consequent wider consumption. If all savings had to be poured back into expansion of the industries from which they were derived, and if there were no expansion in demand for their products, this would probably be true.

"If, on the other hand, the demand for capital was for new industry, such as was recently the case in automobiles, and still is for electrical power and apparatus, foreign loans, better homes, processes of production in old industries, then this mechanistic theory would be less applicable. This is to a great extent taking place. We have an increasing skill in business and technical direction, in scientific discovery and invention due to the enormous spread of education. Thus we have constantly new fields for investment in new products meeting new satisfaction.

"We have a large growth of cooperative sense in business—an increased feeling of mutual responsibility and an undoubted decrease in wasteful labor conflicts. Our foreign trade has greatly expanded, thus giving a wider base

The BENS ON MURDER CASE

by S. S. VAN DINE • CHARLES BRONKHORST

CHAPTER LX.
Just as a sculptor, who thoroughly understands the principles of form and composition, can accurately supply any missing integral part of a statue, Vance explained, "so can the psychologist who understands the human mind, supply any missing factor in a given human action."
"I might add, parenthetically, that all this blather about the missing arms of the Aphrodite of Melos—the Milo Venus, y' know—is the utterst fiddle-faddle. Any competent artist who knew the laws of aesthetic organization could restore the arms exactly as they were originally. Such restorations are merely a matter of context,—the missing factor, d'ye see, simply has to conform and harmonize with what is already known."

He made one of his rare gestures of delicate emphasis. "Now, the problem of circumventing suspicion is an important detail in every deliberated crime. And since the general conception of this particular crime was positive, conclusive and concrete, it followed that each one of its component parts would be positive, conclusive and concrete."

"Therefore, for the Major merely to have arranged things so that he himself should not be suspected, would have been too negative a conception to fit consistently with the other psychological aspects of the deed. It would have been too vague, too indirect, too indel'nite. "The type of literal mind which conceived this crime would logically have provided a specific and tangible object of suspicion. Consequently, when the material evidence began to pile up against the Captain, and the Major waxed vehement in defending him, I knew he had been chosen as the dupe."

"At first, I admit, I suspected the Major of having selected Miss St. Clair as the victim; but when I learned that the presence of her gloves and hand-bag at Benson's was only an accident, and remembered that the Major had given us Pfyfe as a source of information about the Captain's threat, I realized that her projection into the role of murderer was unpremeditated."

A little later Markham rose and stretched himself. "Well, Vance," he said, "your task is finished. Mine has just begun. And I need sleep."

Before a week had passed, Major Anthony Benson was indicted for the murder of his brother. His trial before Judge Rudolph Hansacker, as you remember, created a nation-wide sensation. The press associations sent columns daily and for weeks the front pages of the country's newspapers were emblazoned with spectacular reports of the proceedings.

How the district attorney's office won the case after a bitter struggle; how, because of the indirect character of the evidence, the verdict was for murder in the second degree; and how, after a retrial in the court of appeals, Anthony Benson finally received a sentence of from 20 years to life,—all these facts are a matter of official and public record. Markham personally did not appear as public prosecutor. Having been a life-long friend of the defendant's, his position was an unenviable and difficult one, and no word of criticism was directed against his assignment of the case to Chief Assistant District Attorney Sullivan.

Major Benson surrounded himself with an array of counsel such as is rarely seen in our criminal courts. Both Blashfield and Bauer were among the attorneys for the defense—Blashfield fulfilling the duties of the English solicitor, and Bauer acting as advocate. They fought with every legal device at their disposal, but the accumulation of evidence against their client overwhelmed them.

After Markham had been convinced of the Major's guilt, he had made a thorough examination of the business affairs of the two brothers, and found the situation even worse than had been indicated by Stitt's first report. The firm's securities had been systematically appropriated for private speculations; but where, as Alvin Benson had succeeded in covering himself and making a large profit, the Major had been almost completely wiped out by his investments. Markham was able to show that the Major's only hope of replacing the diverted securities and saving himself from criminal prosecution lay in Alvin Ben-

LYRICS OF LIFE

By Douglas Malloch
Copyright 1927 by Douglas Malloch
WE TALK OF LIFE.
We talk and talk of life and living
As though they were a puzzling thing.
Yet find no way to sing but sing.
No better way to give than giving.
We seek for joy, we hunt for pleasure,
When all the joy the heart can know
Is thinking right, and doing so.
A quiet mind our surest treasure.
We argue creeds, discuss believing,
When all that matters, after all,
Is that we have some pow'r we call:
Our God, to turn to in our grieving.
We build our courts, with domes and gildings,
And briefs we write, and books we scan,
And yet the rights of one poor man
Are more important than our buildings.
We speak of styles, as though our duty
Were wearing what the rest decree,
And yet the test is modesty:
Without it beauty is not beauty.
We talk of life as though behind it
Lured lurked some mystery in gray;
But conscience always points the way,
And it's no trick at all to find it.

LAPPER FANNY SAYS:

Guido Gets Heroism Medal
For his heroism in saving the life of Mr. Rene Weiss, a prominent city official of Paris, Alphonse Couttet, the best known guide of Mont Blanc, has just been awarded the French government's medal for heroism and self-sacrifice. Couttet was guiding Weiss, when in making a descent of one of the peaks of Mont Blanc, Weiss slipped and rolled down a snowy slope at the foot of which was the Nantillons glacier and its crevices. Couttet plunged head foremost 60 feet into the ravine, risking death by being dashed against the rocks, caught up with Weiss and stopped him at the edge of the glacier after the two had rolled 50 feet together.
is leading you irresistibly to your victim that you'll need me most, what?"
And the remark, though intended merely as a good-natured sally, proved strangely prophetic.
"Im always at your service, old chap, don't y' know," Vance rejoined. "I rather fancy, though that it's when your legal evidence

World Police Force Urged to Combat Counterfeiting

Washington—The establishment of an international police organization to cooperate with national police forces in detecting counterfeiting is proposed in the draft convention drawn up by the League of Nations Committee on International Counterfeiting, a summary of which recently has been received by the Department of State in the form of a League report.

W. H. Moran, chief of the Secret Service of the Department of the Treasury, participated in the drawing up of the convention, which is to be adopted by an international conference called for that purpose.

The convention provides that high contracting parties shall hold periodic conferences in cooperation with the representatives of the banks and government agencies issuing currency, in order to exchange information for the prevention of international counterfeiting. The summary of the convention as announced by the League of Nations follows in full text:

Oxford Defies Film Men

Ambitious plans to produce a super-film at sedate and conventional Oxford have aroused the professors of the university. The picture is to be called "The City of Youth," and is based on Mrs. Sidney Ball's book "Barbara Goes to Oxford." University authorities are aghast at the prospect of an invasion of actors and camera men, and say that they will bar the movie people from at least some of the ceremonies, including those which take place in the House of Convocation. Camera men, in reply, say that they cannot be stopped from filming the outdoor rites, and that if the professors are too antagonistic they will screen the ghosts of King Charles and Archbishop Laud which are supposed to haunt the library of St. John's.

The Thrill of Work Well Done

Genius is the transcendent capacity of taking trouble, according to Carlyle.

Many a man in the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is gifted with genius of this description.

A spirit prevails throughout this organization which makes such genius the rule rather than the exception. It is the spirit of workmanship.

In this spirit a man works for the love of working. His pay check is a desirable and necessary return for his labor investment. But his real reward is the thrill of work well done.

The highest positions in the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) are held by the men who have shown this spirit of workmanship to the greatest degree. Men who have none of it do not last long in this Company.

In a service organization, every employe must have pride in his job and a sense of his own individual responsibility to the public. He must be willing to do the extra thing—he must have a "capacity of taking trouble."

That sort of genius cannot be compelled by force or bought with money. It is encouraged in the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) by recognition and appreciation substantially shown. It is inspired in the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) by a common loyalty to one purpose.

That purpose is to serve 30 million people scattered over more than 600,000 square miles of territory—to provide them with all the products of petroleum that they need, where and when they want them—to keep prices down and quality up.

Service means more to this Company than merely satisfying its customers. It has never known the spirit that exults in "getting by" with as little effort as possible. The spirit of craftsmanship holds sway over the policies of the Company as it does over the work of its individual employes.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) aims to exceed expectations—to anticipate needs and supply them better than the average man would know how to expect.

The highest excellence that can be achieved by the skill and scientific knowledge of the hour is the standard of production which this Company has maintained from the beginning.

The "best" of today is only the "good" of tomorrow. The ambition of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is to serve the people of the Middle West according to the very best of human ability and human knowledge in an ambition that can never be permanently accomplished.

It permits no slackening of effort, no smug satisfaction. It requires the spirit of craftsmanship from the entire organization—each man doing his job the very best it can be done. Clocks cannot measure nor dollars pay for work done in this spirit. But the people of the Middle West have recognized such work and shown their appreciation by continued patronage and friendship.

After the testimony of two witnesses was heard, the hearing of the case of Otto Reinholdsen of Stonington, charged with manslaughter, was continued until December 23 in Justice Doherty's court yesterday.

Talks on Health

By Dr. Morris Fishbein

GERMS SMALL, BUT THEIR WORK IS POWERFUL

About fifty years have passed since Pasteur, by his work on anthrax, first showed certainly that germs actually cause disease.

In the intervening periods thousands of bacterial organisms have been discovered and hundreds have been identified definitely as having the ability to cause certain diseases of mankind. In 1880 the bacterium associated with typhoid fever was isolated; then in rapid order came the discovery of the germ causes of pneumonia, glanders, tuberculosis, cholera, tetanus or lockjaw, Malta fever, meningitis, Texas fever, dysentery, bubonic plague, botulism, syphilis, whooping cough, leprosy and many others.

Quite a few in a pound

The first man actually to see bacteria was probably the famous Dutchman who invented the microscope, Leeuwenhoek. The bacteria are small, and it has been estimated that it would take three hundred billions of bacilli of average size to weigh a pound.

Few people are willing to assign to organisms of such minute size the powerful actions that they actually have. They multiply rapidly under favorable conditions, one germ producing two new ones in about twenty minutes. If they reproduced, however, only at the rate of once in every hour, at the end of 24 hours, one germ would have given rise to sixteen and one half-million descendants.

The simplest methods of identification of germs are those that involve the examination of stained specimens under the microscope. The germs have characteristic appearances, and they tend to group

Young & Fillion Company

Menus for Family

BY SISTER MARY.

Breakfast—Orange juice, cereal, cream, creamed fresh tripe, popovers, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—Fish souffle, lettuce sandwiches, jellied cucumber and pineapple salad, chocolate cream cake, milk, tea.

Dinner—Braised beef with brown gravy, steamed rice, buttered Brussels sprouts, stuffed pepper salad, prune whip, milk, coffee.

Chocolate Cream Cake. Four eggs, 1 cup granulated sugar, 1 tablespoon melted butter, 1 cup finely chopped nuts, 2 squares butter chocolate, 1-2 cup flour, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1-2 teaspoon salt.

Beat yolks of eggs with sugar until creamy. Add melted butter and continue beating. Melt chocolate over hot water and beat into first mixture. Add flour mixed and sifted with baking powder and salt. Beat whites of eggs until stiff and dry. Add nuts to first mixture and fold in whites of eggs. Flavor with vanilla and turn into two layer cake pans which have been oiled and floured. Bake 15 minutes in a moderate oven. Put together with chocolate filling.

Chocolate Filling. One cup whipping cream, 2 tablespoons cocoa, 3 tablespoons confectioners' sugar, 1-4 teaspoon vanilla.

Chill cream and whip until firm. Mix and sift cocoa and sugar. Add with vanilla to whipped cream and beat enough to mix thoroughly. Use between and on top of the cake.

Breakfast—Chilled apple sauce, cereal, cream, sausage cakes, back wheat pancakes, syrup, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—Casserole of vegetables, tomato jelly salad, rye bread pudding, milk, tea.

Dinner—Pot roast of steak and vegetables, mashed potatoes, romaine salad, cherry pie, milk, coffee.

Pot Roast of Steak and Vegetables. One flank steak, 2 ounces fresh fat pork, 2 onions, 3 carrots, 2 large turnips, 2 cups shredded cabbage, 2 cups canned tomatoes, 2 teaspoons salt, 1-4 teaspoon pepper, 1 cup seeded raisins.

Cut pork in thin pieces and cook in an iron kettle or heavy aluminum kettle until brown. Cut steak into pieces for serving after trimming and removing skin. Brown quickly on both sides in hot fat in kettle. Add onions peeled and sliced, carrots scraped and cut in match-like strips, turnips pared and diced and cabbage. Season with salt and pepper and add tomatoes. Add enough boiling water to barely cover meat and vegetables and sprinkle raisins over top. Cover closely and simmer for two hours. Do not let the "kettle" bubble but keep it just below the boiling point. Serve meat on a hot platter surrounded with the vegetables with the raisins sprinkled through.

Breakfast—Stewed prunes with lemon, cereal, cream, soft cooked eggs, crisp toast, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—Cream of spinach soup, croissants, cottage cheese sandwiches, apple tapioca pudding, milk, tea.

Dinner—Noodle soup, broiled ham, stuffed onions, head lettuce with Russian dressing, pumpkin pie, milk, coffee.

Stuffed Onions. Four medium sized Spanish onions, 1 cup mashed potatoes, 2 tbsps rich milk or cream, 1 cup sausage meat, 1-2 tsp salt, 1-4 tsp pepper, 1 egg, 1 cup beef broth.

Peel onions and cut a slice from "top" end of each. Drop into 4 cups of boiling water containing 1 tsp salt, boil 15 minutes. Drain and drop into cold water for 1 minute. Drain and scoop out inside of each. Season mashed potatoes with salt and pepper and beat in cream. Mix thoroughly with sausage and add egg well beaten. Beat well and fill cavities of onions with mixture. Place in a pan just large enough to hold the onions without touching each other, add beef broth and simmer until tender, about 40 minutes. Serve surrounding ham.

Breakfast—Stewed figs; cereal, cream, French omelet, cinnamon toast, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—Baked hash, scalloped tomatoes and onions, apple sauce, gingerbread, milk, tea.

Dinner—Casserole of veal with boiled rice, buttered Brussels sprouts, stuffed celery, diplomatic pudding, milk, coffee.

Diplomatic Pudding. Eight thin slices stale sponge or plain cake, peach or apricot jam, 4 tablespoons orange juice, 2 eggs, 1-3 cup sugar, 1-8 teaspoon salt, 2 cups milk, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla, 1-2 cup whipping cream.

Spread cake with jam and arrange in a deep dish or mold. Pour orange juice over it and let stand while making custard. Beat eggs slightly and stir in sugar, salt. Slowly add milk heated to the scalding point. Cook over hot water until mixture coats a spoon. Stir constantly. Remove from heat and add vanilla. Pour hot over cake mixture. Chill and serve with whipped cream.

Breakfast—Canned pineapple, cereal cooked with figs, baked French toast, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—Scalloped oysters, celery hearts, rye bread and butter sandwiches, baked apples with cream, rolled oats cookies, milk, tea.

Dinner—English mutton chops, boiled potatoes in parsley butter, mashed turnips, relishes, pumpkin pudding, milk, coffee.

Scalloped Oysters. One pint oysters, 3-4 cup grated cheese, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 1 cup milk, 4 tablespoons minced canned pineapples, 1-2 cups cooked spaghetti, 1-3 cup canned tomatoes, 4 tablespoons dried bread crumbs.

Melt butter, stir in flour and slowly add milk, stirring constantly. Cook until thick and add 1-2 cup cheese, pineapples and the spaghetti which was broken in inch pieces before cooking. Stir until thoroughly mixed. Arrange in alternate layers with oysters in a buttered baking dish. Cover and bake thirty minutes in a slow oven. Mix remaining cheese with bread crumbs and spread over the top of the oysters and brown in a very hot oven or under the flame of a gas broiler. Serve from baking dish.

Breakfast—Stewed prunes, cereal, cream, fish and potato hash, cornmeal muffins, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—Cream of onion soup, toast sticks, egg and lettuce sandwiches, sliced bananas with lemon sauce, milk, tea.

Dinner—Creamed veal, twice baked sweet potatoes, scalloped tomatoes, stuffed peach salad, steamed carrot pudding, milk, coffee.

Sliced Bananas with Lemon Sauce. Four bananas, 1 cup sugar, 1-2 cups boiling water, 1 tbsps cornstarch, 1 lemon, 1 tsp butter.

Mix and sift sugar and cornstarch. Add boiling water slowly, stirring constantly. Cook 15 minutes and remove from the fire; add butter juice and grated rind of lemon. Cool.

When ready to serve, peel bananas and scrape with the blunt edge of a silver knife. Cut in thin slices into individual dishes. Pour over the sauce and serve.

Breakfast—Baked apples, cereal, cream, poached eggs on milk toast, extra toast, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—Cream of spinach soup, crackers, macaroni and salmon salad, graham rolls, cocoanut cake, canned strawberries, milk, tea.

Dinner—New England boiled dinner, head lettuce, celerly jelly with whipped cream, milk, coffee.

Cocoanut Cake. Two eggs, 3-4 cup fine granulated sugar, 1-3 cup melted butter, 1-3 cups flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 3-4 cup vanilla, 1-8 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla, 4 tablespoons shredded canned cocoanut.

Drop eggs into mixing bowl and beat until very light. Beat in sugar. Beat in melted butter. Beat in half the milk. Remove beater and stir in flour, baking powder and salt mixed and sifted. Beat hard with spoon and add remaining milk and vanilla. Beat well and pour into an oiled and floured cake pan. Sprinkle over with cocoanut and bake forty minutes in a moderate oven.

Cut raw potatoes sometimes will remove a mud spot from black silks of firm weave. The thin film of starch left when the potato has dried can be brushed off. This treatment leaves a spot on all but black materials.

Breakfast—Grape fruit, juice, cereal, cream, salt codfish in cream, toasted corn bread, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—Macaroni with cheese sauce, head lettuce with French dressing, prune pudding, milk, tea.

Dinner—Cream of lima bean soup, toasted crackers, spinach with creamed mushrooms, twice baked sweet potatoes, stuffed peach salad, steamed marmalade pudding, milk, coffee.

No menu is suggested in the dinner menu but a hearty, well balanced meal is supplied. The pudding is too rich and heavy to serve after a meat course.

Steamed Marmalade Pudding. Two cups coarse stale bread crumbs, 3-4 cup finely chopped beef suet, 3-4 cup sugar, 4 eggs, 2 tablespoons milk, 3-4 cup marmalade, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon cinnamon.

Do not pack crumbs in cup to measure. Combine crumbs and suet. Mix well and add sugar, salt, cinnamon and eggs well beaten. Beat well and add milk and marmalade. Mix well and turn into a buttered mold. Cover and steam two hours. Unmold and serve warm with whipped cream.

Grubs of the carpet beetle are prevalent in some localities in summer. They damage furniture, carpets, and clothing in the same way that moths do. They feed on wool, silk, furs, and feather articles. Naphthalene flakes or paradichlorobenzene crystals are effective against them if used in the same way as for moths—wrapped up with the articles to be stored, which have first been thoroughly brushed, beaten and sunned. Containers must be absolutely tight so that no adult beetle can enter and lay eggs. If the trouble has been in the carpets or rugs, fill up cracks in the flooring with putty or patent crack filler, or treat them with gasoline or benzene before the rugs are put back in place.

Lack of funds has compelled Germany to give up completion of its housing program.

A pair of kitchen shears with sanitary white handles and strong, sharp blades, is a useful tool. It can be used for chopping celery and apples, pickles—for salad chicken and other meats, for cutting the heads and tails from fish, cutting the lettuce for shredded salads, bread for stuffing, marshmallows, dates, and nuts for desserts.

It is a good habit to close up the sewing machine when work is stopped for the day. A little dust can undo all efforts to clean the machine and make it run easily. Unnoticed dust also gets on light-colored work, to its detriment.

CHAPTER I.

In 1871, a few buffalo hunters, among them a certain Captain Stone, pitched their camp on a little knoll in Kansas just north of the Indian Territory line. South and west of the rise flowed Fall creek; on the east the waters of Big Casino creek ran their endless course and invited the roaming herds of buffalo and other wild game in which the region abounded.

The captain was a far-seeing man. He noted the abundance of spring water, the succulence of the prairie grass and the not unimportant factor of the place's nearness to the border of a land from which the government, in accordance with its treaties with the Indians, had excluded the white man from settling. When other buffalo hunters joined them Stone thought he saw the possibility of a new "Princess of the Prairie," as Wichita then called itself; so he took the first step in colonization and established a small store, carrying such supplies as the hunters required, including, the records state, one barrel of whiskey.

As the population increased, Cox and Emerson put in a real outfitting store and a man named Dickie installed a genuine saloon, with bar, foot-rail and all accessories. The prairies, with their luxuriant growth of blue stem and buffalo grass, became dotted with small cattle and horse ranches; the big cattle herds on their way to Ogallala, Neb., then a big shipping point on the Union Pacific, stopped in the little town for their supplies.

And the news traveled fast. Soon hundreds were drifting in to Caldwell, farthest southwest of the plain settlements; whereupon Stone and two other men, Dagner and Smith, laid out a townsite.

In a few years Caldwell had attained a population of 2000. In 1878 the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe ran its tracks down from Wellington, forging an iron link between Caldwell and Wichita and making its bid for the big herds that thundered up the Chisholm Trail. The buffalo camp had flowered into a cow town—and one of the wickedest cow towns in history.

The big boom that started with the coming of the railroad found Gordon W. Lillie waiting on a table in one of Caldwell's busy restaurants and longing for something that would more nearly satisfy a normal youth's desire for adventure and the opportunity to make a fortune.

As he saw it, the main requirement for the latter was a working capital, whereas Gordon Lillie and capital were not yet acquainted. As far back as he could remember, Newton Lillie, his father, had had about all he could do to make ends meet. Gordon was 19, and the oldest of the children. Then came Albert, Elmer May, Lena and Gordon's foster sister, Lucy Conant. Newton Lillie had been a flour miller in Bloomington, Ill. Two years before, calamity had descended on the family when fire had destroyed the mill, and the Lillies now lived near Wellington, Kas., about 25 miles from Caldwell, where the father still patiently tried to eke out a living from another flour mill, but counted more hopefully on the productivity of the farm land that he had pre-empted.

Gordon Lillie stood in the doorway of the restaurant, his gaze roving idly over one of the strange medleys of humanity a man had ever looked up. It was Saturday afternoon in Caldwell. Bronzed, chap-clad cowboys from nearby ranges, or stopping en route from their fatiguing herd riding, rubbed elbows with roughly dressed railroad laborers, for the Santa Fe extension was not yet finished and Caldwell was the haven of thirty souls who worked along the right of way. Here were cattle thieves, horse thieves, Indians, desperadoes; women, some with children and others with hard eyes and painted cheeks and a ready smile for each passing male; men making side-walk speeches on the coming greatness of Caldwell, urging their listeners to buy while the boom was yet young.

A clatter of hoofs and an enveloping cloud of dust moved down the street. Three men dismounted in front of the restaurant. The tallest of the three, a man with a shaggy beard, heard the youth with cold appraisal and waited. Lillie did not appear to notice him. He tugged at his lip and was lost in contemplation of the panorama of wild border life before him.

A harsh voice broke in on his thoughts. "We're hungry. Are you gonna stand there and go to sleep or invite us inside?"

Lillie straightened up with a start. He murmured something in apology, then led the way into the dining room and indicated a table for the trio. Glibly he recited the bill of fare.

The bearded man listened impatiently and then gave his order. "And get a move on," he added, smiling.

The youth glanced at him sharply, noted the heavy, brutal features, the deep-set, slitted gray eyes, and said nothing. He went about the business of setting food before them and retired to the kitchen. Another waiter was out there, eating his own supper ahead of the evening rush. "I've got a crab out there," Gordon Lillie told him.

The waiter squinted out into the dining room. "Him? That's Tom Benton. He's ornery."

Presently a loud command in Benton's surly tones called Lillie forth. The man was pounding on the table with his fist. "What kind of beef do you call this? This steak's so damned tough you could sole boots with it!"

The color deepened in Gordon Lillie's ruddy cheeks and resentment flamed within him. He made no answer but started to remove the offending meat. "I said the steak was tough," he repeated. "I'm waitin' to hear you admit it."

A calm voice drifted in from the doorway. "I didn't know anything or anybody came too tough for you, Benton." Benton swung around and met the smiling blue eyes of a broad-shouldered, fair-haired cow puncher who had entered at that moment with half a dozen companions.

The bearded one glared. "I don't remember issuing any invitation for you to horn in on the conversation, Joe Craig."

Joe Craig grinned. "I declare to goodness I forgot my manners, Tom. I always was disappointing to my folks that way. They never could count on me to uphold the family reputation for politeness and so I came to Kansas and got a job riding for Titus Moore, not wanting to embarrass the family for the rest of their lives."

"That was being right considerable of the family's feelings," Benton snapped.

"Ain't it the truth? Although my interruption in this particular case might be excused on the grounds that I had a personal interest in the discussion. Didn't I just hear you say that the steak was too tough to suit you?"

"If there ain't anything, the matter with your ear you did."

"Well, now, that's downright strange. You see, all the beef that's served in this place happens to be Bar K beef. Besides, I don't hear your two friends complain."

"Maybe I'm a little more finicky than my friends," Benton said sarcastically. "I always was hard to please. As for it being Bar K beef, maybe that's the reason it didn't suit me. There's a lot of things about the Bar K I can't get wild about."

"Including me," Craig supplied cheerfully. "Still, you're the last man in the world I'd expect to find prejudiced against Bar K steers. Matter of fact, I sort of thought you entertained a pretty high regard for them." The smile had left Craig's face and the humorous twinkle in his eyes had been replaced by a cold stare.

Benton glared back for an instant, then, with fists swinging he ran at Craig. The latter deftly sidestepped the bigger man's rush and rocked him with a solid smash to the head. As Benton reeled back, cursing, his right hand made a quick, stealthy move toward his left breast, but Craig's own gun was whipped out in a flash and leveled from the hip. Benton's arms fell to his sides.

"Some day," Craig said coolly, "you're going to make me real mad and I'm likely to forget myself. You can leave now. Me and the boys are aiming to eat and we don't want our appetites spoiled by the presence of complaining dyspeptics. And don't forget to pay your reckoning," he added.

Benton's cheeks glowed an angry red beneath their fringe of beard. "Anybody," he muttered, "can act like a real bad man when he has six more behind him to back him up."

"You know enough about my daily routine to know when to catch me alone. I'd be real glad to accommodate you any time. Matter of fact, there's nothing to prevent you and me from going up the street right now and pursuing the debate to a satisfactory conclusion."

He waited for an answer to his invitation. None was forthcoming.

"Another thing," he flung at Benton as the latter, with his two followers, strode toward the door, "when I told you the Bar K was getting tired of seeing you around I was kind of careless in my wording. Paying party calls at night when no one's looking was barred, too." He turned his back deliberately and sat down.

"Me, now," he was saying fifteen minutes later as he busily plied knife and fork, "I'd say this was real good beef. Sure, I'm not so hard to please as Tom Benton. Bill," he addressed Lillie, "you take my advice and keep a supply of poison handy to season Benton's food with."

Lillie smiled. "I'll take it under advisement. It was real nice of you to get him off my back."

"You don't know what a pleasure it was. I fired Benton from the Bar K for two reasons. He was a bully, and I was satisfied he was withholding valuable information as to the whereabouts of some Bar K cows that was lost, strayed or stole. Some more of our stock was run off the range about a month ago and I guess I kind of thought to him that he was more or less suspected."

"One of Craig's companions snorted. "Hinted: I'd like to hear you when you're real plain spoken."

Craig turned once more to his supper. A frown had gathered between his sandy eyebrows. Somewhere down the street a gun barked. It was followed by the sound of running feet and a few of the diners rushed to the door to look. Someone came in presently to announce that the town marshal had been shot. Craig looked up with an expression of mild interest. "That so? Who is the town marshal now? I can't keep track of them."

"Not is—was," corrected his informant. "Name was Sam Fortune."

"Now, ain't that too bad?" sympathized Craig. "With a name like that you'd sort of expect better things was in store for him. Who shot him?"

"Brad Becker. Brad and him got in an argument over the name of an author. They were both lit. Becker claimed the book was written by Shakespeare and Fortune said it was written by a man named Bunyan. They were too literary for me."

"Ain't it the truth?" Joe Craig wagged his head sorrowfully. "Did they say what book it was they were arguing about?"

"Yes, they did. It was Paradise Lost or something like that. What in hell are you laughing at?"

For the moment Craig was speechless with mirth. A few of his companions smiled but the others exchanged bewildered looks. "That," said Craig finally, "is what comes of pursuing the higher learning too far. Where's Becker now?"

"He headed for the border. But he'll be back. Fortune wasn't killed in the line of duty and Becker wasn't resentin' arrest or anything. They got in an argument, called each other a liar and got mad. Fortune drew and Brad was quicker. You can convict a man for that."

"Not in Caldwell, anyway," Craig turned to address the other Bar K men. "You boys going up to Mag's place?"

"We'd sort of counted on it," one of them said.

"Go ahead, then. I'm staying here to talk a bit to my friend Bill Lillie. Don't go getting in any literary arguments and don't shoot up the musicians' gallery. I like enthusiasm but it has its limits."

He lingered at his table, smoking a cigar, until the last of the supper crowd had left. Then, followed by Lillie, he walked to the door, where he stood looking out on Caldwell. It was nearly dark now. To the west the sunset tracked an orange glow against the horizon. A bird called. Off to the south there sounded the mournful cry of a coyote.

"Tom Evans," Craig said to Lillie, "was telling me you was hoping for the day when Oklahoma would be opened for settlement. Bill, you've been listening to bad advice. If people want to settle somewhere, why don't they fill up western Kansas first? That's Indian country down below the line. Also it's cow country, and if the noble red men are willing to permit the use of their lands for grazing, why let 'em graze. Me, now, I'm a cowman. Why don't you come to work for Titus Moore? The Bar K will be glad to have you."

"I'm obliged," said Lillie, "for the offer. Right now I've got other ideas. I'm trying to land a teacher's job in the Indian school at Pawnee. I taught country school for a while back in Illinois."

Craig was watching two figures moving toward them through the moonlight. The taller figure was that of a man about 35, slender and tall. There was about him, in the cut of his black clothing, in his calm, deliberate movement, an air of elegance. He wore a frock coat, a round-crowned soft hat, lower and smaller of brim than Craig's. He was smooth-shaven, except for thin black sideburns that descended nearly to his jaw. The boy with him must have been 12 or thereabouts. He was dark like the other and had the same eyes. His hat, which he carried in his hand, permitting the cool breeze to ruffle his wavy hair, was a small replica of the man's, and his slight figure was set off with a dark blue velvet jacket, fastened in front by means of braid loops.

A pitying smile played about Gordon Lillie's lips. "Poor kid," he said softly. The sight of Anthony Harrison never failed to evoke his sympathy, possibly because of the impression of loneliness the boy always gave him.

The Harrisons were talking, the man smiling and shaking his head at something, the boy serious-faced. When he drew within earshot the man stopped his laughter and fell silent. Gordon Lillie spoke to him. "Evening," he said courteously, and Harrison, staring straight ahead, made no reply but nodded shortly and went on.

Lillie plucked at his lip. He was not surprised or hurt at the rebuff. He had learned enough about Jeff Harrison in the short time they both had been in Caldwell to know something of the man's strange ways. A taciturn man, curt, grave, unbending only when he was with his boy. Father and son had come to Caldwell a while back and were living alone in a little cabin on the town's edge. Jeff Harrison spent every evening of the week, save two, gambling. It was rumored that he gave those evenings to the boy, and sometimes the two were to be seen strolling along the broad main street but more often a light burned in their cabin and their silhouettes could be seen bending over a rude table against the lamplight.

Joe Craig threw away his cigar and gazed at the backs of the departing Harrisons. "Bill," he said after a minute, "that's a mighty handsome little boy."

"Takes after his father. I can't help feeling sorry, somehow, for Tony Harrison. No mother, and a gambler for a father. Leastwise, I don't know anything else Jeff Harrison does for a living."

"Any little boy without a mother," remarked Craig, "sort of takes hold of my sympathies."

"The boy," Gordon Lillie continued, "has to sit around all alone at night and wait for his daddy to come home. Some evenings he goes with him and waits outside."

"Don't he ever go inside?"

"His daddy won't permit it. Jeff Harrison's a gambler, but he ain't a common one. Another thing, I've never seen him speak to a woman since he's been in Caldwell. The boy don't, either. There's a rumor going around that Jeff Harrison has brought him up to have nothing to do with them."

"Now that's kind of queer," pronounced Joe Craig.

He departed a row minutes later. "Think I'll be traveling up to Mag Woods' place. Have to keep an eye on the boys. They can stand just so much liquor and then they feel an irresistible desire to shoot things up. It's just plain animal spirit with them, but I don't approve of it myself—not when I'm responsible for one of the colonel."

Mag Woods' place was one of the most pretentious buildings in Caldwell and Mag herself was a remarkable woman. She had reputedly made a fortune with her big dance hall, just across the Arkansas river from Wichita, and when the boom hit Caldwell she moved down to the new town to lure the freely squandered dollars of the free and easy souls who came there for their periodical fixings.

For Caldwell was raw and wide open. Its trigger finger perpetual trembled. There was little law enforcement in the town; men quarreled and killed in Caldwell and walked on about their business, or rode south four miles and crossed the border to No Man's Land. Over night, almost, it had become a haven for the worst element along the frontier, and Mag Woods' dance hall, nicknamed the Red Light, because of the bright red lamp that hung over the door, became the hangout of some of the toughest.

Mag herself was not without a sense of humor. Evidence of it was found in the sheet iron and boiler plate fortification she had reared around her musicians. The mortality among dance hall musicians, especially in the Red Light, was high, and only the hardiest spirits dared risk the flying bullets that were a nightly accompaniment to the festivities.

Jeff Harrison was standing at the bar, drinking quietly, when Joe Craig entered. The handsome gambler's gaze swept over him as he came in, then turned back to the bar. Craig managed to range alongside. Every time the door opened, he noticed Harrison turn to scrutinize the newcomer.

"Apparently lookin' for someone," Craig said to himself. Acting on a sudden impulse, he spoke quietly in the gambler's ear. "I'd consider it an honor if you'd have a little drink with me."

Jeff Harrison turned his searching brown eyes on the blond cowboy and hesitated half a minute before answering. Then, with a slight smile that seemed to heighten rather than lessen his gravity, he accepted. "I'd be glad to," he said quietly.

To his great annoyance, Craig was called away by two of the Bar K men before he could follow up the opening. When he started back, he saw Harrison do a surprising thing; one of the dance hall girls who had been casting ardent glances at the slender, elegant figure, sidled up to the gambler and seized his arm.

"Probably asking him to buy a drink," Craig was thinking.

But Harrison, after a casual glance at her, deliberately turned his back and went out, his face an expressionless mask. The girl stared after him in astonishment and anger, then shrugged and walked away. When Craig noticed her next she was making love to a little bow-legged bantam rooster of a cowboy.

Gordon Lillie came in. "I just passed Jeff Harrison," he told Craig. "He was headed for the Big Buffalo saloon. I expect he will be playing poker the rest of the evening."

Craig pushed back his big hat and scratched his head. "Now that man Harrison sort of captures my interest. He's a gentleman, whatever he is. I'll be darned if I don't like him."

The bantam rooster of a cowboy was balancing his new-found lady friend on one knee while on the other he rested the hand holding his six-shooter and pumped bullets in the floor. Mag Woods herself bore down on him, but before she could round up the celebrant he had flung his arm up with a loud "Whoopee!" and fired in the air. The bullet rang against the iron plate protecting the musicians. The music stopped suddenly and the fiddler stuck his head out and looked wrathfully down.

SEASON EARLY ENOUGH, LOCAL NIMRODS SAY

"We're concerned more with conservation of deer than with comfort of hunters," is the comment which comes from Manistique sportsmen when they are questioned regarding the recent agitation for an earlier deer season.

"This weather is good enough for me," said one, "and I wouldn't want the season to start any earlier. Those who don't like it can stay at home."

"The deer season cannot be opened earlier," was the emphatic comment of another prominent Manistique hunter. "I, for one, will do my bit to keep it where it is."

Entertains With Birthday Party

Mrs. George Monroe entertained seven little girls at her home on North Seventh street Saturday afternoon, the occasion being the sixth birthday anniversary of her daughter, Lovella Ruth. Luncheon at 4 p. m. was the main feature of the party, and this was followed by games and music.

The guests included: Merl Denny, Mary Margaret Stebbins, Melinda and Lea LaFreniere, Viola and Nettie Bowman, Evelyn Ayotte.

"MOTHER" AT GERO.

Every so often the picture-going public weary of sex problems worked out on the screen, tire a bit of spectacle and get bored more or less by strained comedy. And every once in so often some producer senses that feeling on the part of the public and produces a real human story, easily understandable and wholly logical, and with cleanliness predominating and with the asset of sending people from a theater with something to think about, with a new angle on some certain phases of life—real life.

Such a production is "Mother," starring Belle Bennett, and due at the Gero theater tonight.

The story takes a modern American family, consisting of father, mother, son and daughter (their counterpart is just around the corner from any one), and you are, in fancy, taken right into their household and made acquainted with their family secrets.

Belle Bennett in the title role surpasses any previous effort of hers, even that in "Stella Dallas," and the cast in support is faultless.

JUSTICE COURT JAMMED WITH DEER HUNTERS

A total of 21 alleged violators of the state game laws had hearings before Justice W. A. McKinney at Manistique Monday. Most of the arrests were made over the past week-end by local conservation officers, and the parties arrested ranged in size from two to eight.

Three men were arraigned Monday on a charge of hunting deer in Hiawatha township without a license. All pleaded not guilty, and have supplied recognizance of $100 each for their hearing on December 5. The men were: Kenneth McMahon, Charles Cowman and John Tennant. Complaints were filed by George Gish and Peter Bauers, conservation officers.

William Barker, charged with shooting a fawn contrary to the game regulations, was found guilty by a jury of five men Monday afternoon, and was fined $25. The jury included: Michael Helms, W. B. Orr, Paul Kiefer, Howard Allen and Frank Sandberg. Barker was the only one to testify for the defense.

Witnesses for the prosecution were: George Gish, Frank McMahon, Thomas Douglas, Jess E. Miller and Peter Bauers.

Miller, Douglas and Frank S. Mann composed a party of Flint hunters who pleaded guilty to the illegal possession of a fawn, and were given fines of $25 and costs each. Another group of eight men paid fines of $15 and costs each for failure to produce a camp license for the deer meat which game wardens reported to have found cooking on their stove.

Charged with shipping fish without having proper markings and tags affixed as prescribed by law, Earl Killoran was fined $25 and costs Monday, conservation officer. Failure to eject their rifles from the magazine of their rifles cost $10 each for Justin Byers and Harry LeFleur of Hiawatha township, who were arrested for a technical violation of the law which prohibits loaded rifles in an automobile. Complaints were filed by Herman Ottenhoff and Peter Bauers.

SHOPS HAVE HOLIDAY.

All barber shops of Manistique will be closed all day Thanksgiving Day, it was announced yesterday. The tonsorial parlors have agreed not to open up Thanksgiving morning, and will remain closed throughout the holiday.

Safe Now When Others Come Close!

The Secret of Keeping a Perspiring Body Sweet

Do you know why thousands of people who never have to take a laxative, do not get a candy cascart now and then? They have found that cascara sweetens the whole system—brings an immaculacy of person that means everything. It prevents bodily chemistry from ever making one unconsciously offensive to others. And what a perfect regulator of the bowels!

Salts affect the lining of the bowels. Mineral oils leave a coating that the blood must carry off through the pores. How much better to cascartize the system, and cause the bowels to expel everything by normal muscular contraction! To say nothing of the cleaner, sweeter condition that lasts for days—use of deodorants quite unnecessary in January or July! Men and women whose years have brought on sluggishness often find that a cascart only once a week is all the tonic they need.

Cascara is splendid for children, too, and they love the taste of this candy laxative which every druggist has for 10c and 25c.

"ONE DANCE used to undo all my precautions for personal cleanliness. All waste in my system seemed to come out through the pores. Today, I don't worry; I keep clean all through, with just occasional use of—

THEATRES AT THE RIALTO The eternal triangle is given a unique treatment in the Adolphe Menjou Paramount picture "A Gentleman of Paris" which comes to the Rialto Theatre today.

The valet of a gay young gentleman bachelor, a man of affairs' oh, ever so many affairs, discovers that his master is carrying on an affair with his wife.

In extenuation, it must be said that the master does not know that the lady is his valet's bride.

The valet would like to fight a duel with the master but as a servant he cannot challenge a man of superior social position so he determines to quit his job.

Menjou, as the master, is terrified at the thought of losing his plus-perfect valet. He tries to hold him in his employ. Falling in this, he insists on the traditional eight days notice and in this he wins his point.

Very few men would care to have an outraged husband give them their morning shave but Menjou carries on nonchalantly. He is about to be married and his mind is full of the approaching wedding.

AT THE LYRIC "The Magician," which will have its first showing at the Lyric Theatre today is the first Rex Ingram production for Metro-Goldwyn since his widely discussed and highly successful screen version of Blasco Ibanez' "Mare Nostrum" (Our Sea).

This new picture from the brilliant young director deals with a subject entirely different from anything he has previously done and he has handled it in the finest manner which has marked all his previous triumphs. It is his most ambitious achievement.

The story of "The Magician" is that of a girl caught between the forces of a Magician, whom she is unable to resist, and the love for a young surgeon who has saved her from being a helpless cripple by performing a delicate operation on her spine, which started the surgical world.

Ingram has taken the Somerset Maugham story and with his usual brilliance in the handling of such a delicate subject, has developed a powerfully romantic drama.

Alice Terry enacts the part of Margaret Dauncey, the young sculptress, and gives one of the finest performances she has ever registered on the screen.

Walter Olson has returned from a deer hunting trip with a 200 pound buck.

Women Swing Smoking Vote Activity of women has swung the vote regarding smoking at meetings of the Board of Guardians at Pontefract, England. The no-smoking rule had been in effect until Father Pove, a Roman Catholic, succeeded with the help of the five women members of the board, in passing a resolution permitting smoking after Father Cove had argued that it would make for better tempers and quicker dispatch of business. At the next meeting Alderman John Robinson, who is a smoker, protested that smoking at the meetings was undignified, and with the aid of two of the women members repelled the smoking by one vote.

MARKET NEWS

STOCK PRICES ARE UNSTEADY

STOCK SALES AVERAGES. Twenty Twenty Date Industrials Railroads Tuesday -- 179.54 146.47 Monday -- 178.81 145.87 Week ago -- 177.33 146.31 Year ago -- 143.78 122.74 High 1927 -- 180.09 152.95 Low 1927 -- 141.33 126.58 Total stock sales 2,566,700 shares.

New York, Nov. 22--(AP)--Chief speculative interest in today's stock market centered on about a dozen assorted specialties, which were bid up to new high records, on a huge turnover. The general list presented considerable irregularity although gains again exceeded losses at the close. Trading, which was largely professional in character, again crossed 2,000,000 shares, bringing the year's total to date, just a few thousand shares short of the half billion mark.

In the commodity markets, considerable interest was aroused by the advance of 2 cents a bushel in wheat futures, based largely on unfavorable Argentine crop reports.

There was little in the day's trade news to influence the movement of stock prices, although some fresh buying came into the non-ferrous metal shares on the announcement of an increase in zinc prices. Call money was in abundant supply at the renewal rate of 3 1/4 per cent, despite the calling of about $10,000,000 in loans. Wall Street bankers do not profess to be disturbed over the recent shipments of gold to Canada and the advance in sterling to around the "gold export point."

Bullish operations in the motors centered in the Dodge Brothers issues, which advanced 2 points or more, and in Packard and Hupp which continued their climb to new high ground. General Motors moved within a range of about 3 points, closing 1/4 higher at 129 1/2. U. S. Steel common also closed only fractionally higher at 143 3/8, although some of the independents recorded good gains.

Except for the establishment of a new high by Norfolk and Western, at 20 1/4, on a revival of reports that dividends would be granted by the Pennsylvania, which already owns half of the stock under proposed lease terms, there was little of interest in the rail group.

Sugar prices held steady, but coffee futures reacted 20 to 25 points. Except for a slight recession in sterling and another break of 20 to 25 points in Japanese yen to around 45.70 cents, the leading foreign exchanges held firm in quiet trading.

Cooks Potato Club Wins Second Place in State Exhibit

The Inwood township school of Cooks placed second, winning a cash prize of $15, in the Smith-Hughes high school class, at the Western Michigan State potato show, held at Big Rapids. The Smith-Hughes high school class consisted of exhibits made up of four varieties of potatoes--Russet Rural, White Rural, Irish Cobbler and Early Ohio. The entry from Mantion was first. Cooks was second, Big Rapids third and Reed City fourth.

The Cooks Potato club won the club sweepstakes and five other premiums earlier in the season at the Schoolcraft county fair. This is the first year for the Cooks school on the Smith-Hughes list for federal aid in teaching agriculture. The school will receive $500 federal and state money as soon as all requirements have been met and 12 of the boys turn in completed projects for the year. The school is now offering the same course in agriculture as Escanaba and Manistiquette have offered for several years past.

IN NEW YORK

New York--If your little daughter, Mary-Ellen-Elizabeth, insists on tooting her big brother's saxophone--don't discourage her!

The rage is on along Broadway for pretty young maids who can compete with their brother jazz bands.

A couple of seasons ago the higher educations of this land began to turn out young men who appeared on the "main stem" with ukuleles under their arms. Before the last now had fallen, one band of college syncoponists after another came on the scene.

The good news spread. Every young university "jazz-hound" who could bring harmony out of a fraternity piano began to descend upon New York. Two or three of them appeared at the end of their first season in bright lights and today are looked upon as the leading collaborators on musical comedy--I refer in particular to the team of Rogers and Hart.

This season the co-eds have caught on. A co-ed number is one of the big hits of the latest Ziegfeld show. It's a good old-fashioned jazz band number.

Glimpsing down the program my eye fell across the list of names of the lovely young ladies who thump a mean banjo or moan a meaner saxophone.

Here, if you please, was Miss Genevieve Brown, of Hardsburg, Ky., who is the daughter of State Senator Brown and who graduated to jazz banding from the University of Kentucky.

And here was Lucy Westgate, graduate of Lawrence College, at Appleton, Wis. Her father, so they tell me, is a prominent doctor.

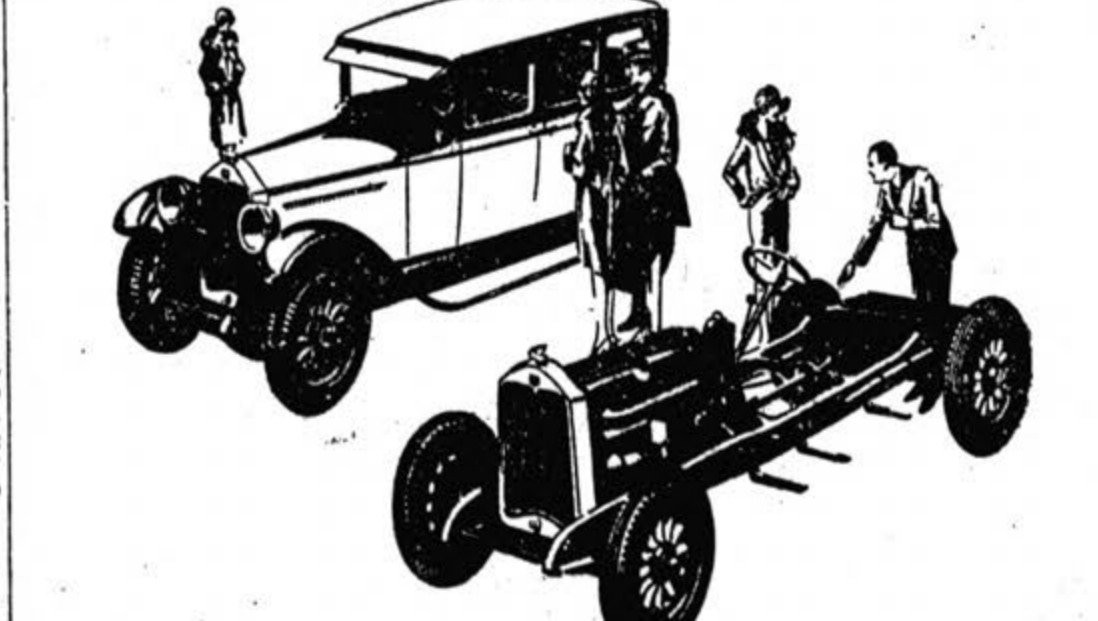

And here was Frances Garten, from Kokomo via the University of Indiana--and she the granddaughter of the W. C. T. U. vice president in the Hoosier state.

There was a long list of others--of which these three names are typical. But it goes to show you that when Kentucky, Wisconsin, Indiana and way states get together on Broadway, the combination is hard to beat.

Saint and Sinner

By Anne Austin

Faith had never met Gerson, manager of the opera house, although he was one of Bob's oldest friends. The tawdriness of the ancient theater, with its tarnished gilt boxes, faded plush seats and indecently bare stage, seen at ten o'clock in the morning, without the magic of lights, rustling audience, music, actors and scenery, dismayed her, but she marched resolutely down the aisle.

A few members of the orchestra carried by the San Remo opera company were drifting into the pit, carrying or lugging their instruments, and looking sleepy and disgruntled. On the bare stage, completely shorn of scenery and furnishings except for two camp chairs, a short, fat, very dark man, in an atrocious suit of bright blue flannel, was waving his arms and snorting excitedly at the two dispirited figures slumped into the chairs. The woman, so plump that Faith wondered how the weak little chair held her up, was disappointingly dowdy in an ancient black sealink coat and a crumpled, dusty velvet hat. The tenor whom Faith recognized from the Sunday paper pictures of him, and against whose charms Bob had jestingly warned her, looked old and worn and irritable, and his fascinations, if he possessed them, were hidden behind the need of a shave.

When she and Rhoda had reached the little flight of steps leading up to the stage and were hesitating, there, flushed and embarrassed, uncertain what to do next, the little fat man on the stage whirled to give an order to the leader of the orchestra, and saw the two women huddled together.

"Mon dieu!" he shrieked, waving his arms excitedly over his head. He added something else to the two singers on the stage, something in French which Faith could not understand, but which she instinctively felt to be insulting. Then whirling back toward the orchestra pit, the little Oriental-looking man beckoned them to come upon the stage, a prodigious frown creasing the baby-like fatness of his swarthy, oily face.

"All right, sing! Sing! For God's sake, sing and get it over with!" he commanded Faith and Rhoda impartially.

Rhoda shrank against Faith, with an expression of such acute agony in her turquoise-blue, childish eyes that Faith took courage to brave the irate impresario.

"Please, Mr. San Remo," she raised her rich, contralto voice almost imperiously. "Miss Jonson sings only with the phonograph. I thought Mr. Gerson had explained to you."

"Phonograph!" Talking machine!" San Remo roared, his swarthy face becoming suddenly so stricken with blood that Faith wondered unsympathetically if he might not die of apoplexy. "I should have a talking machine? Mon dieu! What foolishness is this? Gerson! Gerson!" His shout was a bell of rage.

"Miss Jonson has a portable phonograph with her," Faith explained to you."

The lost art of gallery whistling has returned to the "big street." Some had reported it defunct. Years had passed since good healthy whistles had come from the super-critics of the top sections. Only in the little out-of-the-way houses could these survivors of a grand old custom be found.

Time was when no actor could consider himself a truly popular performer until the gallery whistlers had acclaimed him.

The other day, Manhattan newspapers carried the information that two new Broadway shows had drawn whistles from the gallery gods. It would be quite too sad were we completely to lose this perfectly swell custom of another day.

plained clearly and loudly, to make herself heard over his bel-lows. "She will sing along with a record of Miss Remington's that she has brought with her." While San Remo was gaping at her and pawing the air helplessly, like a man stricken dumb with astonishment, Faith calmly knelt, raised the lid of the little portable machine which Rhoda had dropped as if it burnt her, adjusted the needle, and then rose, singing and nodding reassuringly at the girl she had hired as a maid. NEXT: Rhoda's kiss.

Land Nobody Owns a Problem How to collect taxes from a land that nobody owns and yet is occupied, is puzzling the Mayo County Council of Ireland. In Letterbrick, North Mayo, are 2,391 acres, the owner of which cannot be found. Some time ago the Land Commission bought the estate of which those acres are part, but refused to include them as they consisted mostly of mountain land and could not be used for farming. The adjoining tenants have taken possession of the mountain and now grass it in common. The Land Commission is unable to interfere, and the Mayo County Councils wants the users to pay taxes on the land, but cannot compel them to do so because they are not the legal raters occupiers.

THREATENED CHURCH. Destruction of the church of St. Botolph, Eng., by death-wagon beetles is feared by the congregation. The insects have eaten into the timbers to such an extent that the diocesan surveyor estimates that it will cost $100,000 to restore the edifice.

Dogs Finds Missing Kitten A dog's remarkable friendship for a kitten was recently told at the Walmar Road branch of the People's Dispensary for Sick of the Poor of England. A little black cat that had been brought in for treatment for canker in the ear disappeared. The terrier, her constant playmate, was inconceivably refusing to eat and moping. Two weeks later the dog also disappeared. Early next morning however, an impatient scratching at the front door awakened the owner who on opening it, found his dog vigorously wagging his tail, and carrying the prodigal kitten in his mouth. How the terrier found his missing playmate could not be learned, but both animals are now happily playing together.

Elect Rich Captain of 1928 Michigan Grid Team

HAS PLAYED ON TEAM 2 YEARS

Dana Norton Picked as Student Manager of Wolverines

Ann Arbor, Nov. 22.—(P)—George E. Rich of Lakewood, Ohio, was elected captain of the 1928 University of Michigan football team. Rich has played fullback in a majority of Michigan's western conference games this season, is a freshman in the university law school and a member of the Delta Chi fraternity.

He has been a member of the squad for two years, playing halfback in 1926 and fullback and halfback in 1927. He also won a letter in 1926 as a member of the wrestling squad.

It was announced that Dana Norton of Crown Point, Ind., will be student manager of the 1928 team. As his assistants there will be Fred C. Wildman, Chicago, and Harry Wallace, Detroit. As alternates, Edward J. Bellafra, Grand Rapids, and Paul F. Stokette, Grand Rapids, were named.

HARRY KIPKE TO COACH M. S. C.

Former Lansing High School Star Hired for Three Seasons

East Lansing, Mich., Nov. 22.—(P)—Harry Kipke, idol of Lansing football fans during his brilliant high school career, and All-American back at the University of Michigan in 1922 by choice of the late Walter Camp, will guide the destinies of Michigan State college football teams for at least three seasons.

The announcement that Kipke has signed a three-year contract was made today by Ralph H. Young, director of athletics of the college. The appointment marks both an advancement of the sports program of the college and recognition of the abilities of Kipke who is now completing his service with the University of Michigan as backfield coach under Head Coach Ted Wideman.

Director Young, who himself coached the State team this year, declares the choice was backed by the State athletic council and the State board of agriculture. Kipke will enter upon his duties with a wealth of actual experience, both on the gridiron as a player and coach. Upon graduation in 1924, the former Michigan football captain who had won nine letters in three major sports, went to the University of Missouri conference championship as assistant football and basketball coach and head baseball coach. His Alma Mater called him and in 1925 he returned to Ann Arbor as a scout and assistant in various departments of the athletic department.

Was Michigan Star. During the 1926 and 1927 football seasons he spent much of his time coaching the Michigan backfield. Michigan's star, Louis Gilbert, is an example of natural ability developed under Kipke's tutelage. His brothers are well known here. Ray Kipke, a younger brother, secured two letters under Coach Young as a State end while Herbert, another brother, is now a freshman at State.

Fielding H. Yost has called Kipke one of the greatest athletes that has performed for Michigan, in baseball, basketball and football. Kipke was also a track man but had not the time to devote to this other branch of sport. His sensational play at the formal dedication of the Ohio State stadium is regretted still by Ohio State rooters. His punting exhibition in that game was considered on a par with the greatest kickers of all time. During his final two years he suffered as all stars by being a marked man but continued to draw the attention of critics throughout the country.

With Kipke at the helm the fortunes of Michigan State college football should rise if for no other reason than the power of Kipke to draw athletes into the State field.

JOHNSON WANTED MANAGER'S BERTH WITH WASHINGTON

Washington—Walter Johnson, who leaves the Nationals after 20 years of continuous service, is said to be disappointed at the final turn of events in his case.

Johnson has often expressed the desire to end his career with the club he started, Washington. It is also a well known fact that he rather cherished a desire to try his hand at managing the local club before bidding adieu to the majors.

Had Clark Griffith been in need of a manager he would have named Johnson, but with Stanley Harris, present leader, having another year to his contract, there was no place for Johnson in the managerial scheme.

Walter's future as a manager is decidedly uncertain. There are many players who fear he will be too easy with his men to get the best results.

Ottawa Senators Beat Detroit, 2-1, In Hockey Match

Detroit, Nov. 22.—(P)—The Ottawa Senators, after trailing the Detroit Cougars for one period, accounted for two goals in the last two periods to defeat the Detroit team, 2 to 1, in the opening game of the National Hockey League season here tonight.

J. Sheppard accounted for the only Detroit goal in the first period, unassisted. Neighbor tied the score on a pass for the Ottawa Senators in the second period and Finnegan goalied on a pass from Neighbor in the closing period.

MANDELL WILL RISK HIS TITLE

McLarnin - Wallace Bout Will Determine Opponent

By CHARLES W. DUNKLEY (Associated Press Sports Editor) Chicago—Sammy Mandell, after cuffing secondary opponents in tank towns for a year or more, has determined to come out in the open and risk his world's lightweight championship against every dangerous challenger in the division.

The Sheik of Rockford says he is ready to meet any and all opposition at the lightweight limit. His decision to wade into a heavy program was helped along by the arrival of a boy in his home, Richard Samuel Mandell, now two months old.

This youngster, Mandell says, has changed his fighting complex. It has made a new man of him. It has inspired him to box at least twice a month during the coming winter season to fatten his ring fortune.

Mandell has promised to meet the winner of the Jimmy McLarnin-Billy Wallace match, to be decided in the new $2,600,000 Olympia Arena in Detroit, November 23. It will be a real elimination contest between outstanding challengers, both excellent boxers and each capable of taking a punch without folding up.

The Olympia Arena, opened in October, has a seating capacity of 17,000 and its owners call it the Madison Square Garden of the middle west.

Beginning as a skinny flyweight, McLarnin, born in Belfast, Ireland, has moved on through the bantamweight and the featherweight divisions until he has blossomed into a full-fledged lightweight with the prospect of heading for the 147-pound ranks.

He first came into notice in 1925 when he whipped the great little Pancho Villa in San Francisco, but little was heard of him again until he toppled Louis (Kid) Kaplan in Chicago in October. He is 21.

Wallace will meet McLarnin at 137 pounds, conceding the latter five or six pounds.

DANGEROUS TO PAY ATHLETES

A. A. U. Opposed to Refunding of Lost Salaries

BY ALAN J. GOULD (Associated Press Sports Writer) Cincinnati, Nov. 22.—(P)—Any proposal to pay athletes for their time lost in Olympic competition is "dangerous" and contrary to all concepts of American sportsmanship and amateurism, the Amateur Athletic Union decided today in going on record as vigorously opposed to the broken time provision adopted by the International Football association in connection with the 1928 Olympics.

The "broken-time" rule under which players on soccer football teams entering the next Olympics may be reimbursed for the time taken from their work has received the endorsement of the International Olympic committee, but American authorities through Maj. Gen. Douglas McArthur, president of the American Olympic committee, have served notice that they will not accept it.

The A. A. U. endorsed this protest today. It is the understanding that the United States Football association also opposes such a ruling and will not accept it as operating in sending an American soccer team to Amsterdam next year.

Besides settling other affairs connected with its part in organizing the American Olympic program, the A. A. U. in the closing session of its convention today re-elected Murray Hulbert of New York to a fourth term as president, a record for this office, and named New York as the 1928 convention city over fifteen other places.

Daniel J. Farris of New York was elected to succeed Frederick W. Ruben of New York as secretary, the latter having resigned after serving 13 years. Other officers named include Charles Brennan, fourth vice president, Detroit.

Turn Down Hubbard's Appeal. Reconsidering several applications for records the convention accepted as new American marks the 880-yard and 800-meter relay figures, both one minute 25.45 seconds, as made by the Southern California quartet last May after receiving word that they were clocked by fifth seconds watches and not tenth seconds watches as was first reported.

At the same time the appeal of DeHart Hubbard of Cincinnati, negro star, for recognition of his world's broad jump record of 26 feet 2 1/4 inches, made here last September, was turned down. The meet referees' report that the take-off was one inch higher than the landing pit precluded acceptance of this mark for which Hubbard sought recognition to replace his own present world's record of 25 feet, 10 7/8 inches.

The fight over award of the Olympic marathon tryout to Boston, April 19, instead of to Baltimore, was renewed today and resulted in a compromise under which the performances at all established marathons, such as those at Baltimore as well as Detroit, will be considered in making American Olympic selections. The Boston marathon however, remains officially designated as the Olympic tryout as well as the national championship event.

S. CALIFORNIA VS. NOTRE DAME

Power and Strategy at Grips When Elevens Meet

Chicago (P)—Strategy will battle power for supremacy when two great offensive football machines—Notre Dame and Southern California—stage another inter-sectional classic on Soldiers Field here November 26.

Distinctive tactics in onslaught, fathomed by master minds of football, promise to duplicate what visiting coaches considered one of the greatest exhibitions of super-football—the Notre Dame one-point victory in the Los Angeles Coliseum last fall.

Howard Jones, U. S. C. director, will present an array of power backs, which no line yet has stopped, in an attempt to offset the bewildering shift and fast-running rear guards of the Knute Rockne clan.

There will be Drury, big blond captain, who carries the ball for great chunks of yardage behind extraordinary interferences. When the mid-field ground game falters, there will be Don Williams, who, like Drury, runs from the signal caller's berth and doesn't know how many stones there are in the opposing wall.

If Williams tires, there will be Howard Elliott, fast starting end and passer, not to speak of the battering human, Harry Edelson, charging from fullback. McCaslin, who guards the left end of the Trojan line, is Jones' best pass snagger and Drury, Williams and Elliott all can pass. Jess Hibbs filters through the line virtually on every play from his tackle post.

Probably the greatest threat of the South Benders will be the almost unerring pass of Christy Flanagan, Rockne's key offensive man. Flanagan comes in with John Nelmeo and probably Riley after the shock troops have taken the brunt of the opening rush. Nelmeo, who starts head down after the confusing sidestep, seldom fails to count. The Rockne offensive is fast and bewildering. Little huddling marks the various phases of the rush.

A single unconverted touchdown last year spelled defeat for the Trojans in a game which was almost errorless. Nelmeo made the second touchdown which gave Notre Dame the 13-12 victory.

YOST'S SON TO PLAY THURSDAY

Detroit Clashes With South Dakota State Thanksgiving Day

Detroit, Nov. 22.—(P)—The products of Michigan high school coaching the sons of famous fathers will be on display in the University of Detroit stadium here Thursday when the University of Detroit varsity and freshmen squads meet South Dakota State and Manlius (N. Y.), respectively, in the double attraction offered Thanksgiving Day football fests.

In the University of Detroit line and backfield are many of the stars of past high school teams who gained all-state recognition. In the Manlius lineup are names reminiscent of glorious days when Willie Heston, the late Walter Camp's choice for all-time All-American, and Fielding H. Yost fought the early battles of the gridiron. Two sons of the great Heston, Willie, Jr., and Jack and the only son of Yost, Fielding H., Jr., will take their places opposed to Detroit freshmen. It is expected the Detroit yearlings will find themselves outclassed.

Young Willie, whose father calls him Bill, has already become the prep school sensation of the east. He started his football career with Northwestern high here, present city champion.

In the Detroit varsity backfield are included the brilliant Lloyd Brazil, all-state choice two years ago from Flint high school, and four former Detroit high school stars, Lester Vachon of Northern, Ray Murphy of St. Joseph's, Bob Maniere and Cy Janowsky of University of Detroit high. Brazil is a sophomore.

Dispatches from the east throughout the present session have remarked the ability of Willie, Jr., to break away from opposing lines and seconded defense for sparkling runs often resulting in scores. He is considered the ace of a team that is completing a remarkably successful prep school season and has yet two years between him and intercollegiate competition.

Brazil Like Flanagan. Last Saturday the youth closed his home season by romping over the University of Buffalo freshmen for five touchdowns, including two scores on return of punts.

As for Lloyd Brazil, his coach, "Bud" Boeringer, 1926 All-American center at Notre Dame, compares him with Flanagan. Rockne's backfield star of this year. Although Brazil is not the high scorer of a team which has run up 195 points to 47 for opponents this season, he has performed conspicuously in every game Detroit has played. A star of great brilliance while playing with Flint high school

16 Get Letters at Northern State Teachers' College

Marquette, Mich., Nov. 22.—(P)—Sixteen members of the Northern State Teachers college football team were awarded their letters at the annual football dinner, held Tuesday night. Letters were presented by Coach C. B. Hedgecock. The following players were honored:

Capt. Jerry Hemr of Menominee of James Hardimon of Marquette, four-year sweaters; George Collins and Allen Ronberg of Negaunee and Lauri J. Hillberg and Joseph de Cooke of Marquette, two-year gold fobs; Wallace "Bud" Finch, Escanaba; Jack Siltala, Munising; George Harris, Stambaugh; Albert Corkin, Ishpeming; George Gaudry, Negaunee; Casimir Zambrowski, Ironwood; Leo Godin, Florence, Wis.; Oscar Wasburg of Negaunee; Gordon Seger, Gladstone, and Kenneth Tipper, Kingsford, first year sweaters.

L. O. Gant, registrar of the college and former coach, was toastmaster at the dinner.

Wallace Outweighed by Jimmy McLarnin

Detroit, Nov. 22.—(P)—Billy Wallace, Cleveland lightweight, will probably face a weight disadvantage of from five to eight pounds when he meets Jimmy McLarnin in the new Olympia arena here Wednesday night before what is expected to be a capacity crowd of 17,000 spectators.

Both Wallace and McLarnin are considered contenders for the lightweight mantle worn by Sammy Mandell. However, McLarnin is rapidly growing into a welterweight which would remove him from Mandell's class. Managers of both fighters reported their charges tonight in top condition.

HOCKEY SCORES

he has exceeded the expectations of his coaches and has two years remaining for intercollegiate competition with teams in the east, south and middle-west. Brazil has scored six touchdowns while backfield mates, Capt. Connell and Maloney, plunging fullback, have made nine and seven, respectively. Connell adding six points after touchdown and Maloney two. Many of these scores have been made possible by Brazil's remarkable sprints.

BILLY EVANS SAYS

One of the greatest battles ever staged between Princeton and Yale.

That is the proper classification of the 1927 clash between these traditional rivals.

Yale won a glorious victory in the final minutes of play. The final score was 14-6 and it falls dismally to tell the story of the tense struggle for supremacy waged between Old Eli and the Tiger.

One must go to the superlatives in an effort to do justice to the game and the teams. I have seen at least 15 meetings between Princeton and Yale but never got quite the thrill out of any of them as the 1927 meeting.

"Two great teams in an extraordinary game," best tells the story. They struck me as being just the two best teams I have seen in action this year.

Yale won a glorious victory, but in so doing I am not quite so sure they impressed the 80,000 that they were as much better than Princeton as the score would lead one to believe.

Tigers Best at First For 50 minutes of the game, Princeton outplayed Yale. The margin was slight, perhaps just about what the score showed, 6-0. In the final 10 minutes of the game Yale had the edge. One desperate play changed the entire complexion of the game, started Yale to victory and Princeton to defeat.

The Yale-Princeton game was a battle of two great lines. Yale was conceded to have the stronger line by all the experts, yet for 50 minutes the Tiger forwards made jest of expert opinion.

Twice Yale was within the 10-yard line with four down to put over the touchdown. Yet, on each occasion Princeton rose to great heights and held for downs.

The one chance Princeton had to score was seized by the Tigers in a determined manner and, in the pinch, Coach Bill Roper's team had enough strength and deception to its play to score its only touchdown.

Yale, when it was within scoring distance, insisted on hitting the center of the line and failed. Princeton employed deception and succeeded.

Break Decided Game One big break decided the Yale-Princeton game, a long forward pass that succeeded and resulted in a touchdown. Yale deserved that break because she made it by taking a desperate yet logical chance. On a fourth down, with 12 yards to go and the ball in the middle of the field, Hoben tossed a 30-yard pass to Fishwick, who raced 20 yards for the touchdown that tied the game.

I have since wondered if luck played a bigger part than strategy. I am inclined to think that Yale had saved this play for the pinch.

Throughout the game up to the final period, Left End Scott had been the recipient of most of the Yale passes. However, just before the play that killed off Princeton, Fishwick had figured in a 17-yard gain.

At the start of the fatal pass, the Princeton secondary seemed to be centering its attention on Scott. In the meantime, Fishwick drifted over from his position at right end to almost the sidelines on the opposite side of the field, to take Hoben's pass unmolested and run for a touchdown.

That play decided the old football game. It gave Yale new courage and although Princeton fought on to the very end, the Hoben to Fishwick pass didn't help the spirit of the Tigers.

The NUT CRACKER by Joe Williams

A western center cut his lip but went right back into the line. Lucky for the coach—we mean that he didn't cut his.

A coach's jaw these days is far more valuable than the well-known bone that Samson used on the Philistine's aggregation.

Head Linesman O'Goofy says he didn't even know Philadelphia had a team in "them days."

A center can play football with a cut lip, but it puts him in a deuce of a fix on Saturday night.

Soldiers guarded the Ohio eleven in their preparation for the game with Illinois. Is that the only way Wilce could keep his players in?

Ohio should have saved the soldiers for Saturday, and let 'em snipe a "Pinky" Grange going around the ends.

CHAUFFEUR ON WITNESS STAND

George Klug Testifies in Remus Murder Trial

Cincinnati, Ohio, Nov. 22.—(AP)—Controversy over his own statements and taking refuge behind "I don't recall," George Klug, the man who drove George Remus to Eden Park here where he killed his wife October 6, last, testified in Remus' murder trial here today.

Klug was called as a witness for the prosecution but proved so hostile that the state asked that the records show that it expressed surprise.

At adjournment Klug's narrative had been carried to a point where he had started for the Remus home to drive his employer to the fatal meeting.

On the night of October 5, Klug testified, he was called by telephone by George Conners, who has been identified as one of Remus' secretaries, and told that Remus wished him to come down town and drive his car.

Upon that occasion he drove Remus to the hotel in which Mrs. Remus was living, but said that Remus did not leave the car in an effort to see his wife, which had been declared the purpose of the trip.

After remaining outside the hotel for some time, Remus directed that he be driven home and that

Klug called for him there the next morning at about 7 o'clock. Klug stated that he had obtained the automobile from his own home, then that he had gotten the keys to it from Conners at a downtown hotel in front of which the machine had been parked and again that he had not seen Conners at the hotel.

Spent Night in Club. In a statement to the police the afternoon of the shooting, Klug said that he had kept the automobile at his home and that Remus had telephoned him there at 7 a. m. to come to the Remus mansion on Price hill. It was introduced as evidence.

In his testimony Klug asserted that he had spent the night in a gambling club and went for Remus as he had been told to do the night before.

Upon arrival at Remus' downtown hotel the night preceding the shooting, Klug testified he saw only Remus, but he admitted under cross-examination that two weeks ago he informed the county prosecutor that he had seen Conners and a group of men in Remus' suite.

"My case comes up tomorrow and I want to see Mrs. Remus before she goes to court," Klug quoted as the only remark from Remus during the night drive to Mrs. Remus' hotel.

Fifteen Witnesses Called. Klug described himself as a pipe fitter who for the past six months had been a chauffeur for Remus and Conners.

"What does Conners do?" demanded Walter K. Sibbalt, assistant prosecutor.

"He is Remus' secretary," "What does Remus do?"

"He doesn't do anything," replied Klug. Klug was the fifteenth witness of the day. He was preceded on the stand by seven men and women who either saw Remus shoot his wife or standing over her with a pistol in his hand, after she had been wounded fatally; the surgeon who performed an operation in an effort to save Mrs. Remus' life; several witnesses called in an effort to prove that the woman was slain as a result of a conspiracy and a tiny 12-year-old boy.

The burden of the testimony of the tot, whose feet swung far above the floor when he climbed into the witness chair, was that when he got home for lunch from the school, "the day everybody was talking about Mr. Remus killing his wife," he had seen a strange automobile parked in front of his home. There was no effort made to identify the machine and it was supposed to have been the one Klug had driven to the death scene.

"It's a Sin to Lie." The appearance of the little fellow as a bright interlude, however, in the grim business of the state trying to claim a life for a life.

"Why, here, wait a minute," exclaimed Judge Chester R. Shook as he peered down over his bench and took in the five-year-old size of the prospective witness.

"How old are you?" "Twelve," piped the childish voice.

"Well, do you know what it means to tell a lie?" asked the judge.

"Yes, sir; it is a sin against God." "He qualifies," endorsed the judge.

ODD MARRIAGE IS CARRIED OUT

Young Couple Enter Into Companionate Matrimonial Pact

Girard, Kan., Nov. 22.—(AP)—A matrimonial experiment accepted as purely a companionate one entailing no financial responsibilities of home-making was entered upon here today by Miss Josephine Haldeman-Julius, 18, and Audrey C. Roselle, 20.

Dr. L. M. Birkhead, pastor of All Souls' Unitarian church, Kansas City, united the young couple at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Haldeman-Julius, Girard publishers and authors, who are advocates of companionate marriage.

The ceremony was conventional in every respect, but Roselle and his bride agreed with the support of their parents that each would be free to carve out a career without immediately taking on the responsibility of establishing a home.

Next Monday the bride will return to her classes at the Girard high school, Walter Wallace, superintendent of schools, said he approved the marriage and saw no reasons why Mrs. Roselle should not complete her studies.

Roselle is employed in his father-in-law's publishing house and intends to re-enter the University of Kansas as a student the next semester. Will Not Sacrifice Education. He explained it was necessary for him to work his way through school and he would be unable to provide a home for two until he had completed a law course and established himself in his profession. His bride plans to take up a dancing career.

Both said a companionate marriage would permit them to enjoy each other's companionship without sacrificing their education as many school mates had done.

"So many girls, especially those in school, have affairs, and they would be better off and more capable of putting their minds on their work if they were married," said the bride.

Mrs. Haldeman-Julius expressed the belief that the marriage would finally terminate in a true "family marriage."
