SOLONS A JEALOUS LOT
Washington.—Our worthy solons in Congress are a jealous lot. Take for instance the other day when Congressman Eaton of New Jersey became so unmindful of the dignity in the House of Representatives that he referred to the Senate as "the higher body." Came a chorus of protests and the record was revised to "the lower body."

IN NEW YORK

New York.—Manhattan fairly overflows with tales that cry for a new O. Henry to come along and write them. They pop up at every corner and in every scene, just as they did in the stories of Bagdad-by-the-Subway.

For instance: at a party the other night I met a physician who specializes in blood transfusions. He told me of a handsome, full-blooded young Russian who came to his office. The Russian said he wanted to sell his blood and tests showed that the young man would be able to do this about once a week without harmful effects.

"One day," the doctor went on, "I had an emergency call. I phoned at once for the young Russian and he came hurrying over. As he was preparing for the transfusion he glanced into the operating room.

"When he turned around, I saw his face was troubled. 'I can't go through with this one,' he said. I asked him why not. 'Because that's the society girl I'm trying to marry and she would just find out what I really do for a living.'"

"It was an emergency case, as I say. So we just put a bit of cloth over her face and he gave his blood. She paid for it. He'll use the money to woo her and she'll recover. Some day maybe she'll find out—that is, if he ever wins her! And I wonder whether she'll think him a hero or a cad!"

I'm inclined to wonder myself. And, again, for instance: Another physician, a neurologist and brain specialist, tells me of a romance that never quite died. About a year ago a man well past his seventies came for treatment. He was suffering from hallucinations. Being a bit mentally unbalanced the old man thinks people are trying to get him to the insane asylum.

One day an old woman came, suffering from a severe nervous ailment. She was emaciated and wrinkled far beyond her years. The old lady suddenly appeared in the office of the office nurse and asked the name of the old man. Upon hearing it she sat for a moment, nodding her head in unbelief.

"Well," the nurse related, "it seems that this old man and this old lady had been sweethearts in their boy and girl years. It seems to have been the great childhood love."

They went their various ways and both married. Both raised families. Both grew old. When the old lady came to the office she sensed something familiar about him and verified her suspicions—now a doddering, senile old man.

And there you have your plot! At the end of the romance trail! But, if you're going to write it to suit me you'll have to have your irony with you.

AVOID UGLY PIMPLES

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer, if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights.

Cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effective, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; know them by their color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take nightly for a week. See a new much better you feel and look. 15c, 30c, 60c.—Adv.

By trouble. It seems as if it were up to the Senate to find out what is the matter.
ROMANCE IS A FUNNY THING.
What is known in everyday speech as "romance" is a peculiar sort of thing when you stop to examine it: a sort of two-edged sword, in some ways, that cuts where, by the rules of the game, it shouldn't.

INVESTIGATING THE COAL INDUSTRY.

Senator Hiram Johnson asks the Senate to begin a sweeping investigation of the nation's soft coal industry, and Senator David A. Reed of Pennsylvania promptly indorses the project.
Senator Johnson is interested primarily in the eviction of strikers and their families from company-owned homes, and in the use of "coal and iron police" in Pennsylvania. Senator Reed indicates that he is interested more in the financial and economic structure of the soft coal industry as a whole.

Very romantic, is it not? Surely it is.
But real life reversed the situation in Washington the other day. Two women loved the same man. They confronted him and demanded that he choose between them. He could not. So they both poison, and are now in hospitals. And real life, following the romantic formula, failed utterly to achieve romance.

MR. RICKARD'S CROP OF BUMS
Mr. Texas Rickard, the well-known leather goods distributor, says he is bitterly disappointed over the showing made, recently, by candidates for the distinction of appearing in the ring with Mr. Dempsey and Mr. Tunney.

Perhaps it is unkind to recall that the crop Mr. Rickard is so reluctant to harvest is the crop he himself planted, and the crop he has been cultivating for the last two years. Some government bulletins on certified seed might be of immense value to him before sowing operations are resumed. It is a well-known principle of agriculture that alligator pears do not grow from burdock seeds and that onion sets do not produce tuberoses.

The Piffle Hook

MR. TEXAS RICKARD opines that, excepting for Dempsey and Tunney, "the present crop of heavyweights are a bunch of bums." Why, oh why, was it necessary for him to drag in Dempsey and Tunney?

LYRICS OF LIFE

I find some verses now and then,
A thought that gives me cheer,
Some lines I'd like to read again,
And so I put them here.

Some lesson to re-learn.

and another thing: with television linked up with the radio, just think what it's going to mean in announcers' barber and laundry bills!
STRATEGY is a weird thing. A New York girl held thirteen hearts in a bridge game, so she bid four clubs. She was doubled, so she then bid four hearts which was doubled and redoubled, her opponents thinking the hearts were a refuge from the doubled clubs. When Mr. Work said Whitehead got around to it, we hope they'll write a book describing the reactions of the pal's partner to this sort of smoke-screen operation.

AUTO PARTS TO BE MADE HERE

I. Stephenson Company Will Make Important Change

The I. Stephenson Company trustees will begin, about February 1, the manufacture of wood automobile parts in the flooring plant at Wells. The plant was closed down Saturday night to permit the installation of the machinery necessary to cut "dimension stock". Two or three weeks will be required to make the change, it was said at the company's offices yesterday.

This step, it was said, is another step in the policy of the company to get nearer, at every opportunity to the finished product in the lumber business. The cutting of dimension stock in the plant on other lines and it is believed that a brisk demand for automobile body part will result from this latest move. It is quite likely that furniture parts and other "dimension" products will be added later. This means increased capacity and consequently increased employment, it was stated. The company has the dry kilns, the floor space and the power necessary for manufacturing an extensive line of articles for which there is an increasing demand.

The work of installation and "changing over" will be speeded up and the plant reopened as quickly as possible, it was emphasized.

MOTHER

A Cross, Sick Child is Constipated!
Look at Tongue

No matter what ails your child, a gentle, thorough laxative should always be the first treatment given.

If your little one is out-of-sorts, half-sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look! Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that the little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup." and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without gripping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless, "fruity laxative" because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup;" then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." —Adv.

Regular salaried members of the sheriff's department and police force are not required to secure permits under the new regulations. State Trooper Charles W. Ingles of Iron Mountain attended the meeting as the representative of the commissioner of public safety. Prosecuting Atty. Glenn W. Jackson, Chief of Police John J. Tolan, Sheriff Elmer Swanson and County Clerk Geo. E. Harvey also served as members of the board.

The Girl You Left Behind You
Didn't you promise yourself last year—only a few short weeks ago—that you were going to "turn over a new leaf"? That you really were going to start a savings account, stop frittering money away on unnecessary things and pay cash for everything.

The Girl You Left Behind You in 1927 was very serious about it and completely convinced that putting the family finances on a pay-as-you-go basis was the only sensible thing to do. She realized that half of the monthly bills were unnecessary and that paying cash made you a keener judge of values and a more intelligent shopper.

Don't forget all about that girl—now that 1928 is two weeks old. Our cash selling means a cash saving, of course, which is handy to start that bank account, but it means more than that. It will help you face the future with confidence and in 1929 the Girl You Leave Behind You will look back over 1928 with satisfaction and peace of mind.

THE "CANARY" MURDER CASE

THE BENSON MURDER CASE

CHAPTER I

IN THE offices of the Homicide Bureau of the detective division of the New York police department there is a large steel filing cabinet; and within it, among thousands of others of its kind, there reposes a small green index-card on which is typed: ODELL, MARGARET, 184 West 71st Street, Sept. 10. Murder: Strangled about 11 p. m. Apartment ransacked. Jewelry stolen. Body found by Amy Gibson, maid."

Here, in a few commonplace words, is the bleak, unadorned statement of one of the most astonishing crimes in the police annals of this country—a crime so contradictory, so baffling, so ingenious, so unique, that for many days the best minds of the police department and the district attorneys office were completely at a loss as to even a method of approach. Each line of investigation only tended to prove that Margaret Odell could not possibly have been murdered. And yet, huddled on the great silken davenport in her living-room lay the girl's strangled body, giving the lie to so grotesque a conclusion.

The true story of this crime, as it eventually came to light after a disheartening period of utter darkness and confusion, revealed many strange and bizarre ramifications, many dark recesses of man's unexplored nature, and the uncanny subtlety of a human mind sharpened by desperate and tragic despair.

Margaret Odell was a product of the bohemian demimonde of Broadway—a scintillant figure who seemed somehow to typify the gaudy and spurious romance of transient gaiety. For nearly two years before her death she had been the most conspicuous and, in a sense, popular figure of the city's night life.

Her notoriety was due in part to certain legendary tales of her affairs with one or two obscure potentates in the backwash of Europe. She had spent two years abroad after her first success in "The Bretonne Maid"—a popular musical comedy in which she had been mysteriously raised from obscurity to the rank of "star"—and one may cynically imagine her press-agent took full advantage of her absence to circulate vermilion tales of her conquests.

Her appearance went far toward sustaining her somewhat equivocal fame. There was no question that she was beautiful in a hard, slightly flamboyant way. I remember seeing her dancing one night at the Antlers Club—a famous rendezvous for post-midnight pleasure seekers, run by the notorious Red Raegan. She impressed me then as a girl of uncommon loveliness, despite the calculating predatory cast of her features. She was of medium height, slender, graceful in a leonine way, and, I thought, a trifle aloof and even haughty in manner—a result, perhaps, of her reputed association with European royalty. She had the traditional courtesan's full, red lips, and the wide, mon-goose eyes of Rossetti's "Blessed Damsel." There was in her face that strange combination of sensual promise and spiritual renunciation with which the painters of all ages have sought to endow their conceptions of the Eternal Magdalene. Hers was the type of face, voluptuous and with a hint of mystery, which rules man's emotions and, by subjugating his mind, drives him to desperate deeds.

Margaret Odell had received the sobriquet of Canary as a result of a part she had played in an elaborate ballet of the "Follies," in which each girl had been gowned to represent a variety of bird. To her had fallen the role of canary, and her costume of white-and-yellow satin, together with her mass of shining golden hair and pink-and-white complexion, had distinguished her in the eyes of the spectators as a creature of outstanding charm. Before a fortnight had passed—so eulogistic were her press notices, and so unerringly did the audience single her out for applause—the "Bird Ballet" was changed to the "Canary Ballet," and Miss Odell was promoted to the rank of what might charitably be called "premiere danseuse," at the same time having a solo waltz and a song interpolated for the special display of her charms and talents.

She had quitted the "Follies" at the close of the season, and during her subsequent spectacular career in the haunts of Broadway's night life she had been popularly and familiarly called the Canary. Thus it happened that when her dead body was found, brutally strangled, in her apartment, the crime immediately became known, and was always thereafter referred to as the Canary murder.

My own participation in the investigation of the Canary murder case—or rather my role of Boswellian spectator—constituted one of the most memorable experiences of my life. At the time of Margaret Odell's murder John F. X. Markham was district attorney of New York, having taken office the preceding January. I need hardly remind you that during the four years of his incumbency he distinguished himself by his almost uncanny success as a criminal investigator. The praise which was constantly accorded him, however, was highly distasteful to him; for, being a man with a keen sense of honor, he instinctively shrank from accepting credit for achievements not wholly his own. The truth is that Markham played only a subsidiary part in the majority of his most famous criminal cases. The credit for their actual solution belonged to one of Markham's very close friends who refused, at the time, to permit the facts to be made public.

This man was a young social aristocrat, whom, for purposes of anonymity, I have chosen to call Philo Vance.

Vance had many amazing gifts and capabilities. He was an art collector in a small way, a fine amateur pianist, and a profound student of aesthetics and psychology. Although an American, he had largely been educated in Europe, and still retained a slight English accent and intonation. He had a liberal independent income, and spent considerable time fulfilling the social obligations which devolved on him as a result of family connections; but he was neither an idler nor a dilettante.

Vance was not yet thirty-five, and, in a cold, sculptural fashion, was impressively good looking. His face was slender and mobile; but there was a stern sardonic expression to his features which acted as a barrier between him and his fellows. He was not emotionless but his emotions were in the main intellectual.

Hers was the type of face, voluptuous and with a hint of mystery, which rules man's emotions and, by subjugating his mind, drives him to desperate deeds.

I kept a fairly complete record of the cases in which Vance participated, little thinking that I would ever be privileged to make them public; but Markham, after being defeated, as you remember, on a hopelessly split ticket at the next election, withdrew from politics; and last year Vance went abroad to live, declaring he would never return to America. As a result I obtained permission from both of them to publish my notes in full. Vance stipulated only that I should not reveal his name; but otherwise no restrictions were placed upon me.

I have related elsewhere the peculiar circumstances which led to Vance's participation in criminal research, and how, in the face of almost insuperable contradictory evidence, he solved the mysterious shooting of Alvin Benson. The present chronicle deals with his solution of Margaret Odell's murder, which took place in the early fall of the same year, and which, you will recall, created an even greater sensation than its predecessor.

A curious set of circumstances was accountable for the way in which Vance was shouldered with this new investigation. Markham for weeks had been badgered by the anti-administration newspapers for the signal failures of his office in obtaining convictions against certain underworld offenders whom the police had turned over to him for prosecution. As a result of prohibition a new and dangerous, and wholly undesirable, kind of night life had sprung up in New York. A large number of well-financed cabarets, calling themselves night clubs, had made their appearance along Broadway and in its side streets; and already there had been an appealing number of serious crimes, both passion and monetary, which, it was said, had had their inception in these unsavory resorts.

At last when a case of murder accompanying a hold-up and jewel robbery in one of the family hotels up-town was traced directly to plans and preparations made in one of the night clubs and when two detectives of the homicide bureau investigating the case were found dead one morning in the neighborhood of the club with bullet wounds in their backs, Markham decided to pigeonhole the other affairs of his office and take a hand personally in the intolerable criminal conditions that had arisen.

(Sunday, Sept. 9)

On the day following his decision, Markham and Vance and I were sitting in a secluded corner of the lounge-room of the Stuyvesant Club. We often came together there, for we were all members of the club, and Markham frequently used it as a kind of unofficial up-town headquarters.

"It's bad enough to have half the people in this city under the impression that the district attorney's office is a kind of high-class collection agency," he remarked that night, "without being necessitated to turn detective because I'm not given sufficient evidence, or the right kind of evidence, with which to secure convictions."

Vance looked up with a slow smile, and regarded him quizzically.

"The difficulty would seem to be," he returned, with an indolent drawl, "that the police labor under the notion that evidence which would convince a man of ordinary intelligence, would also convince a court of law. A silly notion, don't you know. Lawyers don't really want evidence: they want erudite technicalities. And the average policeman's brain is too forthright to cope with the pedantic demands of jurisprudence."

"It's not as bad as that," Markham retorted, with an attempt at good nature, although the strain of the past few weeks had tended to upset his habitual equanimity. "If there weren't rules of evidence, grave injustice would too often be done innocent persons. And even a criminal is entitled to protection in our courts."

Vance yawned mildly.

"Markham, you should have been a pedagogue. It's positively amazing how you've mastered all the standard oratorical replies to criticism. And yet, I'm unconvinced. You remember the Wisconsin case of the kidnaped man whom the courts declared presumably dead. Even when he reappeared, hale and hearty, among his former neighbors, his status of being presumably dead was not legally altered. The visible and demonstrable fact that he was actually alive was regarded by the court as an immaterial and imperinent side-issue. . . . Then there's the touchin' situation—so prevalent in this fair country—of a man being insane in one state and sane in another. . . . Your layman, swaddled in the darkness of ordinary common sense, would say that a person who is a lunatic on one bank of the river would still be a lunatic if he was on the opposite bank. And he'd also hold—erroneously, no doubt—that if a man was living, he would presumably be alive."

"Why this academic dissertation?" asked Markham, this time a bit irritably.

"It seems to touch rather vitally on the source of your present predicament," Vance explained equably. "The police, not being lawyers, have apparently got you into hot water, what? . . . Why not start an agitation to send all detectives to law school?"

Markham grunted. "I'd hardly endear myself to the people of this country if I answered the current strictures against me by recommending law courses for the police department."

"Permit me then, to suggest the alternative of Shakespeare's butcher: 'Let's kill all the lawyers!'"

"Unfortunately, it's a situation, not a utopian theory, that has to be met."

"And just how," asked Vance lazily, "do you propose to reconcile the sensible conclusions of the police with what you touchingly call correctness of legal procedure?"

"To begin with," Markham informed him, "I've decided henceforth to do my own investigating of all important night-club criminal cases. I called a conference of the heads of my departments yesterday, and from now on there's going to be some real activity radiating direct from my office. I intend to produce the kind of evidence I need for convictions."

Vance slowly took a cigaret from his case and tapped it on the arm of his chair.

"Ah! So you are going to substitute the conviction of the innocent for the acquittal of the guilty?"

Markham was nettled; turning in his chair he frowned at Vance.

"I won't pretend not to understand your remark," he said acidulously. "You're back again on your favorite theme of the inadequacy of circumstantial evidence as compared with your psychological theories and aesthetic hypothesis."

"Quite so," agreed Vance carelessly. "You know, Markham, your sweet and charmin' faith in circumstantial evidence is positively disarming. I tremble for the innocent victims you are about to gather into your legal net. You'll eventually make the mere attendance at any cabaret a frightful hazard."

Markham smoked a while in silence.

"Why this sweeping depreciation of circumstantial evidence? I admit that at times it may be misleading; but it often forms powerful presumptive proof of guilt. Indeed, Vance, one of our greatest legal authorities has demonstrated that it is the most powerful actual evidence in existence. Direct evidence, in the very nature of crime, is almost always unavailable. If the courts had to depend on it, the great majority of criminals would still be at large."

"I was under the impression that this precious majority had always enjoyed its untrammelled freedom."

Markham ignored the interruption.

"Take this example: A dozen adults see an animal running across the snow, and testify that it was a chicken; whereas a child sees the same animal, and declares it was a duck. They thereupon examine the animal's footprints and find them to be the web-footed tracks made by a duck. Is it not conclusive, then, that the animal was a duck and not a chicken, despite the preponderance of direct evidence?"

"I'll grant you your duck," acceded Vance indifferently.

"And having gratefully accepted the gift," pursued Markham, "I propound a corollary: A dozen adults see a human figure crossing the snow, and take oath it was a woman; where as a child asserts that the figure was a man. Now, will you not also grant that the circumstantial evidence of a man's footprints in the snow would supply incontrovertible proof that it was, in fact, a man, and not a woman?"

"Not at all, my dear Justinian," replied Vance, stretching his legs languidly in front of him; "unless, of course, you could show that a human being possesses no higher order of brains than a duck."

"What have brains to do with it?" Markham asked impatiently. "Brains don't affect one's footprints."

"Not those of a duck, certainly. But brains might very well—and, no doubt, often do—affect the footprints of a human being."

"Well, according to your highly and peculiarly developed processes of reasoning, would the circumstantial evidence of those masculine footprints indicate a man or a woman?"

"Not necessarily either," Vance answered; "or, rather, a possibility of each. Such evidence, when applied to a human being—to a creature, that is, with a reasoning mind—would merely mean to me that the figure crossing the snow was either a man in his own shoes, or a woman in man's shoes; or perhaps, even, a long-legged child."

"I'm delighted to observe," said Markham, "that, at least, you repudiate the possibility of a duck dressing itself up in the gardener's boots."

Vance was silent for a moment; then he said:

"The trouble with you modern Solons, d'ye see, is that you attempt to reduce human nature to a formula; whereas the truth is that man, like life, is infinitely complex. He's shrewd and tricky—skilled for centuries in all the most diabolical chicaneries. He is a creature of low cunning, who, even in the normal course of his vain and idiotic struggle for existence, instinctively and deliberately tells ninety-nine lies to one truth. A duck, not having had the heaven-kissing advantages of human civilization, is a straightforward and eminently honest bird."

"How," asked Markham, "since you jettison all the ordinary means of arriving at a conclusion, would you decide the sex or species of this person who left the masculine footprints in the snow?"

Vance blew a spiral of smoke toward the ceiling.

"First, I'd repudiate all the evidence of the twelve stigmata adults and the one bright-eyed child. Next, I'd ignore the footprints in the snow. Then, with a mind unprejudiced by dubious testimony and uncluttered with material clues, I'd determine the exact nature of the crime which this fleeing person had committed. After having analyzed its various factors, I could infallibly tell you not only whether the culprit was a man or a woman, but I could describe his habits, character, and personality. And I could do all this whether the fleeing figure left male or female or kangaroo tracks, or used stilts, or rode off on a velocipede."

Markham smiled broadly. "You'd be worse than the police in the matter of supplying me legal evidence, I fear."

"I, at least, wouldn't procure evidence against some unsuspecting person whose boots had been appropriated by the real culprit," retorted Vance.

He became suddenly serious.

"See here, old man; there are some shrewd intelligences at present allied with what the theologians call the power of darkness. The surface appearances of many of these crimes that are worrying you are palpably deceptive. Personally, I don't put much stock in the theory that a malevolent gang of cut-throats have organized an American camorra, and made the silly night clubs their headquarters. The idea is too melodramatic. It smacks too much of the gaudy journalistic imagination; it's too Eugene Sue-ish. Crime isn't a mass instinct except during war-time, and then it's merely an obscene sport. . . . Markham, old dear, don't let this romantic criminological idea lead you astray. And don't scrutinize the figurative fingerprints in the snow too closely. They'll confuse you most horribly."

He sighed deeply, and gave Markham a look of bantering commiseration.

"And have you paused to consider that your first case may even be devoid of footprints? . . . Alas! What, then, will you do?"

"I could overcome that difficulty by taking you along with me," suggested Markham, with a touch of irony. "How would you like to accompany me on the next important case that breaks?"

"I am ravished by the idea," said Vance.

Two days later the front pages of our metropolitan press carried glaring headlines telling of the murder of Margaret Odell.

RECORD CROWD TO SEE GAME

Escanaba Cage Fans Will Be Treated to Interesting Contest

Escanaba basketball fans will be treated to an interesting cage contest when the two local high school teams—Escanaba and St. Joseph—clash for the purpose of deciding the city championship. The two teams seem to be as evenly matched this season as they were last year when the Orange and Black boys rebounded out the parochial quintet, 23 to 20, in the final minute of play.

The Escanaba quintet that will play against the Purple five tonight is one that develops their scoring punch as the game progresses. In each of the four games played by the Roelers this year, more points were made by them in the second half than in the first. Coach Roels will choose his team from the following: Lambert, Stegath and Snyder, forwards; Olson, center; DeMars, Gieserman and Gustafson, guards. It is quite probable that Red Gustafson and Snyder will also see service part of the game in the pivot position.

Expect Record Crowd. The St. Joseph quintet will be virtually the same as the team that defeated Manistique last Friday. They are Kohlman and Fitzharris, forwards; Sullivan, center, and Moreau and Mileski, guards. Don Skopp will be available for the center position if he is needed.

A record-breaking crowd is expected to fill the Escanaba high gymnasium before the two teams meet. Both teams have many supporters in the city.

As a preliminary to the game, the St. Joseph Reserves will play the Escanaba Reserves, starting at 7:15 o'clock. This game will be refereed by Soderberg of the Escanaba faculty. Williamson of Gwin will handle the whistle for the main fray.

Iron Mountain K. C. to Send Bowlers Sunday

Next Sunday afternoon the Iron Mountain Council of Knights of Columbus will be here from the Ford city to bowl against the Escanaba Council at the Arcade alleys. The match will be for 15-man teams. A match worth watching is promised spectators.

Sunday afternoon, the Menominee team headed by Jack Gosling, invaded the Arcade alleys and returned considerably tamed. They were beaten in total pins by 233 maps.

The Hrn & Gleich team went into first place in the Industrial League when they took two out of three games from the Detroit Life Ins. Co. last night. The Birds Eye Veneer team took two out of three games from the City Bottling Works. In the second game, Paquin and Sonny Meyers were considerably off color but they came back strong in the last game.

Gladstone took three straight games from the U. P. Produce Co. last night in a return engagement at the Arcade.

SPARTANS BEAT COE COLLEGE 5

East Lansing, Jan. 16—(P)—Michigan State defeated Coe college of Iowa in a fast basketball game here tonight 35 to 25. The Spartans, with a tight defense and a passing game that showed considerable improvement over that displayed against the University of Detroit last week, were never in danger.

It was State's fourth successive victory on the court, taking an early lead which Coe overtook but once.

During the greater part of the game, the margin between the two teams was 10 points. In the second half, State resorted to defensive tactics, with a quick break occasionally netting a basket.

The Coe team, specializing in long shots, located the hoop for several spectacular scores late in the game. Otto, with four baskets, starred for the visitors. Felt and Colvin each scored 10 points for State, while Schau's guarding stood out.

NAHMA QUINT TO PLAY HERE

The Nahma Legion quintet, which boasts of 11 victories and only three defeats for this season already, will be seen in action for the first time this season at the Escanaba high school gymnasium with the Escanaba Independents as opponents Thursday night.

With Camps and Warner, Nahma has two of the best forwards in amateur basketball circles. The boys from the Bay de Noc mill town have played together often, naturally developing a fine brand of teamwork. They also have received plenty of moral support from Nahma fans at their games.

It is expected they will bring a large following with them Thursday night.

The Nahma boys defeated the strong Manistique Legion squad, 36 to 15, last Saturday night, and have hung up the scalps of several other strong teams in this locality. The Independents are working hard this week on the practice floor in preparation for the battle. The Indies have also made a creditable showing this season, defeating the strong Iron Mountain quintet in their first game and since then scoring triumphs over the Gladstone Buckeyes and Nahma.

The Nahma boys are out for revenge—therefore, a real hard battle is in prospect.

Michigan Defeats Ohio State, 41-21

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 16—(P)—The University of Michigan basketball team won an easy victory over the Ohio State quintet in a western conference basketball game, 41 to 21, in the Yost field house here tonight. It was Michigan's second straight victory in the conference after being defeated by Northwestern and Wisconsin. The score at the end of the half was Michigan 22; Ohio 14. Oosterbaan of Michigan and Grim of Ohio State were tied for scoring honors with 10 points to their credit.

Chapman, Michigan center, scored five field goals from the center of the playing field. With Ohio leading 8 to 5 Coach Veenker removed the Michigan captain, Harrigan, sending in Gawne, and Ohio State scored only three baskets during the remainder of the half.

ST. JOE HOLDS GRID BANQUET

Letters Awarded to Eighteen Members of Varsity Team

Eighteen members of the St. Joseph high school football squad were awarded their letters at a banquet held in St. Joseph's clubrooms last night. Coach Leo Brunelle also presented awards to eight members of the Reserves squad.

Clayton Leduc was elected honorary captain of the squad for mention in the school annual. This follows a custom adopted by the St. Joseph high school authorities since no regular captain is elected to pilot the team during the football season.

Coach Brunelle, in making the awards, complimented the boys on their showing made last fall against stronger teams from the larger high schools, although he attributed some of the defeats to the boys' not keeping themselves in condition. He disclosed that St. Joseph high school is losing eight letter men, and that next fall only five regulars will be available. The hard schedule which the Parochial gridlers faced last fall will be just as tough next season, Coach Brunelle pointed out, but he expressed himself as confident the boys would give a good account of themselves.

Wilfred Moreau acted as toastmaster. Short, interesting talks were given by the Reverend Fathers Bertrand, Caspar and Herbert, who praised the boys for the spirit they displayed in athletic activities, not to forget the splendid showing made by St. Joseph high students in scholarship. Other speakers were Leslie Sullivan and Jack Fitzharris. The banquet was prepared by the St. Joseph's Parent-Teacher association members, and the serving was done by the senior class girls.

The eighteen members of the varsity squad who received letters were: Wilfred Moreau, John Milecki, Joseph Vandenberg, Donald McGee, Theodor Papineau, Clayton Leduc, Stafford Leduc, Joseph Blake, Al Kohlman, Jack Fitzharris, Edward Frasher, Ernest LaCrosse, Fred Frederickson, Herbert Scheriff, Michael Stern, Art Klug, Don Skopp and Lester Sullivan. The Reserves who received a smaller letter "S" with an "R" inscribed were: Rowan Fitzharris, John Gannon, Al Frasher, Ray Clark, Robert Finley, Robert Geyer, Fred Frenn and "Red" O'Donnell.

The eight men who will be lost to the team next fall either through graduation or discontinuance before graduation, are: Blake, end; Frenn, guard; Papineau and McGee, tackles; Moreau, center; Jack Fitzharris, quarterback; Clayton Leduc, fullback, and Sullivan, halfback.

You certainly picked a "comer" this time!

YOU MEN who chose Granger—much obliged! Its growth so far beats anything in our experience. Of course we thought we knew what pipe smokers wanted—and in making Granger we certainly gave them the "works." It's differently aged, made, cut, packed and priced—with a solid reason for each difference. And apparently smokers understood those reasons as well as we did.

At that, though, one pipe-load is all the reason a man needs!

WHETHER you're riding the girders a hundred feet up in the air, holding the drill, or tossing the red hot rivets—a construction man is using his muscles all day long.

Out in the open, too, mostly—sometimes in a biting wind or a chilling drizzle.

Unless you look out for yourself, your muscles are likely to get stiff and painful—or you find yourself laid up with a bad cold or an attack of rheumatism.

The men of the Turner Construction Company in New York are an especially fine, healthy-looking lot of men. We asked them what they do to keep in such splendid condition.

About half of them said, "Sloan's is our great standby."

COUNTY 3RD IN LABOR MISHAPS

510 Compensable Accidents in Delta During Past Year.

Delta county was third among the counties of the upper peninsula in the number of compensable accidents reported for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1927, a report issued by Eugene J. Brock, chairman of the Michigan department of labor and industry, reveals. There were 510 cases of personal injury in industrial accidents in the county during the year, 1.6 per cent of all in the state.

The mining counties lead in the number of accidents, the report shows, Houghton county heading the list with 1,276 cases, or 3.9 per cent of all in the state, while Marquette county is second with 552 cases.

Wayne county, exclusive of Detroit and Highland Park, had fewer accidents than Houghton county, but Detroit had 12,696 cases, more than one-third of the state's total. Other industrial centers covered in the report are:

Flint, 1,323 cases, 4.1 per cent; Grand Rapids, 1,331 cases, 4.1 per cent; Highland Park, 1,476 cases, 4.5 per cent; Lansing, 772 cases, 2.4 per cent; Pontiac, 731 cases, 2.4 per cent; Muskegon, 660 cases, 2 per cent; and Saginaw, 523 cases, 2.5 per cent.

Accident Frequency

The average accident frequency in all industries, using 100 employees as a unit, is three. Foundries, stone, clay and glass industries, mines and quarries show marked injury frequency, the report states, with steam and electric railways showing the lowest frequency. This also seems to apply in lesser degree to public utilities.

Injuries from lifting, carrying or moving heavy, sharp or rough materials in most cases are traceable directly to carelessness of the injured persons or fellow workmen. Fingers are the greatest point of danger to workmen, the report shows, but a surprising feature is that body injuries exceed in frequency those to arms, wrists, hands and toes.

The upper peninsula tabulation follows:

County	No. of Accidents	Pct.

Legion Auxiliary Membership Grows

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 16—The American Legion Auxiliary will start 1928 with the largest advance enrollment for the new year in its history. It was announced by Mrs. Irene McIntyre Walbridge, national president, at national headquarters here. The heavy enrollment will give the organization greater strength for the work of the year than ever before, she stated.

Nearly three times as many memberships for 1928 have been received at national headquarters up to December 31 as were received for 1927 at the same date a year ago. The advance enrollments for 1927 were the largest ever received up to that time.

The full strength of the auxiliary will be thrown behind the program of the American Legion, Mrs. Walbridge said. The women's organization will concentrate its efforts during the coming year for the welfare of the disabled World war veterans and the families of the dead and disabled, for the maintenance of an adequate national defense, for the passage of the universal draft bill and for civic service by its units to the communities in which they are located.

THE RIGHT WAY TO BANISH FAT

Combat a cause which modern research has discovered. Turn food into fuel and energy, rather than into fat. Supply a natural element which your system lacks. That is the method embodied in Marmola prescription tablets.

People have used Marmola for 20 years—millions of boxes of it. They have told others the results. Now, in almost every circle, you can see the results in new beauty and new vim. Why not learn the way to attain them?

A book in each box of Marmola tells you the formula, also the reasons for results. You will know why the effects come, and why they are beneficial. Go ask your druggist—in fairness to yourself—for a $1 box of Marmola.

Assault-Battery Cases Dismissed

Victor Russel and R. V. Williams, two Rock young men who engaged in a first fight at a dance hall at Rock two weeks ago, patched up their differences in justice court here yesterday, agreeing to pay the court costs upon the dismissal of assault and battery charges against them.

Russel and Williams were arrested by the sheriff's department the night of the fight, but Russel was so badly bruised that he had to be taken to St. Francis hospital, where he was confined for a week.

The year 1927 corresponds with the year 5687-8 of the Jewish era.

WOMEN'S CLUB WORK PRAISED

Washington, Jan. 16—(P)—Indians of the United States owe their Americanization to the General Federation of Women's clubs, according to Princess Watawasa, a member of the Penobscot tribe of Maine, who, while a visitor at the headquarters of the Woman's club of Des Moines, Iowa, recently recalled the convention of the General Federation held in that city, and said:

"I shall never forget that meeting. A man had been sent out from New York to address the federation on Americanization and I had been sent out to sing. But when that man had finished I was so angry I could not sing, so I exercised a woman's privilege—I talked. And I pointed my finger in that man's face and told him what I thought about Americanization. It was a little different from what he thought.

"But the women seemed to agree with me, for the General Federation at once took up our cause, and eighteen months after that we, the first American citizens, were Americanized—thanks to American women.

"Now it is my hope that education and citizenship will hasten the day when reservations and guardianship will no longer be necessary for the welfare of the American Indian."
