ARRIVE TOO LATE TO SEE SON ALIVE

Sad Announcement Awaits Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Smith Upon Their Arrival in Detroit—Their Son, Maurice, Passes Away After Illness of But a Few Days.

Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Smith of this city who left Wednesday morning for Detroit in response to a telegram announcing the critical illness of their son, Maurice, arrived at their destination this morning too late to see the young man alive.

Maurice died about 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon after having been ill with typhoid fever and hemorrhages only since last Saturday.

Immediately after he became ill he was taken to a hospital in Detroit, and as soon as his illness became serious his relatives were notified. Mr. and Mrs. Smith left for Detroit as soon as possible after learning of Maurice's illness and to learn upon their arrival that he had passed away must have given an added shock to the severity of their grief.

It was intimated in the telegram received here today announcing Maurice's death that his remains would be brought here for burial; arriving on the Soo train tomorrow evening. Further details have not been received.

Maurice Smith was 18 years old and was a bright and promising youth. Early last summer he went to Detroit and had since been employed there in a railway office. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Claude B. Smith, live at 604 Elmore street. They probably will accompany the remains here.

JUST PEEKING INTO THINGS

State Factory Inspector Clendenning Makes His First Official Inspection Visit to Escanaba—Finds Conditions Here Generally Satisfactory.

Although it has not heretofore been announced in the local papers, it is nevertheless a fact that William Clendenning of Marquette, state inspector of factories, warehouses, hotels, stores and public buildings, has been in Escanaba for nearly a week engaged in his official work.

Mr. Clendenning was appointed factory inspector to succeed the late Peter Fitzpatrick of Ishpeming, who had held the position for a number of years and was well known here.

First Official Visit. This visit was Mr. Clendenning's first in his official capacity and he has been getting acquainted with all of the institutions and their proprietors coming within the scope of his work.

When asked today how he found conditions in Escanaba, Mr. Clendenning stated that they were in general quite satisfactory, but that in several instances he found a non-compliance with the laws and was obliged to give warning that this state of affairs must be remedied at once or prosecution would be necessary.

Finds One Obdurate. At one place Mr. Clendenning found the manager disinclined to answer questions or give any information whatever until he was made to comprehend that the information sought was such as the law clearly entitled the inspector to obtain by interrogatories and personal inspection.

Mr. Clendenning expected to complete his work in Escanaba today and from here will go to places in Menominee county to continue his inspection. He expects to get around to Escanaba about every seven or eight months, perhaps oftener, to make inspections.

MAY DIVIDE DETROIT M. E. CONFERENCE

One of the important matters that is to come up at the annual conference of the Methodist church in Detroit this week is the question of the separation of the upper peninsula counties from the Detroit conference, according to dispatches from that city.

One plan is to unite the upper peninsula counties with others in Wisconsin, forming a new conference. In this connection, the Detroit News says: "For years the poorly paid Methodist preachers of the upper peninsula, some of them receiving no more than $250 a year with house rent, have been murmuring at the necessity of traveling long distances each year to conference somewhere in the lower peninsula. These men say that if the upper peninsula is formed into a separate conference, it will not be necessary for them to spend, hereafter, a large fraction of their yearly salary to come to the yearly gathering of the denomination."

No subpoenas have been issued by the committee, and while the chairman has received a list of the names of possible witnesses the subject of who shall be asked to testify has not yet been considered.

The members of the committee can make their own rules and permit whatever testimony they consider relevant to be presented. With the exception of Senator Burkeley, all of them are lawyers and are in position to brush aside technicalities, should any be interposed, and readily get at the main facts.

THE "LOOKERS."

The merchant's problem in September and October is dealing with the "lookers" who wander through the stores and botler sales people without much thought of buying. Many of them are trusting to cuts of the late season to stock up for another year.

This does very well for people who are keen judges of fabrics. Others often find that cut rates mean secondary values, with no more wearing quality proportionate to price, and a sacrifice in quality of assortment, and in the satisfaction of getting stylish goods when they are wanted.

All this the merchant must demonstrate to his public as best he can through the newspaper advertisement, and in the face of a wide-spread contrary habit. If he does not make this effort to convince them, he will find that he must spend money lavishly later in the season for bargain sales. And at that time the cost of the advertising comes out of the smaller profit of cut rates.

CHANGING MEMORIAL DAY.

The opposition of the old soldiers to ball playing and picnicking on Memorial day is very strong. They consider these holiday festivities a desecration of the day, which spoils it for its main purpose. The next Army of the Republic will have before it a resolution to change the date of the annual Memorial day, so that it shall always come on Sunday, or else abolish the memorial services altogether.

We do not believe that these memorial services will be abolished so long as any of the civil war veterans live. Neither do we believe it is possible, even if desirable, to stop the ball games and other sports on May 30. That day was made Decoration day and subsequently named Memorial day in all northern and border states by the action of the Grand Army of the Republic. It came into general observance soon after the close of the civil war. At the request of the Grand Army, or under an impulse in sympathy with its purpose, state legislatures in rapid succession made May 30 a legal holiday. This brought out the picnickers and baseball clubs on that day, and a solemn and sacred day of remembrance became also a day of festivity and pleasure.

The southern states have their Memorial day, too, and it is a cause of dissatisfaction there that the date of Memorial day differs in the several states and there is not that unity of purpose in its observance which the Grand Army has given to the northern Memorial day. The proposal is made that there shall be one Memorial day for the entire United States, which is a suggestion of decided merit.

There is no objection to holding the Memorial day services on Sunday and they would be more in consonance with the spirit and observance of that day.

The legal holiday, "Memorial day," has been entrenched behind statute law, both north and south, and accepted by the people as a welcome holiday in what is usually the most beautiful period of the year. This will be hard to change, and probably the Grand Army encampment will conclude that it is wise to make the best of Memorial day as it is rather than incur the risk of dividing the interest and risking the permanency of Memorial day observances—Philadelphia Press.

Wonderful Interest Being Shown in the Prize Puzzle.

Good Chance for Those Who Have Not Yet Filed Their Numbers

More people were kept up late by the Farrell & Lohmiller dot-guessing contest last evening than by the last national election, if all the stories that are coming in are true. The contest excited unprecedented interest immediately upon the appearance of the papers and hundreds at once set to work counting or estimating the number of little black spots.

The guesses will not all be turned in today or tomorrow, but will continue to arrive until the contest closes, October 5th, for people who have already turned in guesses are finding upon later counts that their figures do not agree, so second, third and fourth guesses are handed in.

One of the best things about this very popular contest is that no guesser loses anything. One is not out of pocket even if no prize is received and with the ever present chance that the first-guesses sacrificed accuracy to haste, there is hope for all the late-comers.

To show how some of the first guesses were not greatly depended upon by those who filed them, the case of one man may be cited. He brought in his first guess last night and declared there could be no mistake about his figures. After going home, he counted the dots again and came to a different conclusion, so hurried back to our store and filed a second guess. This morning, after more night work, he came to the store with his third guess, and was even less confident than before that he was right. Probably tomorrow he will be in with his fourth count. Three members of one family have sent in guesses, all different, one being nearly 100 less than that of another. All this, of course, proves that the first ones may be far from the right number and that the correct figures may not yet have been turned in.

The figures thus far range from 300 to 1,000, the latter being a bona fide guess, turned in this morning.

THE MEN ARE TO BLAME FOR THE EMPTY CRADLES

Mrs. Ida Harper, Suffragist Leader, Replies to Declaration of Father Vaughan.

New York, Sept. 22.—Men are to blame for the "empty cradle" according to Mrs. Ida Harper. The suffragist leader takes up the cudgel for her sex in reply to the distinguished Jesuit Father, Bernard Vaughan, who, in his address at the Eucharistic congress last week, declared that women were mainly to blame for the decreased birth rate.

"It is time to call a halt on this constant blaming of women for race suicide," says Mrs. Harper. "Fully fifty per cent. of the childless marriages are due to the determination of husbands not to have their own pleasures interfered with; a small per cent to the physical ailments of wives which they cannot help, and the smallest percentage of all to the desire of women to avoid maternity for the sake of their own pleasures."

Knows They Are True.

"Every man and woman who reads these statements knows they are true—knows that the vast majority of wives long for children and are willing to risk comfort, health and life itself for motherhood. The instinct of fatherhood is not a natural one—it is acquired. The love of the average father bears a very small ratio to the love of the average mother.

"A thousand fathers desert their children when ten mothers do so. The father acknowledges, protects and loves only those of his own children that are born in wedlock; the mother loves and cherishes them just the same when born outside of marriage.

"The mother willingly and gladly endures the noise, confusion and labor caused by a family of children; the father is bored and distracted and usually gets away from it. Large numbers of women marry because of their desire for children, men almost never for this cause."

As to Father Vaughan's declaration that women have no chance in public life, Mrs. Harper retorts:

"Not a bit and they never will have while men sit on the lid of the ballot box and the queen of her husband's heart sits sublimely on a cushioned rocking chair."

NEGAUNEE WON THE LONG END FAIRLY

Marquette Mining Journal:

The success of the Negaunee baseball team in winning the upper peninsula championship from Escanaba gave genuine pleasure throughout Marquette county, particularly among the people who have been loyal supporters of the league teams, for it makes the class of baseball played in the Marquette-Iron county organization stack up well when compared with other fast semi-professional baseball in this region. The Negaunee and Marquette teams were of practically equal strength at the close of the season, with Crystal Falls close up, and there is no doubt that both of the latter teams would also have given Escanaba a good argument. Not all the people who have attended the baseball games the past summer have appreciated how fast the teams that strove for the league championship were. As a matter of fact, they would stand comparison with the best of semi-professional teams anywhere, and they were faster than the teams of some of the professional "bash" leagues. Negaunee won the long end of the series with Escanaba fairly and there can be no questioning its title to the upper peninsula championship for outside of the Marquette-Iron county league the fastest ball played in this region was put up by Escanaba, Gladstone and Rapid River.

The Continental Casualty Company is the only company paying double for loss of life if injury causing it is sustained while riding in any automobile or operating same otherwise than for hire, and many other more liberal features. Why not investigate?

GOLD MEDAL FLOP

Wyoming Folks Celebrate The Days of Their Forefathers

Cheyenne, Wyo., has a great celebration each year during the latter part of August which is known as "frontier days," when all the cowboys and Indians for miles around gather to re-enact the experiences of the days of the early pioneers. The festivities have become so popular that even the celebration of the Fourth of July has been omitted for the last dozen years and all efforts have been lent toward making the typical frontier scenes of worldwide interest. The cowboys indulge in their favorite pastimes, the Indians are given the widest latitude in their war dances, and the citizens of the state make merry at games such as entertained their forefathers.

THE TARIFF ON PRIDE

PROBABLY NEEDS REVISION

WHILE the Tariff question engages the attention of the lawmakers, it is appropriate that you should consider one phase of it which comes home to you, personally:

It is the TARIFF ON PRIDE---and, it is likely, this particular tariff costs you more than all other tariff schedules combined.

If pride prevents you from going "bargain-hunting;" from seeking the best market in which to buy things; from watching the want ads. for opportunities to buy and sell things; from advertising for borders or lodgers, even though you need the income they would bring; from advertising your services, or used articles which can be spared, or from taking advantage of chances to save or earn money---then you are, indeed, paying a high tariff on Pride.

The matter of how much tariff you pay on Pride is in your own hands---and if there is need for revision, YOU are the person to revise it!

"What makes you think I had anything to do with it?" she asked after he had spoken.

"You were with Hilliard last night."

"She nodded slightly. "We closed our negotiations for the copper mine last night."

"How did you come out?"

"He takes it over and does the development work," she answered.

"That means that you are independent; that you can leave the north country and do all the things you want to do?" This time her smile was puzzling. "You don't seem very glad."

"No! Realization discounts anticipation about 90 per cent. But don't let's talk about me. I'm unstrung today."

"I'm sorry you aren't going back to Kalvik," he said, with genuine regret.

"But I am," she declared quickly.

"I'm going back with you and George if you will let me. I want to see the finish of our enterprise."

"See here, Cherry; I hope you didn't influence Hilliard in this affair."

"Why probe the matter?"

"Because I haven't lost all my manhood," he answered roughly. "Yesterday you assumed the blame for this trouble and spoke of sacrifices, and well, I don't know much about women, but for all I know you may have some ridiculous, quixotic strain in your makeup. I hope you didn't."

"What?"

"Well, do anything you may be sorry for." At last he detected a gleam of spirit in her eyes.

"Suppose I did. What difference to you would that make?" He shifted uncomfortably under the girl's scrutiny.

"Suppose that Mr. Hilliard had called on me for some great sacrifice before he gave up that money. Would you allow it to affect you?"

"Of course," he answered. Then, unable to sit still under her searching gaze, he arose with flushed face to meet further discomfiture as she continued.

"Even if it meant your own ruin, the loss of the fortune you have raised among your friends—money that is entrusted to you—and the relinquishment of Miss Wayland? Honestly, now—her voice had softened and dropped to a lower key—"would it make any difference?"

"Certainly!"

"How much difference?"

"I'm in a very embarrassing position," he said slowly. "You must realize that with others depending on me I'm not free to follow my own inclinations."

"She uttered a little mocking laugh. "Pardon me. It was not a fair question, and I shouldn't have asked it, but your hesitation was sufficient answer." Then as he broke into a heated denial she went on:

"Like most men, you think a woman has but one asset upon which to trade. However, if I felt responsible for your difficulties that was my affair, and if I determined to help extricate you that also concerned me alone. He stepped forward as if to protest, but she silenced his speech with an imperious little stamp of her foot.

In spite of the cheering turn his fortunes had taken, it was in no very amiable mood that he left her at last to wait the wiser for all his questioning. In the hotel lobby below he encountered a newspaper reporter who had fallen under Fraser's spell upon their first arrival from the north. The man greeted him eagerly.

"How do you do, Mr. Emerson? Can you give me any news about the fishermen?"

"No."

"I thought there might be something new bearing on my story."

"Indeed! So you are the chap who wrote that article some time ago, eh?"

"Yes, sir. Good, wasn't it?"

"Doubtless, from the newspaper point of view. Where did you get it?"

"From Mr. Clyde."

CHAPTER XI.

"CLYDE! You mean Fraser—Fraser, I should say," gasped Boyd to the reporter.

"No, sir, Alton Clyde! He was pretty talkative the night I saw him." The reporter laughed meaningly.

"Drunk, do you mean?"

"Oh, not exactly drunk, but pretty wet. He knew what he was saying, however. Can't you give me something more?"

"Nothing," Boyd hurried to his hotel, a prey to mingled anger and contrition. So Fraser had told the truth, after all, and with a kind of sullen loyalty had chosen to remain under a cloud himself rather than inform a friend. It was quite in keeping with the fellow's peculiar temperament. As it happened, Boyd found the two men together and lost no time in acquainting them with his discovery.

"I've come to apologize to you," he said to Fraser, who grinned broadly and was seized with a sudden abasement which stilled his tongue. Emerson turned to Clyde. "Why did you permit me to do this injustice?"

"I didn't mean to give out any secrets—I don't remember doing it," Alton apologized lamely. "You know I can't drink much. I don't remember a thing about it, honestly." Boyd regarded him coldly, but the young man's penitence seemed so genuine, he looked so weak, so pitifully incompetent, that the other lacked heart to chastise him. It requires resistance to develop heat, and against the absence of character it is impossible to create any sort of emotion.

"When you got drunk that night you got only worked a great hardship on all of us, but afterward you allowed me to misjudge a very faithful man," declared Boyd. "If you can't keep a rose mouth and do as you are told, I'd better go back to Chicago."

"Don't climb any higher," admonished "Fingerless" Fraser. "He's all stuffed up now. I'll lay you 8 to 1 he don't make another break of the kind."

"No; I was so com-cussed-pletely pickled that I forgot I even spoke about the salmon canning business. I'll break my corkscrew and seal my flask, and from this moment until we come out next fall the demon rum and I are divorced. Is that good news?"

"Everything is a joke to you, isn't it?" said Boyd. "If this trip doesn't make a man of you, you'll never grow up."

As if Hilliard's conversion had marked the turning point of their luck, the partners now entered upon a period of almost uninterrupted success. Boyd signed his charter, securing a tramp steamer then discharging at Tacoma; Balt closed his contracts for Chinese labor, and the scattered carloads of material which had been lost en route or mysteriously laid out on sidings began to come in as if of their own accord.

A brigade of orientals and a miniature army of fishermen had appeared as if by magic and were quartered in the lower part of the city awaiting shipment. At the dock one throbbing April evening the Bedford Castle berthed, ready to receive her cargo, and the two men made their way toward their hotel, weary, but glowing with the grateful sense of an arduous duty well performed. The following morning would find the wharf swarming with stevedores and echoing to the rattle of trucks, the clank of hoists and the shrill whistles of the signalmen.

"Looks like they couldn't stop us now," said Balt.

"It does," agreed Emerson. "We ought to clear in four days—that'll be the 15th."

"It smells like an early spring, too," the fisherman observed, sniffing the air. "If it is we'll be in Kalvik the first week in May."

"I'm off to tell Cherry," said Boyd. His course took him past Hilliard's bank, and when abreast of it he nearly collided with a man who came hurrying forth. In the well groomed, fery haired, plump figured man Emerson recognized the manager of the North American Packers' association.

"Good evening, Mr. Marsh."

Marsh whirled about. "Eh? Ah! Why, yes, Mr. Emerson."

Marsh informed Boyd of the anger of Mildred's father at his canning enterprise and also that Mildred and Mr. Wayland were to visit Kalvik on a yachting tour. Emerson was greatly amazed at this information; also he realized that Marsh had arrived on the spot because Hilliard had granted his opponents their needed loan. The men separated.

The next morning Balt rushed in on Emerson with news that the laborers loading the Bedford Castle had gone on a strike because the captain, Peasley, rightly refused a demand of $2,000 by the union.

"It's Marsh again," said Big George. "Yes," Emerson answered; "it's a holdup pure and simple." A look of intense anxiety came into his eyes.

When Boyd returned some two hours later he found the dock deserted save for Big George, who prowled watchfully about the freight piles.

"Well, did you fix it up?" the fisherman inquired.

"No," exclaimed Boyd. "It's a rank frame-up, and I refused to be led."

"Good for you."

"There are some things a fellow's manhood won't stand for. I'll carry that freight aboard with my own hands before I'll be robbed by a labor union at the bidding of Willis Marsh."

"Say, will you let me load this ship my way?" George asked.

"Can you do it?"

Balt's thick lips drew back from his yellow teeth in that smile which Emerson had come to recognize as a harbinger of the violent acts that rejoiced his lawless soul.

"Listen," said he, with a chuckle. "Down the street yonder I've got a hundred fishermen. Half of them are drunk at this minute and the rest are half drunk."

"Then they are of no use to us."

"I don't reckon you ever seen a herd of Kalvik fishermen out of a job, did you? Well, there's just two things they know, fishing and fighting, and this ain't the fishing season. When they hit Seattle the police force goes up into the residence section and stuffs cotton in its ears, because the only thing that is strong enough to stand between a uniform and a fisherman is a bill."

"Can you induce them to work?"

"I can. All I'm afraid of is that I can't induce them to quit. They're liable to put his freight aboard the Bedford Castle and then pull down the dock in a spirit of playfulness and pile it in Captain Peasley's cabin. There ain't no conviction of nature that's equal to a gang of idle fishermen."

"When can they begin?"

"Well, it will take me all night to round them up, and I'll have to lick four or five, but there ought to be a dozen or two on hand in the morning." George cast a roving eye over the warehouse from the heavy planking underfoot to the wide spanning rafters above. "Yes," he concluded, "I don't see nothing breakable, so I guess it's safe."

"Would you like me to go with you?"

The giant considered him speculatively. "I don't think so. I ain't never seen you in action. No, you better stay here and arrange to guard this stuff till morning. I'll do the rest."

The following morning, true to his word, the big fellow walked into the warehouse followed by a score or more of burly fishermen. Balt bore signs of strife. The big man's lips were cut, while back of one ear a knot had sprung up overnight like a fungus.

They fell to work quickly, stripping themselves to their undershirts; they manned the hoists, seized trucks and bale hooks and began their tasks with a thoroughly nonunion energy. Some of them were still so drunk that they staggered, their awkwardness affording huge sport to their companions, yet even in their intoxication they were surprisingly capable. George sought out Boyd and proudly inquired:

"What do you think of them, eh?"

"They are splendid. But where are the others?"

"Well, there are two or three that won't be able to get around at all." He meditatively stroked the knuckles of his right hand, which were badly bruised. "But the balance will be here tomorrow. These are just the mildest mannered ones—the family men, you might say. The others will show up gradual."

The work had not continued many hours before a stranger made his way in upon the dock and began to argue with the first fisherman he met. Boyd, approaching him, demanded:

"What do you want?"

"Nothing," said the newcomer. "Then get out."

"What for? I'm just talking to this man."

"Will you go?"

"Say, you can't load that cargo this way," the man began threateningly. "And you can't make me go."

At which Emerson seized him by the collar and quickly disproved the assertion, to the great delight of the fishermen. He thrust him out into the street.

"I'm a union man, and you can't load that ship with scabs." The stranger swore as he slunk off.

The first actual violence, however, occurred when the fishermen knocked off for the noon hour. Boyd called up the police department, then summoned Big George. It was with considerable difficulty that the nonunion crew fought its way back to resume work at 1 o'clock.

During the afternoon the strikers made several attempts to enter the dock shed, and it required a firm stand by the guards to restrain them.

The next morning found the non-union men out in such force that they were divided into a night and a day crew, half of them being sent back to report later, while among the mountains of freight the work went forward faster than ever. But in time the city awoke to the realization that a serious conflict was in progress. The handful of fishermen, outnumbered twenty to one and guarded only by a thin line of pickets, became a center of general interest.

It was on the fourth day that Boyd espied the man in the gray suit among the strikers and pointed him out to his three companions, Clyde and Fraser having joined him and George in a spirit of curiosity.

Late in the afternoon, without a moment's warning, the strikers rushed in a body, bearing down the guards like reeds.

HILL CLIMBING.

Food That Makes It a Pleasure.

"I have a large amount of laborious brain-fatiguing work to do," writes a young lady from Richmond, Va. "After returning from the office, I have found myself so completely exhausted that I was unable to engage in any recreation or amusement."

"I tried several expensive tonics without effect, and finally noticing an advertisement of Grape-Nuts as a food recommended to brain workers, I purchased a package and tried it."

"I found it extremely palatable, and after a week's use (two meals of it a day) I noticed a general improvement in my condition. The feeling of extreme exhaustion was growing less, and strength visibly increased."

"I began to put on flesh and felt ready to enter into the amusements of the other members of the family, and now after using the food for eleven months, I am like a new person. I do not have the sensation of fatigue; my brain is clear; eyes bright; skin rosy and healthy and my muscles have strengthened to a marked degree."

"I am now able to walk from the office home, a distance of 3 1/2 miles, up one of the steepest hills for which our city is famous, and to engage in any amusements that may come in my way."

"I am also using Postum with excellent results. My sister-in-law, who lives in Norwalk, Conn., writes me that she uses it also, and has not suffered from the distressing sick headaches she formerly had."

DON'T WANT SIZE OF CURRENCY CHANGED

Proposed Action of the Government is Not Taken Kindly to By Bankers, Brokers and Business Men Generally—Systematization of Designs Also Planned.

Bankers, brokers and business-men in general do not seem to take very kindly to the proposed action of the government in changing the size of paper money in accordance with the size of the bill. A banker yesterday morning stated it would make conditions very confusing, in addition to putting banks to heavy expense.

The treasury department also contemplates a systematization of the designs for United States notes and gold and silver certificates. No less than nineteen miscellaneous portraits and historic designs appear upon the issues now current. These serve no useful purpose in identifying the denominations of notes with the designs they bear, nor have they been selected according to any scheme of historical balance. As an example of existing confusion, the present dollar certificate bears the portraits of both Lincoln and Grant. The plan is to reduce these nineteen miscellaneous designs to nine, selecting the portrait with some reference to the importance of its subject in American history and using the same portrait on one denomination throughout. The faces would be placed in the center of the note and would enable the holder to determine at a glance the denomination. The class to which the note belongs, whether gold or silver certificate or United States note, may readily be determined by varying the color in which the seal on the right side of the note and the denomination numeral on the left are printed. The printing of these will in all probability continue to be done by a separate process, hence the distinction suggested involves no additional expense. From what can be learned the name of the class will be repeated as many times on the face and back of the note as at present.

LEGISLATURE WILL HAVE THINGS TO DO

(Special U. T. Service.)

Lansing, Mich., Sept. 22.—The next state legislature will have some important legislation to enact, a number of present laws to modify and should take steps to see that an addition is built to the capitol building. At the present time the state is paying out large sums for rent and hardly a department but that is badly crowded.

A few changes in the primary law are necessary. One change very imperative is the date upon which the filing of petitions close. It has got to be made early to help in the working of the law and some steps should be taken to have different or at least new enrollment books with the names alphabetically arranged. As many of these books are now, it is a difficult task to pick out and check the names.

Some phases of the liquor law will probably be modified, as its working is not entirely satisfactory, although considered the best law of its kind the state has ever had. Indications are that the state legislature will have a strenuous time ahead during the first few months of 1911.

ANIMALS THAT WEEP.

Dugong Tears Preserved by the Malays as a Love Charm.

While the act of laughing may be peculiar to man, the same is not true of weeping, which, if we are to accept the testimony of a French naturalist, is a manifestation of emotion that is met with in divers animals.

It is said that the creatures that weep most easily are the ruminants, with whom the act is so well known that it has given rise to trivial but accurate expression, "to weep like a calf." All hunters know that the stag weeps, and we are also told that the bear sheds tears when it comes to a consciousness of its last hour. The giraffe is not less sensitive and regards with tearful eyes the hunter who has wounded it. This animal also weeps through downright nostalgia. Dogs also are held to be lachrymose, and the same holds in the case of certain monkeys. Sparrman states the elephant sheds tears when wounded or when it perceives that it cannot escape.

Aquatic animals, too, it appears, are able to weep. Thus, many authorities agree, dolphins at the moment of death draw deep sighs and shed tears abundantly. A young female seal was observed to weep when teased by a sailor. St. Hilaire and Cuvier recount, on the authority of the Malays, that when a young dugong is captured the little one is sure to be taken also. The mother ones then wail and shed tears. These tears are collected with great care by the Malays and are preserved as a charm that is certain to render a lover's affection lasting.—New York Press.

NEW MEXICO NEWS.

The Tierra Amarilla grant, with its 500,000 acres of hills and valleys, the most abundant water supply of any irrigated section of the west, ideal climatic conditions, is an empire within itself, awaiting the hands of development. In order to see what this soil will produce all one has to do is to take a trip from Chama to Tierra Amarilla. The first crop of alfalfa is all safely housed and the farmers are in the midst of an excellent timothy harvest. The early wheat and oats are now ripening and will soon be harvested. Potatoes look fine and the new crop long since appeared on the market.—Chama Valley News.

A Strictly Cash Business

The Escanaba Steam Laundry Co.

Decide to Do Cash Business.

We have hereby decided to carry on a strictly cash business, on and after August 1, 1910.

Our reasons for doing so are as follows:

FIRST: Our accounts being necessarily small, an endless amount of confusion and expense is entailed to an injurious degree, and the loss in collections and time and attention it requires we can give to our work rooms and insure a higher standard of work.

SECOND: Our current expenses are cash and must be paid when due. The stand we have taken is one we have been forced into and we hope all will lend us their aid.

TRUST COMPANY AS FATHER TO YOUNG GIRL

Remarkable Story of "Kitty" Hammersly, Modern Cinderella of New York City.

An interesting story has just been published in the eastern press concerning the administration of an estate by a trust company to which Miss "Kitty" Hammersly is heir, and she is given the title of the "Modern Cinderella of New York City."

Miss Hammersly is just 21 years of age, pretty and sensible and until a very short time ago, was not aware that she was the possessor of a large fortune.

During her girlhood she has received twenty-five cents a month for pocket money; has lived in a big Fifth avenue mansion, all her life since her parents died, and has believed that this belonged to a relative—an aunt who has lived with her and her younger brother and helped to carry out the provisions of her father's will.

She has believed that everything she had in the world was provided for her by this same aunt and thought herself very fortunate when permitted an extra half-hour for play and it was a great event in her life when she went, as she sometimes did, for a ride in one of the swan boats in the park, and yet without she has grown up modest, unspoiled and not in the least envious of other children, who seemed to have all that she would have liked to have.

Girl Told the Truth.

Katherine Hammersly's father wanted his little daughter to grow up absolutely unspoiled by the thought of wealth. He wanted her to study, to play, to live and enjoy life, but exactly as any child would do, unhampered by the knowledge that she had to wish for a thing to procure it. So little Katherine had regular hours for studies, for play, and for various other things which the aunt who lived with the children deemed necessary to fit her for her position.

When she was summoned to appear before the court one morning last December, the family relatives appeared and together they all went to the downtown offices of the Trust company, to whom Katherine's wise father had left a large fortune to be given to her when she became of age. There "Kitty" Hammersly was told the truth; that the mansion in Fifth avenue, a pile of money, which had doubled under the management of the trust company, and numerous other "belongings" were all hers.

Miss Hammersly gave a coming-out ball shortly after the great news, where she made her bow to society. The ball was her first plunge into the giddy circle, and so well is her fortune looked after, that the court had to O. K. the bill for the music, the flowers, the caterer and the lovely new gown.

This, according to the eastern magazine, is a pretty fair testimonial to the way a big trust company can play the part of both father and mother.

FANNIE C. HART TO MAKE LONG VOYAGE

Steamer Well Known in Lake Michigan and Green Bay Waters to Sail From Manitowoc for Florida—Will Stop at Detroit and Take on a General Cargo.

Escanaba people to whom the boat is well known through its having plied to this port many years, will read with interest the following dispatch concerning the steamer Fannie C. Hart.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 22.—Within the present week the little steamer Fannie C. Hart, formerly owned by the Green Bay Transportation company, will leave Stevenson's dock at Randolph street, on one of the longest voyages made from this port in some years.

The Hart has been sold to parties at Miami, Florida, and it is to that port that the vessel will make her way, via the St. Lawrence river and the Atlantic ocean. Although built in 1888 and only 143 feet long by 30 feet beam, the Fannie Hart is still a staunch craft and vesselmen predict that she will make the trip without mishap. Her present crew will probably go on the boat, although the fresh water sailors may not be willing to leave the Great Lakes. Capt. Gus LeCompte is now master of the Hart.

The little boat will carry 75 farm wagons and other merchandise on her long trip, her cargo being all ready for her at Stevenson's wharf. The Hart was to have left Manitowoc, Wis., four days ago on the first leg of her journey, but rough weather interfered. The boat will in all probability arrive in Detroit in a few days.

Which Is Best Side For Wheel Has Been Much Debated.

MANY PREFER THE FORMER.

Some Autoists Claim Left Hand Control Is Too Awkward and They Cannot Guide Their Cars Properly—Has Many Advantages Over Other Way.

Within the last few months many manufacturers have adopted the left hand drive for the new models. With many people this drive is very popular, while, on the other hand, many claim it is too awkward and say the right hand drive is the best after all.

The left side control has several decided advantages over the more common right side. With the newer type the driver is enabled to see how close he is driving to any vehicle he meets, but of course in passing a vehicle, if he follows the rule of the road, he finds himself at a disadvantage.

When a passenger is carried on the front seat the new control is found desirable. The passenger can then get in or out of the car from or on to the curbing without climbing over the driver or marching around the car.

Another great advantage is the even balance of the car obtained when the driver only is aboard. The camber of the road causes the right side of a machine to be lower than the left. This condition is aggravated by the weight of the driver if he be on the right side. In some of the old machines on which there are no brake equalizers it is necessary to compensate for the unequal lengthening of the brake rods, caused by the side tip of the car, by setting the left brake tighter than the right.

In the same way the steering arm angle is changed, and the wheel must be turned from its normal position. Some find it difficult to change gears or apply the emergency brake with the left hand. This may be obviated by placing the levers in the middle of the car, as is done by some. This arrangement also places the lever nearer the gear case and so eliminates a few rods and connections which are otherwise necessary.

With all these advantages, however, the left side drive does not appeal to many. Having become accustomed to the older method, the new appears awkward. The appearance might be compared to that of a man who parts his hair on the right hand side.

Some find it difficult to change gears or apply the emergency brake with the left hand. This may be obviated by placing the levers in the middle of the car, as is done by some. This arrangement also places the lever nearer the gear case and so eliminates a few rods and connections which are otherwise necessary.

For the Children

Strange Friendship of a Dog and a Lion.

A curious friendship between a lion and a dog has attracted wide attention in England, where they are being exhibited. The dog is a fine specimen of his kind and performs many clever tricks. He seems much attached to his fierce companion, and they frequently have a game of romps. This is all the more remarkable, as dog and lion rarely make friends.

The most wonderful fact concerning this strange pair is that Leo, as the lion is named, has a decidedly vicious temper when with other animals and has killed several that were caged with him before the advent of his present canine companion. The two live together in amity, sharing the food thrown to them and sleeping side by side in a corner of their cage.

The Diving Bell.

How many of you children know who first invented the diving bell? It was not a man or a woman, but a little spider that built its home under the water long before man thought of the diving bell, says the Chicago News. The spider's house, made of the finest spun silk, is, strange to say, though under water, filled with air. To keep his house from ascending to the surface the spider fastens it with silken cords to the grass in the pond or brook or wherever the house may be. If he did not it would rise like a balloon, float from its moorings and leave the spider family homeless.

These spiders, called malads by naturalists, show a large degree of intelligence and are clever hydraulic engineers. They swim easily, and under water they look like round, moving pearls, a layer of air concealed under the skin giving them this strange appearance. They rise to the top of the water to inhale a bubble of air, swim with it to the bottom and when building their bell houses completely fill them with air by this process.

Telling Fortunes.

Have you a game of dominoes? If so you can have lots of fun when your friends come to see you. Shuffle the dominoes well and lay them face down on a smooth table. Tell your friends to turn the dominoes, and the following are what the points denote:

- Double six denote receipt of money; will be very rich.
- Six-five denotes success and pleasure.
- Six-four early marriage; happiness.
- Six-three affection, constancy.
- Six-two industrious, economical.
- Six-one twice married.
- Six-blank sorrow, trouble.
- Five-double very lucky.
- Five-four will marry poor.
- Five-three eventual wealth.
- Five-two love.
- Five-one engagement; invitations.

If you know these you can regulate your answers accordingly, no matter what points turn up, and much fun can be had.

Shearing Sheep.

In spring and fall sheep shearing is an important operation, and the shearer is an important individual. In England very frequently his craft runs right through the family—first the father, then the sons and then their sons. When shearing is done there it is done by specialists, but they are not confined to one family. These men take the animals, tie their legs together, throw them on their backs and soon the shears are at work. An adept shearer will take off the fleece in one smooth piece, and these pieces are rolled into neat bundles to facilitate the counting. When an accidental cut is made in the sheep's flesh lime mixed with lard is applied at once to prevent an attack by flies.

W. R. OATES WILL NOT MAKE THE RACE

Several days ago The Mirror published a generally circulated report that W. R. Oates of Laurium, who was defeated for nomination for state representative in his district on the Republican ticket, would make the race anyway on the Prohibition ticket. This report is now denied, according to the following published by the Hancock Evening Copper Journal:

Despite the earnest solicitation of friends to remain in the contest for election to the state legislature from No. 1 district, W. R. Oates has declined the nomination, and will devote his efforts to the election of a straight Republican ticket. While Mr. Oates was defeated at the primaries by Anthony Lucas, the canvass showed the present incumbent to be the Prohibition nominee, and friends immediately fostered the candidacy of Mr. Oates.

Representative Oates, however, will devote some time in the interests of Chase S. Osborn, Republican choice at the primaries for governor, before the fall election, and it is not improbable that Republican rallies will be held in the Copper Country during the coming month.

CONNIE MACK IS GREAT LEADER

Manager Connie Mack of Athletics.

Connie Mack and Frank Chance will each be given a much higher rating as a manager by the baseball public than was accorded to either in 1909, but neither has shown qualities as an organizer, disciplinarian or general that he did not exhibit during the preceding pennant race in landing his team in second place. Chance has won a pennant with every major league team of which he has been in charge except in 1905 and in 1909. The Cubs of 1905 lost the services of the lamented Seale, in mid-season and Chance, his successor, established his reputation as a leader by securing third place. New York won, with Pittsburg as the runner-up.

The Athletics have made a creditable record during Philadelphia's membership in the American league, but Mack has never been able to win two successive flags. In 1901, the initial season of the American league, the Athletics finished fourth. The White Sox carried off the honors of the year. In 1902 the team that McGraw dubbed the "White Elephants," finished first. Boston beat them out in 1903 and in 1904 Philadelphia tumbled to fifth place. In the next race, the Mackmen qualified as the American league's representative in the first world's series conducted under the auspices of the National Commission, but were decisively defeated by the New York Giants, and were shut out in four of the five games. Bender blanked the Giants in his team's lone victory.

HIS CAREER WAS ACCIDENTAL

BY HARRY MCINTIRE.
(Copyright, 1910, by Joseph B. Bowles.)
My baseball career was rather an accident from the outset. I never had the slightest idea of earning my livelihood playing ball or of taking it up as a profession. The truth is that I was inclined to go into the priesthood when I was a small boy, and my other ambition was to be a locomotive engineer.

From the time I first can remember I loved baseball and played it, always as a pitcher, if the other fellows would let me, and when they wouldn't let me pitch I played somewhere else. It was at the Brothers' school at Dayton, O., that I first belonged to an organized team. I was backstop for the catcher, and very proud to chase balls that went past him. I began to study pitching then, for we had a good pitcher on the school team, and I watched to see what he did to puzzle batters. One of the priests had been a pitcher at school, and he taught me some more. I remember when he told me that keeping cool and never losing the temper was a better way of winning than pitching curves.

Pretty soon our class team let me pitch, and after a time we tackled the school team and beat them so I was put on the school team. I began to think I knew it all, and it took several beatings to show me how little I knew. When I left school I was looking for a job and a friend of mine, who was playing on the Kankakee (Ill.) Y. M. C. A. club asked me to come over there and pitch for that team. I looked on it just as a summer vacation, but made good there and found myself getting along so well I commenced to study pitching seriously as my profession. It was hard work with many discouragements, but I stuck to it. Every time a batter made a hit off me I studied to find why he had hit

Harry McIntire.

It and what I ought to have done to keep him from hitting hard. The next season I arrived at Danville, Ill., and played all summer. There was a wise old catcher there who taught me a lot, and from there I took a couple of big jumps into the big league and have stuck. I think the great reason why I have managed to stick is that I never have stopped studying the game and its players. If a man gets to know it all he will be in the bush leagues soon.

BROTHERHOOD HAD FAST BALL

In 1890 Baseball Players Used Sphere That Burned Infielders When Hit—Some Batting.

Speaking of the rubber-cored ball and the cork-cored ball and likewise the cry for more batting, how many of the fans remember the time when a ball was used that did result in extra slugging?
In 1890, when the Brotherhood was hatched and tried, there was the same yell for extra batting that you hear today. The Brotherhood decided to gratify the wish, and, first of all, moved the pitcher a foot back.
Then they had a special ball built, with twice as much rubber as was contained in the Reach-Spalding globe. The result was batting till you couldn't rest, but, unfortunately, was also bad fielding.

While the new ball went so fast and so burningly that the infielders had to duck or die, it also took weird and inexplicable leaps, and when sailing for the outfield, would actually turn and wheel away as if blown by the wind.
It is the plain truth, and no exaggeration, absurd as it may seem, many a time a ball would start for center, and, with the center fielder all set, would swing over and take the right or left fielder off his guard.
Batting? Plenty. Pete Browning led with .391. Had the present scoring rules, which all favor the batsman, been in use, Pete would have been tabbed 450, maybe more. Any time they want more batting, a rubber-centered ball, with additional rubber, is the thing to do the work. Browning would have hit about .500 that season with the pitcher as far back as he is now, and using that lively ball.

PROPOSED CHANGE IN STARTING BANKS

Plans Are Contemplated for the Better Regulation of National Banks, All Intended to Reduce the Possibilities of Failure—Some of The Propositions.

(Special U. T. Service.)
Washington, Sept. 22.—Some important changes in the national bank law may be proposed to the next congress. One proposed change is to compel newly organized national banks to provide a surplus and an absolutely unimpaired capital the day they begin business. Under the present system a national bank with a paid in capital of $25,000 will spend probably $5,000 at the start for fixtures, books and other necessities. That impairs its capital. In some cases it has been two years before the bank earned enough to wipe out that amount and have its capital stock unimpaired. Even then it had no surplus.

The idea is to compel the organizers of a bank to provide a 20 per cent surplus as the start. It is understood that such a plan will be urged upon banks now forming and that others will be urged to discontinue dividends until their surplus is accumulated.

Other plans for the better regulation of national banks, all intended to reduce the possibilities of failure are being considered and probably will find their way to congress, either through the monetary commission or officials of the treasury department.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS FATAL TO FOWLS?

(Special to The Mirror.)
Washington, Sept. 22.—Deaths of many chickens and ducks recently are ascribed to infantile paralysis. Dr. E. C. Schroeder, in charge of the experimental station of the bureau of animal industry, examined two of the fowls in an effort to ascertain the cause of death.
"I am not certain," said Dr. Schroeder, "that the fowls were afflicted with infantile paralysis, but if such is the case some means should be taken to stop the spread of the disease. If the fowls are affected it would no doubt be quite possible for them to communicate the disease to human beings."

YOUNG WOMAN LOSES FOOT UNDER WHEELS

Miss Sophia Johnson, nineteen years of age, was run over by a string of ore cars while crossing the Northwestern track at Norway the other afternoon and had her right foot crushed so badly that amputation was necessary. The young woman was accompanied by her mother. She was crossing the track ahead of a westbound ore train and did not see a switch engine with a number of ore cars coming from the opposite direction on the north track. She was struck by an ore car and knocked down, one of the wheels passing over her foot. She was taken to Chicago for treatment.

AND THE CONTINENTAL IS THE GREATEST OF THEM ALL.

The fact that the casualty branch is developing at a very strong rate may be termed a matter of common knowledge in the insurance business; but it is to be doubted that many insurance men realize the rate of premium growth achieved by the companies in the aggregate during the year 1909.
During 1907 the business enlarged its premium income by about six millions of dollars, and during 1908 by perhaps four or five millions. These developments were the cause of remark; but they did not compare with the growth shown last year which was about sixteen millions of dollars.

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL.

Health is worth Saving and Some Escanaba People Know How To Save It.

Many Escanaba people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know that these organs need help. Sick kidneys are responsible for a vast amount of suffering and ill health, but there is no need to suffer nor to remain in danger when all the diseases and aches and pains due to weak kidneys can be quickly and permanently cured by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. Here is an Escanaba citizens recommendation. James Crawford, 318 Wells St., Escanaba, Mich., says: "For some time my kidneys were weak and the kidney secretions were too frequent in passage and contained sediment. I also had rheumatic twinges throughout my body. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from the Mead Drug Co., restored me to good health."

Fly Traps of Spiders' Nests.

Spiders' nests are used in Mexico as fly traps. During the rainy season the villages are invaded by numbers of flies and other insects. To rid a house of these pests the natives hang the branch of a tree bearing a spider's nest to a nail in the ceiling. The surface of the nest enlarges concentrically after each capture of an insect, and it exercises an irresistible attraction on flies. When a spider's nest is opened it is found to be filled with insects. Experiments made with paper nests so manufactured as to be exact copies of the real nests show that flies will not enter them. Though very small and apparently insignificant, the habitant of the mosquito attacks insects far more important in size than the largest housefly. The wasp is one of its favorite victims, and the wasp always gets the worst of the struggle.

CINCINNATI SECURES A STAR

Dave Altizer, Who Has Contributed Much to Success of Minneapolis, Is Drafted.

One hundred and fifteen minor league players were drafted by the 15 clubs of the two major leagues when the national baseball commission met at Cincinnati recently. Of these the National league secured 67, while the American league got only 48.
The Brooklyn club of the National league secured 15 players; the New York Nationals were the next fortunate in the draw, as they secured 13 players; Philadelphia Nationals came next with 12 players secured; Chicago Nationals were fourth in point of number with 11 players, while the Chicago Americans secured ten.

Dave Altizer.

may come out empty-handed in the draw. St. Louis Nationals did not secure a player. A little less than $125,000 was deposited with Secretary Bruce of the commission to cover the drafts.
One player in particular, Shortstop Altizer of Minneapolis, was most eagerly sought. Every club in both leagues wanted him. He was finally awarded to Cincinnati.
Altizer is to take the most daring leap of all this fall, it is reported. He will march to the altar with one of the fair young ladies of Chicago and allow himself to be doubled up.

BALL AND BAT NOTES

Harry Lord has been counted as the classiest of third basemen for the last two seasons. He has been picked on the All-American teams of several of the dopsters.

Fred Luders has already made himself solid with the Philadelphia fans. He looks even better than Bransfield and it is likely that he will soon supplant the veteran.

President Herrman of the national commission announces the national commission will investigate the plan for two ball clubs to tour the country and will bar league players from the tour if Tex Rickard is backing it.

The National commission will not allow the promoters of the All-National and All-American teams to get away with it. The commission is right, for the game should be allowed to rest in peace during the off season.

Snodgrass, the leading slugger of the National league, is only a youngster, and if he keeps up the record he has set for himself this year he should have a record as good as that of Pop Anson, Ed Delahanty or Honus Wagner, as a great hitter.

Cobb of Detroit, Snodgrass of New York Nationals and Lajoie of Cleveland are batting .362, .350 and .359, as named. There is only one automobile to be given to the player having the highest batting average at the end of the official season in both leagues.

Pitcher Kiettinger of the Clinton team should get a chance to show what he can do in the big leagues after that exhibition against the Cubs a few days ago. Any bush pitcher that can make the coming champions go 11 innings to win a 2 to 1 contest must have something worth trying out in his whip.

President Kinsella of the Springfield team, who sold Melon to Chicago, is becoming a successful scout. He has sold four more players of his team: Outfielder Shaller to Detroit, Pitcher Willis to the St. Louis Browns, Catcher Hartley to Toledo and Pitcher Ludermlk to the St. Louis Cardinals. Kinsella is said to have 300 players under contract.

President Taft Has Serious Look as Well as a Smile

The famous smile of President Taft "that won't come off" has been berided from east to west and from north to south, but when it comes to a serious view of the nation's chief executive few words have been said. In the past few weeks the president has had much to do with political questions, and that he is interested in what others say is evidenced by the expression on his face in one of the pictures. In the other view there is a look of seriousness as he speaks to a great crowd of his loyal citizens.

MILLINERY AND CLOAK DISPLAY MOST COMPLETE EVER SEEN IN ESCANABA.

The Fair Savings Bank's Display of Millinery, Suits, Furs and Dresses is a sight to delight the eye of all women visitors. MODELS ARE MOST BEAUTIFUL. The hat and cloak departments this week are the Mecca of all good dressers. There is no doubt that what Mr. Fashion says goes—and more so this season than ever before. For proof of this statement, visit the Fair Savings Bank Millinery department, where Mrs. Fashion is now holding sway. And this year she decrees so many things that every one must be satisfied. At least, the woman who won't be after seeing this display, never will be.

In the matter of color, everything seems to be "the thing." Browns, blues, greens and grays are trying to hold their own with the dashing crimson and the extreme violet. And all the colors seem to be proper for all ages and descriptions of femininity. Hats large, hats small; hats with wide brims, hats with no brims; hats of velvet, hats of silk; hats of tapestry and hats of fur: all these you will see in endless variety in their show room. No less attractive than their millinery display is their showing of new fall coats, suits, gowns, wraps, waists and furs—everything included, from street suits to evening gowns, and varying from clothes for young misses to women of middle age. Street suits, as shown by their display, will be strictly tailored and the coats short; some of them fasten down the front and others with three buttons on the left side. Almost everything in street gowns, other than the suits, is with the round neck and short sleeves. The hobble skirt is THE style for both dress and street wear, but the extreme styles are only for evening. They are also showing several imported models in very fetching evening gowns.

The windows and interior display of the departments show the usual good taste of the store—everything planned and arranged to make the most attractive and beautiful showing.

Opening display will continue for the remainder of the week.—Adv.

Be Safe--- Not Sorry

3% is the limit of what can be paid by a bank and conduct its business on lines of the strictest conservatism. In short, it is the rate that is consistent with absolute safety.

There are many schemes and seemingly attractive investments that offer more but with every added per cent comes an added risk, and why should you take any risk when you are investing the net results of your labor and economy.

A man who loses his savings thus acquired, usually quits saving from discouragement. "Better be safe than sorry" is a good maxim to observe in choosing a place for investment.

Indian Dandruff Remedy

Entirely Unlike All Others—Free from Alcohol

Indian Shampoo is also distinctly different from all other shampoos, which, as a rule, are made in the cheapest way; of inferior soap-grease, necessitating the use of strong alkali, which is exceedingly injurious to the scalp as well as the hair. Indian Shampoo contains pure, imported olive oil, proven to be the only neutral oil which really assists in promoting the hair growth, also Russian Egg Albumen, producing the purest, most healing cleanser money can buy—entirely free from alkali or anything like it. Indian Shampoo will keep your scalp thoroughly clean, which is absolutely essential to the health and growth of the hair.
