PROBLEM A GRAVE ONE

THE CONCENTRATION OF THE TIMBERLANDS INTO POWERFUL INTERESTS CREATES PROBLEM

NATION TO RETAIN ITS FORESTS

Commissioner Advises That Land Grants of Past be Inquired into as to Legality

(By Associated Press.)
Washington, January 20.—The concentration into the hands of a few powerful interests of an enormous percentage of the timberlands of the United States has created a problem so grave for the nation in the judgment of Luther Conant, Jr., Commissioner of Corporations, that today he recommended to President Taft that the existing national forests not only be retained by the federal government, but increased as far as practicable.

This note of warning was sounded by the commissioner in forwarding to the President the full text of Part 1 of the Bureau of Corporations' investigation of the lumber industry made by direction of Congress. A summary of this report, showing the extent of concentrated control of timberlands was sent to the President and published nearly two years ago.

To increase government ownership of forest lands the commissioner urged that the forests of Alaska be included in reserve, as well as all timbered lands recovered in forfeiture suits. He advises a further searching (Continued on page 6.)

SAYS LEGISLATION IN HANDS OF A FEW

Wisconsin Senator Makes Statement in Senate When Immigration Bill Comes Up.

(By Associated Press.)
Washington, Jan. 20.—Senator R. M. LaFollette, of Wisconsin, declared in the senate today that the rules and regulations of the house are so framed on precedent as to put the legislation of this congress in the hands of a few men, while speaking against the conference report of the immigration bill. The senator said that he hoped that the time was coming when the house would be more democratic and responsive to the public will. He attacked the clause prohibiting immigrants unless they had certificates of character when native country has laws authorizing such certificates. Senator Lodge of Montana, contended that the provision did not affect Russian immigrants and the conferees had not exceeded their authority.

LANDIS DISMISSES BUTTER TRUST CASE

Case Against Ex-Governor Hoard Dismissed on Account of Error This Afternoon

(By Associated Press.)
Chicago, Jan. 20.—Judge Landis today dismissed the case against Ex-Governor Hoard of Wisconsin, on an error. Hoard was held for trial on account of being a member of the Elgin butter trust.

TELLS FAKE STORY TO SAVE HERSELF

Two Girls Spend Money for Good Time and Tell Her Mother They Were Held up

(By Associated Press.)
Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 20.—Inez Stanford and Nellie Busch, 14 years, who told that they had been slugged by a negro Saturday night confessed that their story was told to save Nellie from receiving a punishment after the girls "had a good time." Nellie was given $5 by her mother to pay a bill and instead the girls bought sweets and trinkets. In order to make their story stand they rolled in the mud before they returned home.

THE ICE FORMED IN

The Cold Weather Following the Thaw Interferes With the Sewerage System

The cold weather has raised havoc with the sewerage system in the city. Several days ago we were having a thaw, the ice and snow melting and filling up the catch basins so that the sewer system was unable to carry it away. Now ice has formed in the catch basins and the city has to remove the same. So a crew of men have been busy today removing the ice. In some instances water has frozen in the pipes leading from the catch basins to the main sewer of the street and the same will have to be thawed out by the city.

THE SEEGER JURY DISAGREES AGAIN

Jurymen Unable to Agree Again in the Personal Injury Case and Discharged

The jury in the case in circuit court of Adelbert Seger vs. Northwestern Co. of Chicago and Lumber company, wherein the plaintiff sought to recover damages sustained sometime ago while he acted as an employee of the company, disagreed Saturday night and the case was extended over the term. This is the fourth time that the action has been before the court.

Saturday evening a decree of divorce was granted to Louisa Crandall from Archie Crandall on the charge of cruelty and non-support. The defendant cannot re-marry for a period of two years.

This morning Attorney R. A. Leitch made his maiden appearance in circuit court and incidentally he won his case. The action was entitled LaVine Bovine vs. Jos. Biggers, being an action of assumpsit. This afternoon at 2:30 o'clock the jury returned a verdict awarding the plaintiff damages to the extent of $225.

This noon two cases were extended over the term. They were entitled J. I. Nelson vs. Isaac Stephenson, et al; and Chas. Saunders vs. Jas. Nelpor. Both are cases of trespass on the case. The term of court will thus be shortened somewhat again.

RESUMED BALKAN WAR

THE FULL POWERS DECLARE RESUMPTION OF HOSTILITIES WITH TURKEY THIS MORNING

PEACE NEGOTIATIONS USELESS

Bulgarian Commander Will be Notified That Armistice Has Ended and to Begin War

(By Associated Press.)
London, Jan. 20.—The full power today declared the resumption of hostilities against Turkey. This was given to Daniff, the leader of the Bulgarian delegation and colleagues by the Bulgarian Premier, who told them to exercise it whenever they thought. Further peace negotiations were declared to be useless.

General Savoff, commander in chief of the Bulgarian forces, will be notified that the armistice has ended as soon as possible.

Apparently there is no hope of peace hostilities. War will commence in about four days hence.

THE MARRIAGE OF MISS RITA RYAN

Friends Are Surprised to Learn of Her Marriage to Pierce Segw in Chicago

The announcement of the marriage of Miss Rita Ryan daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Ryan of this city to Mr. Pierce M. Segw, formerly of this city but now of Chicago, was received in this city recently and the friends of the young lady were agreeably surprised thereat. The ceremony occurred on December 31st.

Mrs. Segw has been a resident of Escanaba for many years and up to a year ago was engaged in teaching school. In 1911 she went to Chicago to take up a business course. Mr. Segw was formerly a fireman on the C. & N. W. railway with headquarters in this city and now he holds a position with the same railway in Chicago.

CHURCH WEDDING THIS MORNING

Miss Dora Beauchamp Becomes the Bride of William Sullivan at St. Joseph's Church

The marriage of Miss Dora Beauchamp and Mr. William Sullivan was solemnized this morning at seven o'clock at the St. Joseph's church by Rev. Father Julius. The contracting party were attended by Miss Agnes Beauchamp, sister of the bride and Mr. Arthur Harvey. Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents at Flat Rock. The bridal party left on the eleven o'clock train for a two week's wedding trip. They will return to Escanaba about the first of February.

Mrs. Sullivan is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Beauchamp of Flat Rock. Mr. Sullivan is one of the train dispatchers at the local office. Both are well and favorably known in the city and have a host of friends who are wishing them much success in their wedded life.

LACK OF INTEREST SHOWN IN ELECTION

The Number of Taxpayers voting on the Bond Issue Today is Smaller Than Expected.

Today the question of whether the city fathers will have the power to bond the city to the extent of $117,000 for the construction of a trunk sewer system, is being voted on by the people of Escanaba. The taxpayers do not seem to pay the necessary attention to the matter, this being shown by their lack of interest displayed in the use of the ballot. The number of votes generally polled at a spring or fall election will exceed today's total by nearly two to one.

It seems that the only ones voting the proposition are those that have been active in seeing it carried. It is believed that the bond issued will be carried by a rather handsome majority.

HOLD PARTY AFTER THE LENTEN SEASON

The High School Gym Dancing Party Has Been Postponed Until After Easter

The dancing party planned by the high school seniors for the evening of January 31st, has been postponed indefinitely. This decision was reached Saturday, after the seniors had held a class meeting. At first the upper class members had failed in their efforts to gain the consent of the board of education members to hold the party in the high school "gym" but after their request had been granted the class decided that the function would be held after Lent. The members plan to make the party an elaborate one.

THE OLDEST OF MASONS

CLAIMS THIS DISTINCTION FOLLOWING THE DEATH OF ORLANDO F. BUELL MEMORINE

BEEN A MASON FOR 66 YEARS

Joined the Mason Order at Sturgeon Bay, Wis., and Now Member at Manistique

The distinction of being the oldest Mason in the state belongs to J. C. Messenger of Cooks, according to information received by The Mirror from that gentleman this morning. Mr. Cook has been a member of the order for the past sixty-six years and upon the death of Orlando F. Buell of Menominee, he accepts the honor.

In writing to The Mirror Mr. Messenger says that he and the late Mr. Buell were well acquainted and that both had always claimed the honor of being the oldest living Mason in Michigan, although Mr. Buell always called Mr. Messenger the younger. Mr. Messenger says: "Now that Brother Buell has left us I claim to be the oldest Mason in the state, having been made a Mason on June 23rd, 1846 in Henry Bavel lodge, No. 211, Sturgeon Bay, Wis." He is now a member of Lakeside lodge at Manistique, Mich. For the past fifteen years he has held the office of past master.

In concluding his letter, Mr. Messenger says that he was 86 years old on the 19th of October last and has been married three times, being the father of fifteen children. He has never been drunk. Mr. Messenger is the proprietor of the Messenger house at Cooks and is a genial and pleasant man to meet. He is quite generally known throughout the upper peninsula. Many visitors to Cooks, spent pleasant moments with "THE OLD Dutchman with the wart on his nose" as styles himself.

The Young Man of the Bridge

By DOROTHEA HALE

In Constantinople there has always been, since its conquest by the Turks, a miscellaneous population. Persians, Greeks, races of western and southern Europe are mingled together, besides Moors from northern Africa. Some of these peoples form colonies among themselves and continue the customs of their native countries. Consequently there are a great many queer customs in Constantinople.

Among these customs perhaps the strangest is betrothal and marriage among the Moors. There is no such thing as a courtship among them. Marriages are arranged by contract between the parents of the groom and the bride, who do not see each other until they are married. Yet the human heart in these people beats the same as among other races. It may be well for a bride if she has not met some man to whom she has given her heart, for, fancy free, she may fall in love with her husband or at least become attached to him as is natural between these who live and bring up children together. But woe to the young girl who has seen the man who has inspired her with a grand passion.

The marriage ceremony among these people is also peculiar, as will appear in the case of a young Moorish girl called Ayxa, who was betrothed to a young man named Muley Abdul by her parents, but who had fallen in love with a young man she had seen but once. The young, especially girls on the threshold of womanhood, are prone to succumb before a single glance of a man who captivates their fancy, and southern races are more liable to this than colder blooded peoples of the north. Ayxa in crossing that much frequented bridge uniting two parts of Constantinople, stopped to look down over the side into the water. While doing so she uncovered her face, since there was no man below to see it. Presently turning her eyes aside she saw a young man also leaning over the side, but instead of looking into the water he was gazing at her. She saw the lovelight in his eyes and unconsciously returned it.

Covering her face, she pursued her way. But from that moment she was changed. Her young and excitable being saw in all about her that face alone. At least it was all that excited a response in her. Indeed, it became a part, the greater part, of her being. It was at this time that negotiations were entered upon for her marriage with Muley Abdul. When she heard of them she had not met the young man on the bridge, and they did not especially interest her—that is, they were not repulsive to her. After the meeting they became a horror to her. But she could do nothing to prevent the union that awaited her. She had met the young man of the bridge but once, and even if she had seen him often and they had become lovers it would not have made any difference. She would have married the man provided for her and that without having seen him.

The arrangements for the marriage having been completed, the parents of the bride and the groom, who were both Moors, prepared for the wedding, to be celebrated as it would have been celebrated in Tangier or Tripoli. Ayxa, as was the custom, was to be carried to her husband at night. The street in the Moorish quarter through which the bride would pass was lined with persons to see her pass. She was at home with her father and mother and the woman who had nursed her from babyhood. Languidly she bade her parents goodby and left them, going with her nurse, who in accordance with the ceremony was to conduct her to her husband.

And now comes the strangest part of this strange custom. The nurse left the house, carrying a box which contained the bride, placed it on a mule standing before the door, then led the animal down the street. Moving slowly to the sounds of wierd music, the old woman, the mule and the bride within the box proceeded on their way to the home of the groom. As they passed house after house friends emerged to salute the bride.

None knew the feelings of Ayxa, for she had not confided them even to her mother. What desperate resolve was in her fierce Moorish bosom she kept hidden there. A bride who had loved another, on her way to an unknown husband, had been found at the door of his house dead in the box that enclosed her, by her own hand. Indeed there were those along the route who, remembering this, shuddered lest the casing concealed a corpse. But nearly all were as loud in their congratulations as if Ayxa was going to the husband of her choice.

At last the home of the groom was reached. He was not at the door to receive her, but waited for her within. When a living bride stepped from the box there were those in the throng who breathed a sigh of relief.

Ayxa was conducted by her mother-in-law to the room where her husband awaited her. There she was left to enter alone. She was expected to advance toward him and throw herself at his feet. Instead of doing so she stopped short and fixed her gaze upon him. Then she sank upon the floor in a swoon.

In a few moments she revived to find herself in the arms of the man she had married. He was looking down upon her with love and delight in his eyes. He was the young man she had met on the bridge.

CHILDREN'S EYES WILL BE TESTED

Teachers Receiving Instructions as to The Method of Doing the Work Required

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 20.—It is expected that the eyes of every school child in the state will be tested before spring. Supt. of Public Instruction Luther L. Wright has had furnished to every teacher in the commonwealth a proper eye-testing card with explicit instructions as to how to make tests of children. In other states the percentage of children having defective eyesight has proved appalling. The tests in Michigan are given with a view to helping the child. Often a child is considered dull, but this is sometimes due to the fact that the hearing or eyesight is defective and the teacher does not recognize this handicap. Sometimes by moving a child's seat nearer a window relieves a decided strain. It is expected that in quite a number of cases the condition of eyesight will be found so bad as to warrant the services of an optician.

NOBODY CAN TELL THAT YOU DARKENED YOUR GRAY, FADED HAIR WITH SAGE & TEA

Mixed With Sulphur Makes Hair Soft, Lustrous and Cures Dandruff

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is messy and out-of-date. Nowadays skilled chemists do this better than ourselves. By asking at any drug store for the ready-to-use product—called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy"—you will get a large bottle for about 50 cents.

Some druggists make their own, which is usually too sticky, so insist upon getting "Wyeth's" which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and falling hair. A well-known downtown druggist says his customers insist on Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because, they say, it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use too. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. Do this at night and by morning the gray hair disappears after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant. ren whose eyesight is so defective that school work is impossible must under the compulsory school law be sent to Lansing.

PROBLEM A GRAVE ONE

(Continued from page one.) Inquiry into land grants of the past with the view of instituting additional forfeiture suits if the facts justify the procedure. Mr. Conant warns that attempts are still being made to "secure the transfer of public timberlands to private owners under the same pleas of settlement which in the past often proved wholly specious and insincere." "Much of the timberland still remaining in public ownership," continues the Commissioner, "is adapted only for timber purposes. All that could be properly asked by a bona fide settler is the surface of arable land after the timber has been removed, but too frequently back of the argument made in the name of the settler is the desire to acquire the timber or other natural resources rather than the soil itself. It seems desirable, therefore, to direct public attention to the fundamental difference between disposing of agricultural lands to actual settlers, whose industry contributes directly to the material and social upbuilding of the community, and the alienation of virgin timberlands, which do not require, and, indeed, hardly permit of, improvement by private owners, and the value of which is rapidly rising because of reduction in the supply and the increase in population. The public service involved in the mere speculative holding of this timber for an advance in price, under present conditions of settlement of the country, is practically negligible. When, moreover, such lands become concentrated in a comparatively few hands, there is, instead of a public service, a serious public danger. "Without entering into a discussion of possible solutions of certain grave problems involved in the present concentration of timber ownership, it may be pointed out that the Government today still owns, exclusive of the forests of Alaska, about one-fifth of the country's total supply of merchantable standing timber. It is the agency best adapted to practicing reforestation on a large scale. Recently important suits for forfeiture of extensive timberlands have been brought by the Government on the ground of nonfulfillment of conditions imposed in the grants by which these lands were alienated from the public domain. For these reasons, it would appear, therefore, that the Government may later be able to materially strengthen its relative position as a timber owner. "The facts set forth in this report clearly point to the desirability of maintaining the integrity of the national forests and of extending to other publicly owned timber, including forests in Alaska and timberland that may be recovered in forfeiture suits now pending or subsequently instituted by the Government, the cardinal principle of the national-forest policy, namely, the retention of the fee to such lands at least until the timber is removed. Decision will therefore have to be made between retaining such lands for reforestation and the leasing of the surface for agricultural purposes. It seems clear, moreover, that the fundamental principle to be followed in the sale of the timber itself is that the terms of sale should be such as to insure to the public treasury substantially the full stumpage value at the time that such timber shall be actually cut." "A sewage disposal tunnel which also would provide water power for an electric plant to illuminate places along its route is proposed for Buffalo and other cities on the Niagara river in New York.

The poor man's reason appears to have been suggested out for some extraordinary payments. It is only within a few years that there has been recorded in Turkey a law by which the taller quality of short weight tricks was punished by having his ear nailed to the doorpost. Turkish officers of the law are notoriously averse to giving themselves more trouble than is absolutely necessary. If the recalcitrant baker did not happen to be at home when they arrived to administer punishment they didn't bother to call again, but just seized his son or his journeyman or his father-in-law or whoever was handy and nailed his ear to the doorpost. So long as somebody was punished it did not matter. The Samian Letter. The letter Y is called the Samian letter. It is so called because its Greek original was delivered to by Pythagoras, the philosopher of Samos, to illustrate how deviation from the straight path of virtue becomes constantly wider as the lines are extended. The poet Pope refers to this idea in the lines: When reason doubtful, like the Samian letter, Points him two ways the narrower the better. Her Intense Sorrow. He-I called to see you last evening, and the servant told me you were not in. She Yes, I was sorry to have missed you. He I thought you must be. I heard you laughing upstairs to such grief-stricken tones that I almost wept myself out of sympathy. Wanted to Find the Crumb. Mamma What are you tearing your doll to pieces for? Hattie I'm looking for the crumb of comfort papa said was to be found in everything. Friendship. Rounder-Is Slick a friend of yours? Bounder-I should say so. Why, he will let me share my last dollar with him-Exchange. The man who cannot forgive any mortal thing is a green hand in life.

For the Children

The Happy Boy Who Had a Dog Named Pete.

I've got a dog. The other boys have quantities of tools and toys and heaps of things that I ain't seen (Ain't saw, I mean). They've oars and clubs and golfin' sticks-I know a feller that has six. And, gee, you ought to see him drive! But I've Got a dog! I've got a dog. His name is Pete. The other children on our street have lots of things that I ain't got (I mean have not). I know a boy that's got a gun. I don't see why they have such fun playing with things that ain't alive. But I've Got a dog! I've got a dog, and so, you see, The boys all want to play with me. They think he's such a cunnin' brute (I mean so cute). That's why they leave their toys and games to me. And run to us and shout our names whenever me and Pete arrive. For I've Got a dog! -St. Nicholas.

Plum Pudding-A Game. The players sit at a table with a plate on it to represent a plum pudding (a tin plate would be best, being light and unbreakable). Each player takes the name of some article of food or something used at dinner. One tells a story about a plum- pudding, and when he utters the name spins the plate and mentions some other dish. The person so named instantly gives the plate another twirl and continues the story, spinning the plate when it begins to slow down, until he names another player, who must catch the plate before it falls, keep it going and go on with the story. "Plum pudding" must be brought into each story and its continuation, and the plate must never be allowed to fall. The story may be something like this: "It was Christmas, and we were all at my grandmother's house. She let me help her order the dinner. Of course there was a plum pudding (spin the plate) of great size, and we all liked it better than mince pie." Mince pie must then catch the spinning plate, give it a fresh impetus and continue: "In which they showed bad taste, I think, for, while mince pies are fine at Christmas, I should prefer plum pudding to roast chestnuts." Roast chestnuts seizes the plate and goes on: "Yes, but they are for dessert. I think plum pudding would be better than cranberry tart." And so the game goes on till all are tired or wits give out. Any one letting the plate fall or falling to continue the story pays a forfeit or leaves the game as previously arranged.

Children's Bird Party. It was at a party that this scheme was used, and it proved so satisfactory others may wish to try the same thing. Birds drawn in sepia ornamented the invitations, and the favors were Japanese paper birds that chirped in a most natural manner. On the wall a peacock was drawn without the tail, which was to be supplied after the manner of the old time "donkey" party. Each child was blind folded and had three chances to supply the missing glory to this vainst of birds. The prize to the one pinning on the most tails in the place where they should go received a copy of the "Birds' Christmas Carol."

Origin of an Old Saying. "Whole hog or none" refers to the alleged custom of Mohammed to allow his followers to eat all except one portion of a pig, which portion, however, was not specified. The result, therefore, was that if a Mohammedan did not wholly avoid the use of pork he might as well run the risk of consuming the whole portion as to eat any portion thereof. New York Press.

A Riddle. A ferret finds twelve ears of corn in a basket and carries off three every night. How long will it take to empty the basket? Twelve nights. He carries off one ear of corn and his own two ears.

An Incautious Critic. Almost the last work of the St. John Lardner was suggested by a picture of the albatross passing through an archway in a white jiffy. This picture, which the horse alone was finished, was bought by one of the Rothschild family and given to Sir John Lubbock to compare. One morning a celebrated artist called and was "amused" by the picture. "Ah! to be sure, he said, going up close and examining it, the picture, which almost floated in the foreground of the picture. How easily one can recognize Lardner's dogs! Wonderful isn't it?" "Yes, it is wonderful," remarked Sir John, "lighting another pipe." "I finished painting that dog yesterday and have done the whole of myself. This critic was sorry he spoke."

Daniel Was a Worker. Truly there were giants in colonial days. One Daniel Leake of Salisbury, N. H., made during his lifetime and was paid for 1,000,000 shingles. During the years he was accomplishing this colossal work he cleared 300 acres of land, tapped for twenty years at least 100 maple trees, making sometimes 4,000 pounds of sugar a year. He could mow six acres a day, giving nine tons of hay. His strong, long arms cut a swath twelve feet wide. In his spare time he worked as a cooper, and he was a famous drum maker.

A Secret Defined. A secret is a thing which you communicate to one whom you can trust. He in turn tells it to somebody that he can trust and that somebody reveals it to another somebody whom he can trust. And so it goes the rounds, but it is still a secret, although everybody knows it.

Not to Blame. Father (sternly) Now Sophia, something must be done to reduce your expenses. You are actually spending more than your allowance. Daughter-It isn't my fault, father. I've done my best to get you to increase it.-Brooklyn Life.

His Company. Her Father I judge a man, sir, by the company he keeps. The Son. Then I'm all right, for I've been keeping company with your daughter for over two years.

Good Intentions. "He means well." "Maybe so, maybe so, but I fired him because he's too blamed willing to let it go at that." Detroit Free Press.

No More Constipation

It's Me for Olive Tablets!

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel. Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and Calomel's old time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers. Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing laxative. No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normal. They never FORCE them to unnatural action. Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are so easy to take that children do not regard them as "medicine" at all. If you have a "dark brown mouth" now and then—a bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver and constipated, you'll find quick relief and only PLEASANT results one or two little Olive Tablets at bedtime. They're perfectly harmless. Thousands take one every night just to keep right. Try one. "Every little Olive Tablet has a movement all its own." 10c and 25c per box. The Olive Tablet Co., Columbus, O. RURAL STUDENTS
STUDY FARMING

First Step Taken Toward Ruralizing State Country Schools to be Made Next Month

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 20.—Beginning with the current month every rural eighth grader in Michigan is studying agriculture. This subject became a part of the prescribed course of study this year and examinations in it will be conducted in May along with the other subjects. Textbooks have been provided and in addition to these the department of public instruction has available for distribution a bulletin concerning the subject prepared by Prof. W. H. French of the M. A. C. The Michigan Agricultural college and the department of agriculture stand ready to send to teachers invaluable aids for the teaching of this new subject. Naturally the work finds the teachers unprepared, but progressive farmers throughout the state are showing a disposition to help make this work efficient.

The introduction of agriculture into the course of study by Supt. of Public Instruction Luther L. Wright is the first step toward ruralizing the country schools.

So earnest is Mr. Wright in his feeling that agriculture should be the most live subject in the country school that he makes the statement that if a board from a "question of expense really had to make a choice between a dictionary and a milk tester, they ought to purchase the tester.

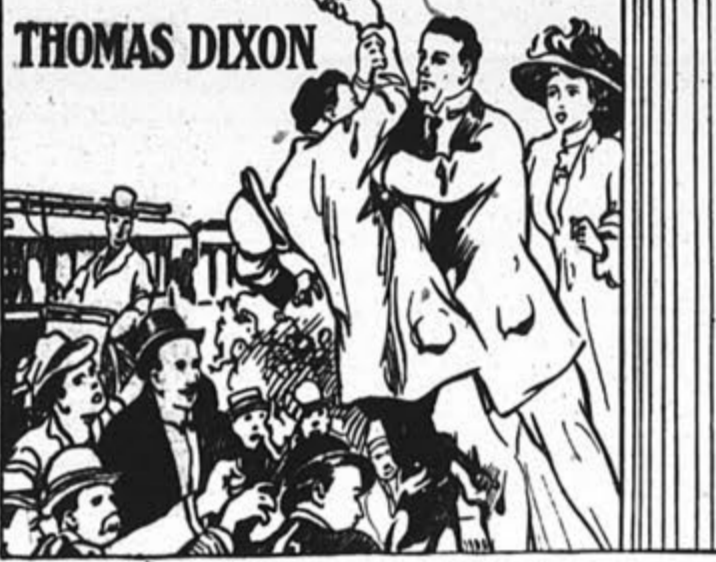

Where the Apostles Fished.
The abundance of fish in the sea of Galilee is to this day the wonder of travelers. Most of the fishing done by the Syrians involves the use of nets probably identical in construction with those of the apostles, and the best evidence of the fishing having through the centuries been done with nets is to be found in the ease with which most of the fish may be deceived with the help of any bait, natural or artificial. The pellucid water of this beautiful lake, with its ever changing reflections, is in striking contrast with the muddy depths of the Jordan, but the silt in that river, however insignificant to the eye, does not seem to inconvenience its fish, which are extraordinarily plentiful even in the lower reaches before it falls into that deathly lake which the Arabs call the sea of Lot.—London Outlook.

Granite, the Bedrock of the Earth.
Granite is the bedrock of the world. It is the lowest rock in the earth's crust and shows no signs of animal life. It is from two to ten times as thick as all the other layers of rocks combined. No evidences of life of either animal or vegetable are apparent in granite. The presence of lime is due to animal life. Some scientists assert that all the lime in the world has at some time been a part of some animal. This includes human beings.

SYNOPSIS

Stuart, southern lawyer in New York is in love with Nan Primrose. His friend, Dr. Woodman, who has a young daughter, is threatened with the loss of his drug business by Bivens, whom he befriended years before. Stuart visits the Primroses.

Nan wants Stuart to accept a place with Bivens' chemical trust. He dislikes Bivens' methods and refuses. Bivens calls on him.

Bivens is in love with Nan. Stuart refuses the offer, and Nan breaks her engagement with the lawyer. Bivens asks Woodman to enter the trust.

Woodman will not yield and sue Bivens' company. The promoter tells the doctor he and Nan are engaged. Harriet Woodman is studying music. Stuart takes Nan for a day in the country.

Stuart pleads with Nan to give up Bivens, but the spell of millions is on her and she yields to it.

Nan becomes Mrs. Bivens. Harriet loves Stuart, but he does not know it. Nine years pass. Stuart becomes district attorney. He investigates criminal trusts. Nan asks him to call.

Stuart wants Woodman to end his suit against Bivens, but the doctor stands firm. Bivens aids Stuart in his investigation of crooked financiers.

Stuart's revelations aid in bringing on a crisis. Bivens promises to aid the Van Dam Trust company, which is in trouble. Woodman needs money badly.

In the stock market slump engineered by Bivens, Woodman and many others lose all. The trust company fails because Bivens, at command of the money king, breaks his word. Stuart faces his critics in front of Bivens' bank.

The mob attacks Stuart and injures him slightly. Nan sees it and reveals her love. Bivens piles $50,000,000 on a table and calls Stuart to see the money to refute rumors of his financial weakness.

Stuart is tempted to join Bivens as his confidential man. He accepts an invitation to visit the Bivens house and is received by Nan.

CHAPTER XII.

Temptation.

WHEN Stuart had seated himself on a luxurious leather-covered chair in the little sitting room he gazed into the flickering fire with a feeling of strange excitement.

He could hear Bivens giving orders to his employees about the removal of his millions to the vaults below. It would take hours to complete the task. He could hear the deep vibrant ring of the gold, as the men dumped it into bags.

As he listened to the curious sound he began dimly to realize that the foundations of his life and character were being undermined. There could be no mistake about it, although he had made some brave talk to Bivens' face as she stared at the daring display of his money.

He lifted his eyes from the fire and they rested on an exquisite miniature of Nan which had been painted just after her marriage. He forgot the ten black years of loneliness and struggle. He was standing before her again in all the pride and strength of those last days of passionate longing and bitter rebellion. His heart gave a throb of fierce protest against the fate that had robbed him of the one thing on earth he had ever really desired. He tried in vain to separate her from the struggle of character and principle he was fighting with Bivens.

When Bivens entered he found his tall figure bent low in the chair and a scowl on his face. The little black eyes sparkled with the certainty of victory. He knew the poison was at work and its wise hand found the soul.

"Now, Jim, down to business! You can see that I have the cash. What I must have to do the big thing I've dreamed is a right hand man whom I can trust with my money, my body and my soul. He must be a man with brains and farseeing eyes. A man who will fight to the death and be loyal with every breath, who will work day and night, a man of iron nerve iron muscle and a heart of steel. Come in with me, Jim, for all you're worth, with all your brain and will and personality, without a single reservation and I'll give you a partnership of one fourth interest in my annual income and I'll guarantee that it shall never be less than a million a year."

Stuart springing to his feet and stared at Bivens, gasping.

"You mean this—are you serious? I expected the offer of a generous salary, Cal, but this is simply stunning."

"I told you I'd make you a proposition so big and generous you couldn't get away from it. But mind you, I've the best reasons for making it. I am entering the last phase of a world-wide financial supremacy. This country is to be the real center of modern power. We must become and will become quickly the economic masters of the world. When that happens somebody is going to be master here."

Bivens rose and paced back and forth a moment.

"Somebody's going to be master here, Jim," he repeated, "and it's not going to be a mob, the stupid, howling, slobbering thing that clutched at your throat that day in front of my bank."

"No."

"Nor will it be a clumsy soulless corporation called a trust, either, a thing that can be bargained and hounded by every hungry, thieving politician who gets into office. The coming master of the world, the king of kings will be a man—a man on whose imperial word will hang the fate of empires. I met the king of America the other day in this park. He sat for me. You can bet I answered the call. He made me eat dirt and swear that I liked the taste of it. But I'll get even with him yet."

Two vivid spots suddenly appeared on the swarthy cheeks and he choked into silence for a moment, continuing: "The world is waiting for its real master—not a multi-millionaire, but the coming billionaire. The king of kings is yet to come. If I had been ready in this park with the capital I have today I could have made a billion. With the power and experience I now have and one such man as you on whom I can depend I'd double my fortune every year. That means that in five years I will be a billionaire, and only forty two."

"A billion dollars will double itself in seven years. At forty two I'd be worth a billion. At forty nine I'd have two billions. At fifty eight I'd be worth four billions and just old enough to really begin to do things."

"Give me one billion unswerving to my will alone and I can rule this nation. Give me four billions and no king or emperor, president or parliament on this globe dare make peace or war without consulting me."

"How long could this republic stand if such a man should see fit to change its form? Even now our petty millionaires buy courts and legislatures, and the control of great cities. But the new king would know no limitations at this power. If Europe now cringes at the feet of our present millionaire king of Wall street, suppose he had favor and prizes wait at his door, what could the rest of the world do?"

Bivens' voice again sank into low passionate whispers while his black eyes again became two points of fierce gleaming light.

When the crucial moment came for Stuart's manhood to answer the speech of brave denunciation died on his lips. At the door of this yellow empire, richer than kings in purple robe, his conscience halted, hesitated and stammered. He found himself, in spite of honor and character, for the moment measuring himself with Bivens in the struggle for supremacy which would sooner or later come between them if he should enter such an alliance.

"You needn't rush your decision, Jim. Take your time. Think it over from every point of view. You're bound to accept in the end."

Stuart flushed and his hand trembled. "It's no use in my quibbling, Cal, your offer is a sizzling one. It tempts me immensely. I feel the call of the old blood struggle in me. I'm begining to see now that the world's battles are no longer fought with sword and gun."

"Take your time, Jim," Bivens broke in, rising. "In the meantime I've got to see more of you. Nan wants it, and I want it. The politicians have turned you down, but the big men who count are afraid of you and they'll go out of their way to meet you. Come up to dinner with me tonight. I want you to make my home your home whether you accept my offer or not."

Stuart hesitated.

"Really, Cal, I oughtn't to go to-night. I'm afraid I've let you take too much for granted. I've got to fight this thing out alone. It's the biggest thing physically and morally I've ever been up against. I've got to be alone for awhile."

"Oh, nonsense, be alone as much as you like later. Nan insisted on my bringing you tonight, and you've got to come, to save me from trouble if nothing else. I've an engagement down town after dinner. You and Nan can talk over old times. I promise you faithfully that not a word of business shall be spoken."

Stuart felt the foundations of life slipping beneath his feet and yet he couldn't keep back the answer: "All right, I'll come."

As Stuart dressed for the dinner that night he thought of Harriet with a pang. He had promised her to try to keep out of danger. But could she know or understand the struggle through which he was passing? He wondered vaguely why he had seen so little of her lately. She had become more and more absorbed in her music, and her manner had grown shy and embarrassed. Yet whenever he had resented it and stopped to lounge and chat and draw her out, she was always her old sweet self. The doctor, too, had avoided him of late, and he noticed that his clothes had begun to look shabby. He caught him hurrying from the house and laid his hand affectionately on his arm.

"These are tough times, doctor, and if you need any help you must let me know."

The older man's voice trembled as he replied:

"Thank you, my boy, that's a very unusual speech to hear these days. It renews my faith in the world."

"You're not in trouble?"

The doctor lifted his head gently.

"My troubles are so much lighter than those of the people I know I can't think of them. So many of my friends and patients have given up in this panic. So many have died for the lack of bread. I'll let you know if I'm in trouble myself."

He paused and pressed Stuart's hand.

"I'm glad you asked me. The sun will shine brighter today. I must hurry."

With a swing of his stalwart form and a generous wave of his hand he was gone.

When Stuart reached the drive he alighted and walked slowly toward the Bivens palace. He had never been there before. He had always avoided the spot. He smiled now at the childishness of his attitude toward Nan.

The full moon had just risen and flooded the drive and park and river with silvery mystery. He studied the effects of the building with wonder and admiration. Evidently Bivens had given his architects a free hand and they had wrought a poem in marble.

So fascinated was Stuart with the beauty and perfection of the great house he walked around the block before entering, viewing it from every angle. What a strange thing, this medieval palace, standing in stately beauty in the midst of the hideous, ugly uniformity of the most modern, unromantic and materialistic city of the world! What was its meaning?

Had a new master of the world really been born? Surely his like had never been seen in the history of man—this modern money maniac, this strange creature of iron muscles, all ways hurrying, daring, scheming, plotting, with never a moment's relaxation.

Stuart was shown into the drawing room by a powdered flunky whose costume was designed by one of the court tailors of Europe. While awaiting the arrival of the mistress of the house he looked about the room with increasing amazement. He found the perfection of grace, elegance, quiet richness and surprising beauty.

He began to realize for the first time the triumph of the woman who had bartered him for gold. His eye rested on a life size portrait of Nan done by the foremost artist of Europe. The artist had caught the secret of her character and expressed it with genius in the pose of the superb form, the incarnation of sensuous, soulless beauty dominated by keen intelligence.

He wondered if she really showed the ten years added to her age. At least he knew that she had not been happy. There was some consolation in that. Her ceaseless efforts to win back his friendship had left no room for doubt. He sank deep into the great chair and silently waited her coming.

When Nan's radiant figure appeared in the doorway, her bare arm extended, her lips parted in a tender smile, Stuart knew that his face was red. The fact that he knew it increased his confusion until the whole room became a blur. Her hand touched his. The shock was sobering; he remembered himself and smiled.

"What a long, long time, Jim!"

"A thousand years—I think, Nan," he stammered.

"Nine hundred, to be exact, sir, but better late than never. I began to think your stubbornness would postpone this call until the next world. Mr. Bivens was detained downtown on business. I am awfully sorry he's not here to join in my welcome. But I am disappointed in you."

"Why?"

"My vanity is hurt. I expected to find you, after nine years, with deep lines of suffering written on your face. You are better looking than ever. The few gray hairs about your temples are extremely becoming. Your honors have given you a new repose, dignity and refinement."

"Allow me to return the compliment by saying that you are even a more attractive person than to me. I was sure you would find me broken. You are a thousand times better than ever. The only changes I see merely add to your power—the worldly wisdom which marriage, writes on every woman's face, a new strength, a warmth and fascination and a conscious joy at which I wonder and rage."

She drew him gently to a seat by her side, leaned forward and gazed smilingly at him.

"When I see you tonight in all this splendor, so insolently happy—"

Nan sprang to her feet, laughing.

"You are delicious tonight, Jim, and I'm so glad you are here. Come into the art gallery. It will take you days to see it; we'll just peep in tonight."

He followed her into a stately room, packed with masterpieces of art. Stuart caught a moment in rapture.

"You must spend days here, Jim. Now, honestly, with all your high-browed ideas, wouldn't you like to own this?"

"What a long time, Jim!"

"No. Not if I had the wealth of Croesus."

"Why not?"

"It's a crime to rob the world of these masterpieces of genius. They should be the free inheritance and inspiration of all the children of men."

Nan gazed at Stuart in vague bewilderment and then a mischievous smile crept into the corners of her mouth.

"You're trying to throw dust in my eyes, but I can tell you what you are really thinking. You are really wondering why the wicked prosper."

"You are wrong," he replied slowly. "Why the wicked prosper has never worried me in the least. The first big religious idea I ever got hold of was that this is the best possible world God could have created—because it's free. Man must choose, otherwise his deeds have no meaning. A devil of mine is good merely because I have the power to do its opposite if I choose. In this free world, step by step, I can rise or fall through suffering and choosing."

"Oh, Jim," Nan broke in softly, "I've made you suffer horribly. You have the right to be hard and bitter."

He looked at Nan cautiously and began to study her every word and movement and weigh each accent. Did she mean what her words and tones implied? In a hundred little ways more eloquent than speech she had said to him tonight that the old love of the morning of life was still the one living thing. He put her to little tests to try the genuineness of her feeling. He threw off his restraint and led her back to the scenes of their youth. When dinner ended she was leaning close, her eyes misty with tears, and a faraway look in them that told of memories more vivid and alluring than all the splendors of her palace. Stuart drew a breath of conscious triumph, and his figure suddenly grew tense with a desperate resolution. But only for a moment.

He frowned, looked at his watch and rose abruptly.

"I must be going, Nan," he said with sudden coldness.

"Why, Jim," she protested, "it's only 10 o'clock. I won't hear of such a thing."

"Yes, I must," he persisted. "I've an important case tomorrow. I must work tonight."

"You shall not go," Nan cried. "I've waited nine years for this one evening's chat with you. Come into the music room, sit down and brood as long as you like. I've planned to charm you with an old accomplishment of mine tonight."

She led him to a rich couch, piled the pillows high, made him sing, drew a harp near the other end and began to tune its strings.

Stuart gazed at the paintings on the ceiling and in a moment was not in visions of the future his excited fancy began to weave.

A voice whispered: "Unless you are a coward grasp the power that is yours in this nerve struggle for supremacy? The woman who sits before you is yours. I can only dare to tear her from the man who holds her by the neck of his custom."

He felt his heart throb as another voice within cried: "Yet why should I, an heir to immortality, whose will can shape a world, wish to share a man's fate? The answer was the memory of dirty finger nails clung on his throat while a mob of howling fools surged over his body and cursed him for trying to save them from themselves. Again he heard a woman's voice as she held his head close, whispering:

"I've something to say to you, Jim!" His lips tightened with sudden decision. The golden gates of the forbidden land swung open and his soul entered.

DAINTY COMEDY

Escanaba People Will Have Opportunity to Witness One of Best Musical Comedies

The echo of the tremendous success scored by "Madame Sherry" in Chicago and New York has undoubtedly surrounded in this city, judging from the interest manifested in the engagement of this French musical comedy at the Peterson on Sunday evening, Jan. 26. When the boxoffice opens for the sale of seats for this attraction there will probably be the longest line waiting to purchase tickets ever seen in any of our all accounts. Those who secure seats will witness one of the daintiest and most unique comedy creations of this generation. Adapted by Otto Harbach from a French original which won success in Paris, Berlin and London, with its positively enchanting melodies by Karl Hoschna, with a cast of remarkable strength and produced by Woods, Frazee and Lederer in a style that spells perfection, "Madame Sherry" is one of those rare theatrical gems that are offered once in a very long while.

THE WORLD ALMANAC
READY MADE MEMORY

The World Almanac for 1913 as Vast Compendium of Most Useful Knowledge

Packed within the 832 pages of The World Almanac and Encyclopedia for 1913 is a vast compendium of useful knowledge, remarkably inclusive in its scope and at the same time generous as to detail. It is a printed information bureau which answers the thousands of questions raised every day in-home, office, and even in the school, bearing on political, historic, scientific, legal, commercial, and other subjects. Art, Music, Literature, Drama, Geographical Research, Electrical Progress, Sporting Records, Marine Disasters, The Panama Canal Act of 1912, and the New Pension Law of 1912—these but hint at the wide scope of subjects covered in the book's inclusive range. It is not only a reminder, but an educator as well. It is a ready-made memory and an authority of the last word. It is compact, it is complete, it is comprehensive. It is a big-little book.

WEATHER CONDITIONS

Cold weather again overspreads Montana, the Dakotas and Minnesota.

temperatures ranging from 6 below zero in interior Minnesota to 32 below in northern Montana, being reported from that region this morning. In the East, temperatures have been moderate since Saturday morning; but it is now becoming colder over the upper Mississippi Valley and western Lake region, as a consequence of the eastward drift of the northwestern cold wave. Light snows and rains are falling this morning over the middle Mississippi and lower Ohio Valleys, and the southern Lake region, but elsewhere over the country, the weather has been principally fair during the past 24 hours. Snow is indicated for this vicinity tonight, followed by fair Tuesday. It will be colder tonight and Tuesday.

Tail of the Fiery Dragon.

One of the peculiarities of the ancient writers on natural history subjects was the implicit faith which they placed in the genuineness of the various basilisk and dragon stories which were told to them. Brunetto, for an instance to the point, relates with all soberness that "the basilisk is the king of serpents. He wears a white crest upon his head, and such is the abundance of his venom that the air is poisoned wherever this dire reptile passes. Trees in which he makes his home exhale such a poisonous odor that birds in flying over are so overcome with it that they fall to the ground dead."

"The dragon," says the same author, "is the very largest of serpents and inhabits especially India and Ethiopia. When he flies out of the caverns in which he makes his home he furrows the air with such violence as to make it gleam with fire. His mouth is small, and he has not the power to inflict deadly wounds with his teeth. In his tail, however, he power lies, and with it he can instantly strangle the largest elephant."

Southpaw Smokers.

With his left hand he took pipe and tobacco from his pocket, and with his right hand he felt for a match. He had none. His fellow idler at the other end of the park bench gave him a match and then let his own cigar go out in his astonishment at seeing his left handed neighbor light his pipe with his right hand.

"That's funny," said he "You are just about the most confirmed left hander I ever met, yet for that little trick you use your right hand as if born to it."

"All left handed people do," was the reply. "Just think over the list of your smoking acquaintances and see if you ever knew one who lit his pipe with his left hand. I'll bet you didn't. I never did, and I have numbered among my pipe loving friends several men whose right hand seemed nearly helpless for everything else."—New York Press.

Lions and Tigers.

Three feet of a little over is the real height of good sized lions and tigers. And when sportsmen realize what an extra six inches or nine inches added to the stature involves in increased length and general bulk to balance the known proportions of the animals I am equally sure they will admit that no lion ever seated anything like four feet at the shoulder and that the height measurements of dead specimens give quite a false idea of the actual heights of the animals in life. The following are the heights at the shoulders of some of our large felines: Large lion, 2 feet 11 inches; Manchu tiger, 2 feet 10 inches; Nepal tiger, 2 feet 8 inches; Sumatran tiger, 2 feet 7 inches; large male jaguar, 2 feet 3 inches; male cheetah, 2 feet 2 inches—London.

Not So Easy.

"Bible, don't you think a man ought to save at least half the money he makes?"

"Yes, but how can he, with his creditors howling for it all the time?"

A Close Father.

She: You must ask father for his consent. He won't give it to me. She: Why not? He has too close. He never gave anything to anybody in his life.

YOUNG MAN DIES OF PNEUMONIA

Earl Kirkpatrick, Stephenson Avenue, Passes Away After a Five Day Illness

The death of Earl Kirkpatrick, the eighteen year old son of Mrs. Minnie Kirkpatrick, 223 Stephenson avenue, occurred Sunday morning at nine o'clock. He has been sick but five days with pneumonia and his demise came as a shock to his many friends. The funeral will be held Tuesday afternoon.

Miss Effie M. Griffith of the English department of the high school is at the Delta County hospital suffering from an attack of erysipelas.

Mrs. W. N. LaFave has moved her dressmaking parlors to 1214 Ludington street. 1140-22

Mrs. W. C. LaBell who has been ill is still confined at the county hospital.

Mackinaws Have Conquered Fashion

The picturesque mackinaw, the garment that put Michigan on the map, is king of sartorial elegance these days. All classes from bank presidents down to white wings, are wearing it in the large cities today, and the mackinaw factories have been better than gold mines at present quotations of the yellow metal. For weeks dealers have only been able to replenish their stocks by fasting and prayer.

Of the havoc the garment is working with tradition in the southern cities, the Milwaukee News says.

"Altho all the men are now wearing their mackinaws when they call on their best girls, masculinity is furnishing gay splashes of color to touch up the picturesqueness of humanity on the streets. Man is no longer a somber or nondescript filler in the processions. His plush cap got his into the spotlight. But nobody notices a plush hat anymore. Any man insists upon being noticed. Apparently he thinks the women have been the dandies long enough. No one will be much surprised if he takes to wigs and lace cuffs and colorful satin breeches. For, after mere man gets tired of being stared at by admiring femininity in the streets, it will be only natural to carry these conquests to the scenes of night gayety."

How folks did look at the first mackinaw that came down to Milwaukee from the north woods. People even followed it in the streets. Part of the fascination seemed to be because the man wearing it looked so entirely satisfied with it, so enviably comfortable, and guarded against the wintry winds. They the gaudy ones began appearing—green ones, blue ones and bold checks. Now even the Beau Brummel type of man thinks his wardrobe incomplete unless he possesses one of these mackinaws for morning wear.

"Only a few Milwaukee men have so far had the courage to emerge in the plumed hat that goes with this gear. Most of them stick to knitted caps. But the Tyrolean hat, with a stick-up in it, is considered eminently proper by dress arbiters. The featherers are even gayer than the colors in the new wool jackets, coming in bright reds orange or vivid green.

"Of course, it is embarrassing to have a man that looks like a lumberjack stumble into a parlor, especially if one has some sartorially proper guests there. But if a girl cares anything for a man, she will doubtless forgive him for appearing once in these togs—just once; long enough to show them off and to explore their blanket novelty."

Press of Business in Circuit Court Compels Prosecutor to Continue Cases For Week

The preliminary examination of the five Gladstone saloon keepers, who were charged with keeping their places of business open after hours and which was set from today has been postponed until next Monday. Prosecutor Strom was too busy with circuit matters to give the cases the proper attention.

George A. Woessner of Menominee has accepted a position with the Delta Hardware company as traveling salesman. He will move his family here.

FLINT'S LETTER

The unexpected break in the price of London Copper warrants of two pounds and a half, equivalent to over one half cent per pound in this country, since last quotations from there caused copper stocks to open decidedly weak this morning. Declines of one dollar per share in Amalgamated Calumet & Arizona Granby and the other principal copper stocks were recorded early and at the close the loss was even greater. had been saving for three years. During that time he accumulated $1,700. Instead of depositing it in a Bank, where it would be safe and draw interest, he kept it in his house. His house was destroyed by fire, and this $1,700 in paper money, representing three year's saving, was consumed. If you are keeping money in your house, you are not only running the risk of its loss by fire, but you are actually losing 3 per cent. Interest which you would receive if it were deposited with us. It is simply a market where one day there is a slight demand resulting in a withdrawal of offerings and higher prices while the next day just the opposite is in evidence. Brokers as a rule believe that copper stocks at these prices are a purchase but conditions in the metal market, for the time being, are not encouraging as the consumers are holding off expecting further concessions in the price of metal.

INDIANS FIGHT TO SAVE THEIR LANDS

Ute Indians Entrenched Behind Mountains to Save Fellow Redmen From Possession

(By Associated Press.)
Washington, Jan. 20.—Fifty Ute Indians are behind intrenchments in the mountains near Cortez, Colorado. They will fight to death to save a fellow Red man from arrest. He killed a white man because of some land trouble. A posse surrounds the Indians but the Redskins hold them at bay. A serious outbreak is feared and a call may be sent for the state militia.

"ARSON RING" USED PECULIAR METHODS

SAUSAGES MADE FROM FIRE POWDER AND GASOLINE WERE USED TO BURN STOCKS IN STORES

Man Who Set Fire Could be a Long Ways off Before the Fire Powder Exploded

(By Associated Press.)
Chicago, Jan. 20.—Sausage skins filled with gasoline and a preparation known as "fire powder" have been used, it is alleged in the operations of the "arson ring," according to a disclosure that was made today to States Attorney Hoyle.

The "Gasoline sausages were used on one fire at least it is stated. They were strung on wires and exploded with a loud noise when the fire reached them, spreading the flames over a large area. The new chemical preparation enabled the alleged "fire bug" to be several miles away before the fire was discovered. It is thought that three men worked together in starting the fires. One carried the gasoline, the other the fire powder and the third started the fire. Ten have been examined and their cases will be presented to the grand jury soon.
