

The Stories the Dewdrops Told

(Written for the United States School Garden Army, Department of the Interior)

The Very Tall Fairy

"I really think our garden is the nicest place in the world," said Dolly. It did look very pleasant in the early morning. Dolly's brothers had worked very hard, helping the gardener. The gardener had grumbled because so much more ground was put into the garden this year than usual, but Bob and Billy had heard a great deal about gardening in school and they had told him they would do much of the work. Their teacher had told them about the people far away who were starving because of the Great War. All the men of those countries had been obliged to fight. So there had not been as many crops raised as usual and now the women and the little children could not get enough to eat. The people of the United States had promised to help, so everyone who had an acre of ground was making a garden. The school children had been allowed to use vacant lots and had raised many vegetables. The girls and boys had all worked together in the gardens. The girls were learning how to can vegetables so that there would be plenty for next winter. Bob and Billy were leaders in the United States School Garden Army and they had listened eagerly when their teacher read to their company a message from Secretary Lane. Bob copied the message, because he wanted Fatherbob to hear it. And then, too, Bob wanted little Dolly, who told him about the Dewdrop Fairies, to know that Secretary Lane, from his office in Washington, had sent a special message to the "Army in the Field."

This is what the Secretary of the Interior wrote to Bob and Billy, and all the other boys and girls in the United States and Hawaii, and the Philippine Islands—

"A million and a half of you answered the call last year; there should be five million this year.

"The war is over; but the world is only beginning to be rebuilt. In many parts of Europe, farms and the men to farm them are no more; yet the world must be fed.

"Food is the key to most of the problems of Europe. The United States School Garden Army has it in its power to be a big help to the nations in the task of feeding the world. Every garden added to the number planted last year means another step toward lasting peace.

"The boys and girls who have Liberty gardens in 1919, the Garden Army officers who help in keeping the Army efficient, and the teachers who direct the work, will render a patriotic service to be compared only with that of the men who won the war."

Now after Dolly had heard the message, which Fatherbob said was fine, she went into the garden.

"I wonder if everybody's garden has Dewdrop Fairies in it," said Dolly to herself. "They make it so interesting." Dolly was very proud of her long word. "I wonder if I shall see one today. I wonder—"

Dolly would have gone on "wondering" if she had not just then seen the very person for whom she was looking. She was sure at once that this was a Fairy. It stood just by the side of the path. It was not standing still, but was moving gently from side to side, without taking its feet off the ground. It was very graceful and very, very tall—for a Fairy, that is. It must have been as Dolly's longest finger. It was a lady Fairy, dressed all in light green. The dress was very tight-fitting and had a long train. Some pointed green feathers were in her hair. Her hair was a beautiful light-gold color and as soft as silk.

"You are right about this garden," said the Fairy. "It is a very nice garden. You should be proud of Bob and Billy for working so hard to make everything grow. And you needn't wonder about the Dewdrop Fairies. They are in every garden if people will only look for them. Do you want to look into my dewdrop?"

Instead of pouring the dewdrop out of a watering pot, this Fairy held it in her hand. It filled her hand quite full. It looked like a bright diamond. Dolly looked into it and gave a great start. You will never guess what she saw. She saw many men with red-brown skins and very black hair. They had feathers in their hair. They were dancing. Besides seeing them she could hear music that was not like any music she had ever heard before. It was mostly thumping, like a drum, but there was a kind of tune that the men seemed to be singing.

THE NUMEROUS GREAT PORTS OF JUGO SLAVIA —WHY ASK FOR FIUME?

[Ea Note.—This map is an exact reproduction from a map drawn to scale in 1912. Since that time the railroad was completed to Spalato and Trau—it is shown on the map as proposed at that time.]
The well known treaty of London leaves to the Jugo Slavs sufficient natural outlets on the Adriatic, comprised in more than a dozen large ports and about 600 miles of coast line. The black arrows on the map indicate the principal ports, and among them we find Metcovic, which, with the other two ports of Gravosa and Ragusa furnish the natural passageway between the Adriatic and the Danube (via the valleys of the Narente and the Bosna). The geographical center of the new Jugo Slavic nation is at the city of Serajevo. The importance of these Jugo Slavic ports is recognized in the treaty of London. Exclusive of Fiume, their commerce in 1912 surpassed fourteen million tons, or more than double that of Marseilles, the great port of Southern France. They are, therefore, quite sufficient for the needs of the Jugo Slavs.

WHERE THERE IS PEACE.

What is the country thinking about? The cities seethe with problems, national and international. How is the world-momentum, felt in the rural districts.

Shantung is an unconsidered issue; Czech-Slovakia is a name; Fiume a mystery; the Saare Valley is without debaters. The war, to the country side is positively and finally over.

The countryside looks blank at mention of the Balkans. The countryside is thinking and talking crops, stock good roads, markets.

There are Victory Loan posters clinging to the walls; published bank statements in the local papers show respectable holdings of Government bonds; boxes urging donations to this and that war charity still hang, weather-stained, to telegraph poles; flags droop in the windows, and the arma of war hanging suitably in the air.

But to the villages and farms peace is a fact; the fields yield their harvest; the sea gives up the catch; the wagon, hay-laden, creak along the roads; the markets yawn; and on a Saturday night the throngs wander in from near and far to discuss the great adventure of the week's weather.

Out in the country peace has come.

Interest in what the dries in Congress will be able to do in the matter of a cellar flight is not confined, by any means, to aviation circles.

However, the feat of the aviator who crossed the Mediterranean a 450 miles will be pooh-poohed, probably, as a week-end trip.

What does a depositor in it say, now that the Day and Night banks in Charleston has failed, "Good day" or "Good night" or both.

Maybe there were those who would have gone to the train to see Bela Kun off if they could have kept up with him.

The far-away, forlorn look on a man's face may mean that he has just learned of the year's abundant crop of rye.

It seems we have had to Detour in Washington on the road to Peace because some fellows are fixing their fences.

What a beautiful world this would be if flowers only grew to resemble their pictures in the seed catalogue.

It begins to look doubtful whether a farmer on that Ford-Chicago Tribune jury will reap as he sowed.

From the tears over this chipped piece of China on the Peace table you'd think they won it at their pedro club.

Latest advice from Vienna suggest that Bela Kun, minister of foreign affairs, is one of them.

Some women who would rather tell a doctor of their aches and pains than gossip with their neighbors.

Most every attempt to solve the high cost of living seems to leave one entirely at a loss.

ASSAIL LOYALTY OF HENRY FORD

CHICAGO TRIBUNE TRIES TO SHOW HE REMITTED PRO-GERMANS TO WORK IN PLANT.

PLAINTIFF REVEALS FACTS

Shows That 400 Workmen Were Secret Government Operatives Who Were Constantly on Alert for Disloyal Employees.

Mt. Clemens, Mich., July 25.—Henry Ford, for the first time in over a week, was absent from the witness stand when court convened in the $1,000,000 libel suit which the manufacturer has brought against the Chicago Tribune.

Tribune counsel branched into a new endeavor, charging that, although Mr. Ford professed to be assisting the government, he kept in his employ and under his protection certain men who were opposed to the interests of the United States. The principal employee discussed in this connection was one Karl Embe. Mr. Ford on the stand had testified that he had worked with Embe personally; had watched him carefully and had found no reason to doubt his loyalty.

Edwin C. Clemett, assistant director of the Ford educational department, who had previously testified under Ford subpoena, was called again by Tribune subpoena to testify to pro-Germanism in the Ford plant and the efforts made to stamp it out and prevent injury to the war work being done for the government.

Mr. Clemett was a captain of the American Protective League operatives in the Ford plant. He had 400 workmen under his command who went about their labors and kept their eyes and ears open for disloyal acts or words.

The work of these secret operatives resulted in confidential reports being made upon about 500 workers whose loyalty had come under suspicion. It was part of the agreement with the government that any man engaged upon war work could be removed at the government's suggestion. It was shown in this connection that no man was so removed, although the government had full access to all the reports concerning suspected men.

It was the Ford company's belief that the safety of the government would be better served if suspected men were changed to jobs where they could do no damage rather than discharged from the plant and thus allowed to find employment in other shops where they were unknown and where destructive work and seditious talk might do great harm.

Alfred Lacking, senior counsel for Mr. Ford, argued that the presence of a small body of pro-Germans—500 suspected men among 30,000—could not possibly reflect on the loyalty of Henry Ford.

The organization of the American

Protective league in the Ford plants was like that in every other factory in the country where war work was done. Witness said operatives reported to him in writing, signed only by the operative's number. Mr. Clement said he reported to J. Herbert Cole of the United States department of justice.

"If an employee was suspected of pro-Germanism I assigned the investigation to an operative in his department," said Mr. Clement. "Often operative and suspect worked right next to each other."

"Did you recommend prosecution of certain cases?" asked Attorney Murphy on cross-examination.

"I don't think so. We simply turned in the evidence, assuming that the government would prosecute in its discretion. One employee was convicted in the federal court and fined $300."

The Chicago Tribune, which has occupied five full weeks in presenting its defense has not yet rested its case.

Rebuttal of the evidence and testimony offered by the Tribune is yet to be offered by Ford counsel.

The summing up by attorneys is expected to occupy a full week.

Indications are, therefore, that the trial cannot possibly be concluded short of another two weeks, which will mean that it will, before a verdict is handed down, have occupied three full months.

THE CHEERFUL CHERUB
I'll strive to stand aside in life With sure, untroubled poise, And as the train of years goes past To grab off little joys.

Daily Fashion Hint

CATERING TO THE WHIMS OF MISSDOM.

Satin striped challis requires only a collar and cuffs of hemstitched organdy for decorative effect when made up after the first of the three dresses pictured above. The waist is in high effect, with skirt attached, the neck being square at the front. Three yards 44-inch challis and 1/2 yard organdy are needed for medium size.

Plain and check gingham combine gracefully in the second dress. The waist of plain material is long at the sides and back, the front of the skirt extending above the belt in panel effect. Two and one-half yards check and 1 3/4 yards plain 36-inch gingham make the dress.

One must have a detached panel at the back if the little "best" dress is fashioned of tub satin. The third design is trimmed with a dainty bit of embroidery and tucks, in addition to the panel at the back. Three and one-half yards 40-inch satin are needed for medium size.
