WHEN DR. LORENZ COMES

It seems to be finally settled that Dr. Arnold Lorenz, the famous Austrian orthopedic surgeon, now in New York, will come to Detroit within a week or two in response to an invitation from Mayor Cavanaugh, and that subsequently he will make a tour of the state in a Pullman train so that crippled children in small places where there may be no orthopedists, may have chance for treatment.

Now Dr. Lorenz has a high reputation as an expert in his line. He has done some very fine work. But after all he is only a man, and his capacity both for professional effort and for achievement is subject to strictly human limitations. So we hope that his duties in this city and throughout Michigan will be intelligently more restricted than were those which he had in New York. In New York the office where Dr. Lorenz operated was thronged continually by his crowds of cripples, many of whom were in utterly hopeless case beyond all hope of relief, and who were waited vainly for days in the ante room to see the physician, they in the end never reached. Dr. Lorenz did what he could and he broke down temporarily, but the whole episode was painful, heart-breaking, and painful to every one of the end way of which things were accomplished.

In Detroit and throughout Michigan some sort of a sensible and practical method should be used in selecting and financing cripples. Those who look for help should first be classified by competent experts, and only the individuals that may possibly be cured, provided for examination. They should also be classified according to the nature of their disability, and be referred for treatment as and where to be necessary, without anxiety and hardship. The number of cases should be limited to what can be handled without anything of that sort.

We believe, too, that applicants for help should be required to be examined by some one who is not a physician, but a layman, and that they should not expect to be cured by a single operation, and that since it will be practically impossible for Dr. Lorenz to see all who want to go to him and who are in a condition to require it, that in the event of failure, they should also be fortified in the event of failure, by being told that they are very good orthopedic physicians in this city, who are able to do all that is possible for them, and that there is no need for them to sink into a state of helplessness. TRYING TO DRIVE THE WEDGE, PERHAPS

The request of the German government addressed to the reparations commission that all cash payments for this year should be waived, can scarcely have been made with the expectation that it will be granted. The commission, which met earlier request for relief from the first payment was not made to encourage the belief that France will give up a whole year's income from German sources.

Doubtless the new proposition is put forward as a last resort, for further bargaining, and it may be that the German government has in the back of its mind, the idea that it can make trouble between France and England by persisting in its demand for financial mercy.

Obviously there has been no break between Paris and London, but the two nations have been drifting apart. France is seeking satisfaction by the uncompromising enforcement of the Treaty of Versailles. England seeks a way back to prosperity only through a revival of foreign trade. The French man looks at his devastated lands and shudders at the loss of many. The Englishman sees the ships tied up and his factories empty. He wants the German market, and believes that the French policy of drastic treaty enforcement is what keeps it closed.

Therefore, any sign of extremeness on the part of France stirs the ire of the Englishman, while the moderate proposal from England sets France in a rage. Certainly the German government with its eyes on a distant future will welcome anything which drives a wedge between its most powerful enemies, and when the wedges in German hands, as it is in the matter of reparations, the German government will make all the use it can of it.

But the game is a delicate one. Germany cannot in the near future profit by any alienation of France and England which would cause France to play a lone hand.

ELECTRIC SERVICE AND FARM PRODUCTIVENESS

The National Electric Light Association has named this year a committee on rural line extension which take up a pressing and much-needed work. It is now generally appreciated that one of the biggest problems facing the farmer is that of substituting mechanical power for the labor, both human and animal, that has been the industry of the farm. The gas and steam engine have already played a large part in the transportation, and the tractor is rapidly assuming a larger share in the same work.

The Electrical World comments: "The farmer is in the same position with reference to the use of electricity that the manufacturer was in twenty years ago. It represents a means of pulling him out of some of the economic difficulties he is facing and enabling him to employ labor-saving devices to a degree comparable with other industries, providing he can induce an electric company to built out to him."

An expert says that by 1925 gasoline will be up to 40 cents a gallon, but if the prices of cars keep on their present course, the net cost of riding ought not to change much.

Lots of people can hang up those temperance stars with clear consciences as long as they are not required to place them in their cellar windows.

Intimate and first-hand knowledge of the fact that a man reaps what he sows ought to keep the members of the farmers' blue pretty well down to earth.

ROADS COST LESS DURING THE WAR IS McADOO CLAIM

Claim Railroad Men Worked for Less Than Other Similar Classes of Labor During War Period.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—Taking into consideration every expenditure by shippers, travelers or by consumption of appropriation, the railroad system of the United States only cost the American public an average of $478,637,464 per month for all the war-time period when the government ran it, William H. McAdoo, first director general of the administration, testified today before a senate investigation committee. He said it was costing under private control now an average of $525,112,176 per month.

In other words, the cost of private operation since federal control has been 72 percent higher than under the railroad administration, Mr. McAdoo said in concluding.

Results of Private Control

Speaking on the general results and effects of railroad private control, and his return to the old so-called competitive system of railroad operation with its great wastes and inefficiencies, with the tremendous burden imposed on the public of increased freight and passenger rates, the well known speaker, who is re-elected in the operation of agriculture, labor and industry, of the essential status made by the railroad corporation against the government for alleged maintenance, inefficiency of labor etc. He advanced that it would have cost the American people less money to have maintained control for a few years than has resulted from their return to private control.

I am also convinced that the present level of freight and passenger rates would have been unnecessary to secure there is no question in my mind that a well-directed and unified operation of the railroads would economize by reducing the cost of operation and thereby increase efficiency.

Mentions "Savings"

"While the time has gone by, I do not urge retention of the railroads by the government as the first best of government opportunities for saving, made by the railroad administration in unified operation was $118,990,000 for material expenses under private operation.

Mr. McAdoo returned to the attack on his former employer, the railroad industry, today, declaring that with two changes, the first concerning maintenance while the second was a return to private ownership, he could, with more economy and more care than they had given the government, as to the charges of neglected repairs, he said that the total cost of fitting freight cars for service after the government concluded was not more $25,000,000 and having to reported conditions today, he said it would cost railroads $27,000,000 to repair the cars that are now damaged for service now.

As to wage increases under his administration, Mr. McAdoo asserted in $480,000,000 per year, while increases granted to the employees in 1920 under private operation, amounted to $1,023,000,000.

Men Were Loyal

The fact is railroad employees worked for less pay during the war than any other class of industrial workers doing similar work," he declared. "The realization they were working for their government in the stress and strain of war, and that they would be fairly treated inspired them and spurred them to unusual effort and faithful service."

Taking over the roads, the administration found frequent and costly labor turnover, discontent and demoralization, with pay rates for lower than either the cost of living or the wages in private industry justified, he added. He recounted the setting up of wage boards, with management representatives, and the granting of increases.

There was not the slightest complaint from any railroad executive that wage increases in 1918 were too high," he said. "The charge that the wages of railroad labor were unnecessarily raised and that wages were thereby elevated through the country is false. The exact contrary is true."

The schedules of wages promulgated by the railroad administration during 1918 were generally below those in other basic industries, and well below the rates fixed by the navy yards, the National War Labor Board, and by the shipbuilding adjustment boards.

Conditions in the war industries necessarily caused the advances in the rates of pay of railway workers. The railroad administration was itself a conservative instead of an initiating influence in the general advances in wage payments. Its awards did not go far enough in meeting competitive conditions in increasing rates and classifying certain classes of workers.

All the measures approved by him were recommended by the management members of the board, he said, except that which involved the abolition of piece-work in railroad repair shops. The piece work system, he said, had no advantage in efficiency over day work, resulted in "large payments to workmen which was not performed." Also it involved less than 10 per cent of the employees of the railroads.

HOME BUILDER IS NATION BACKBONE

Farmer Has Suffered More Than Any Other Class As Result of Readjustment Period.

(By Associated Press) ASHLAND, Ia., Feb. 2.—The United States was settled not by conquest, but by the home builder. The pioneer with his young wife, his gun, his axe and his dog, went into the wilderness to build a home. The farm came later as the settlement developed into a community. This country is the heart and soul of America today, Louis Eugene Davenport, of the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois, told the gathering of the Farmers' Week at Iowa State College here today.

"The development of country life in America has been a slow and in many respects a complicated matter," Davenport said. "The old-time three months winter school has developed into the modern comprehensive high school, and in many instances the farmer's sons and daughters can prepare for college while sleeping every night under the father's ead."

"The religious life of the country has not equally developed. In many respects we have gone backward as compared with the early days, and there is no feature of farm life that needs more earnest attention than the development of the country church."

"In the meantime, it is more difficult than ever to secure a home upon the land. For those who are fortunate enough to inherit a goodly property, the farm and the home come together. For those who begin with their hands and undertake to purchase the problem is a serious one. As for the tenant, he may secure a farm by paying cash in crop rent, but he cannot have a real home until he owns it."

Swedish Physicians Given Protection in Matter of Testimony

(By Associated Press) STOCKHOLM, Feb. 2.—Sweden in Sweden, the Union of America cannot be compelled to testify in any court against their will in medical cases where they have been professionally examined, under a law passed here by the Lower House of Assembly of Stockholm. The court has just ordered a physician to testify in 1921 this has been the practice in Sweden.

The case which evoked this ruling pitted the Swedish physician on a par with the American doctor, against the court in Stockholm, and in the court while it was being fought in the two courts and was closely watched by lawyers as well as physicians.

Although the case may yet be appealed to the Supreme Court the result of such action has been given.
