BOY SCOUTS TO CELEBRATE 12TH BIRTHDAY HERE

Great Banquet of Fathers and Sons Tonight at H. S. Gym.

Prominent Speakers Will Deliver Addresses to 400 or More at High School Gym This Evening.

Twelve years ago tonight at 8 o'clock the first Boy Scout Council was incorporated. Tonight at the high school gymnasium, at 7:15, in celebration of the twelfth anniversary of the youth movement, approximately 400 fathers and sons will be seated about the round board to eat, chat, swap stories and listen to inspiring talks on Scout topics.

THE SCOUT OATH

Boy Scout Anniversary

This is the Twelfth Birthday of the Boy Scouts of America, Incorporated February 8th, 1910; Chartered by Congress, June 15th, 1916. 523,000 boys and men are today enrolled as members. More than 2,000,000 boys have been committed to the following obligation during the last twelve years:

On my honor I will do my best—
1. To do my duty to God and my country, and to obey
the Scout Law.
2. To help other people at all times.
3. To keep myself physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight.

THE SCOUT LAW

1. A SCOUT IS TRUSTWORTHY. A SCOUT means to be trusted. If he were to violate his honor by telling a lie, or by cheating or by not doing exactly a given task when trusted on his honor, he may be directed to have over his Scout badge.

2. A SCOUT IS LOYAL. He is loyal to all who are worthy of one, his Scout leader, his home, and parents and friends.

3. A SCOUT IS HELPFUL. He must be prepared at any time to save life, help injured persons, and share his food, clothes. He must do at least one good turn to somebody every day.

4. A SCOUT IS FRIENDLY. He is a friend to all, and is brother to every other Scout.

5. A SCOUT IS COURAGEOUS. He is polite to all, especially to women, children, old people, and the weak and helpless. He must not take pay for helping, helpful or courteous.

6. A SCOUT IS KIND. He is a friend to animals. He will not kill any living creature needlessly, but will strive to save and protect all harmless life.

7. A SCOUT IS OBEDIENT. He obeys his parents, Scoutmaster, patrol leader, and all other duly constituted authorities.

8. A SCOUT IS CHEERFUL. He smiles whenever he can. He abides by orders in prompt and cheery. He never shows fear or shrinking at hardships.

9. A SCOUT IS THRIFTY. He does not wantonly destroy property. He works faithfully, wastes nothing, and makes the best use of his opportunities. He leaves his money to last, he only pays his own way, is generous to those in need, and helpful to worthy causes. He may work for pay, but must not receive tips for services or good turns.

10. A SCOUT IS BRAVE. He has the courage to face danger in spite of fear, and to stand up for the right against the chicanery of friends or the fears or threats of enemies; defeat does not drown him.

11. A SCOUT IS CLEAN. He keeps clean in body and thought, speaking clean speech, clean sport, clean habits, and travels with a clean crowd.

12. A SCOUT IS REVERENT. He is reverent toward God. He is faithful in his religious duties and respects the convictions of others in matters of custom and religion.

In the educational system of the country, the educational value of the Boy Scout ideal were not so clearly seen earlier, according to them as to day. The effect of training upon the school work of boy has called the attention of school men very definitely to what the Boy Scouts of America is doing. Because troops have been organized in many schools, and because so many boy pupils are scouts, the teachers have been able to evaluate the effect of scout training upon classroom work. The result of the whole thing is that the schools and the Boy Scout movement are coming together for mutual cooperation.

The trend is toward cooperation and not assimilation. It does not appear to be the desire of a Scout master that the movement can become a part of the school system, but that it can supplement school work, make it more interesting, and, accordingly, should receive the utmost assistance from school authorities, including active participation by more teachers, by principals and superintendents in the activities of the movement.

COUNCIL OF YOUTH

What is long supposed to have been a mythical fountain of youth was discovered to be a reality twelve years ago. Said Harry Gittert, Elmer, Chairman of Commerce, the ideal and similar business men, have lately discovered it for themselves. This fountain of youth is service to boy.

APPLETON SUICIDE UNIDENTIFIED BUT MAY BE ESCANABAN EARLY HOUR TODAY

Takes His Life Last Sunday and Local Police Asked to Go-operate in Securing Information.

Who is this man? Local police received information last Sunday night to the effect that a stranger had committed suicide in Appleton, Wis. The only mark on the dead man were the initials H. E. E., saved inside his coat, the suit apparently having been tailored and a cap which bore the Fair Haven Tailor store's name.

The police did not state what manner of suicide had been chosen by the dead man, who wore the Fair Haven cap which was a brown and black checked suit. He was about 40 years of age, ave 160 eight inches in height and weighed about 170 pounds.

There was a powder mark on the suit, which apparently had been here for some years, and on the left side of the coat was a faint red stain. The teacher said that the suit had been abandoned by the tailor, which had been picked up in a second-hand store.

The teacher did not state what manner of suicide had been chosen by the dead man, who wore the Fair Haven cap which was a brown and black checked suit. He was about 40 years of age, ave 160 eight inches in height and weighed about 170 pounds.

One man said he knew a man who had lived at McFarland's Hill who partially answered that description and the place where the writer had been picked up some months containing members of the crew of the Northern Pacific.

The Northern Pacific was built in 1915 by the William Cramp & Sons Co. The ship was to be rebuilt by the Sun Ship Building company and was to be renamed H. B. Aldredge. It will be sold. ## AS TO SHERIFFS

The province of Ontario, according to a dispatch from Toronto, is thinking of abolishing the office of sheriff because its duties have been so far reduced that a sheriff has little to do except to appear in a crowded bar and open court at the beginning of a term. There was a time when a sheriff was a personage of great dignity and importance.

He was appointed by the king and was custodian of all of the public property in his county. He represented the king in military affairs, collected taxes, held court and ran things generally. Great men inspired in the office which became hereditary and was surrounded by no end of power.

The tradition persists in England, though the power is greatly curtailed. In Ontario the sheriff has appears to be about all that is left. While the United States, going its own way, has evolved a new type of sheriff, which in the opinion of many thoughtful people is not altogether desirable.

The American sheriff is, however, still the representative of central authority. He represents the law of the state but he is elected locally and generally knows more about politics than about law or criminology. As a result of the system there are records where sheriffs have been suspected of enforcing laws where enforcement seemed politically expedient while they forgot about other laws. The anti-lynching law which passed the lower house of congress might not have been necessary if there were fewer southern sheriffs who think that law enforcement is a local matter.

Various devices have been tried to meet the difficulty. In some states counties have been made financially liable when their officers have failed to control mob violence. Others have provided state police to take the place of the sheriff and his deputies in dealing with crime. Neither plan has worked to entire satisfaction, and the field is still open to debate, but it is certain that sheriffs in this country, with all of their faults, are much too important to be abolished.

VOLIVA AND ARISTARCHUS

A calm and reasonable discussion of cosmology between Willard Glenn Voliva, of Zion City, and Aristarchus of ancient Greece would be an interesting thing to listen to but since the death of John Hendrick Bings it might be difficult to bring them together.

Aristarchus, who lived two or three hundred years before the Christian era, entirely abandoned the old notion that the heavenly bodies are fastened to a sort of revolving sphere which carries them around from east to west. The great philosopher of Zion City has revised that theory, modified it so that what any says is true. The stars and the sun are thoughts, arising from the heavenly vault like shuttles from a loom, and the sky, coming down all around the earth like a bell, keeps people from falling off, or would if they ever got that far.

It would be tedious to speculate on how the discussion would proceed between the father of Greek astronomy and the overseer from Illinois but if Brother Voliva should find him self hard pressed in argument, the United States Bureau of ethnology could put him in touch with some eminent authorities who support his view. Among many of the tribes of American Indians there are circumstantial accounts of how their ancestors paddled down their canoes to the place where the sky comes down, and having arrived there, crawled under the edge of it and climbed up to the top. It is also their belief, not historically verified—that these same ancestors were turned into the sun and the moon and that they have been paddling their way across the sky at regular intervals ever since.

There are those who will find by Aristarchus, Ptolemy, Copernicus, Kepler and Newton rather than to string along with Rain in the Face but it cannot be denied that Mr. Voliva is not alone in his views.

WHERE HASTE WILL BE WASTE

The London Times in a pessimistic editorial discussion of the projected Genoa conference, after pointing out the difficulties created by the aloofness of the United States and France, speaks of the apparent disposition to hurry things through one gathering materializes, and asks whether anything can be done to settle the complex European difficulties by a "hasty conference of busy premiers." It adds: "It is assumed and the meetings will last a fortnight. What can be done in a fortnight except to bring to the surface all the bitter controversies of Europe?"

Judging from the time necessarily consumed in bringing the Washington conference at Genoa likely to accomplish, perhaps results might last two months rather than two weeks, and it is quite certain any hurried meeting can at the best be expected to be hasty.

When the Genoa conference becomes a reality, it is to be hoped the government in Washington will be worse than wasting its time in sending a delegation, unless there is assurance that all the governments will give the matter to be discussed their best attention for as long a period as may be possible. Meanwhile the administration is wise in insisting that its decks be cleared of all the questions and aftermath of the Washington conference before it goes into any new deliberations.

Senator Borah now announces that Woodrow Wilson went to Paris with a peace program based upon principles that were altogether commendable. In his effort to be "right" the government whatever it is, Brother Borah certainly does say strange things.

In case the singers of the Chicago opera company seriously object to postural government, Mary Garden can easily overcome the trouble of wearing knickers during business hours.

There is a growing feeling in this country that before the Genoa conference is called it would be a good idea to assume some of the results of a few conferences already held.

Daily Fashion Hint

Behavior is a mirror in which every one displays his image.—Goethe.

THE housing problem is a bigger one now than it has ever been before in this country. There fore a good many of us either buying or building houses and we are coming up against unaccustomed problems.

The first thing to remember, whether you buy a house from a total stranger or from your next-door neighbor, is that the transaction is purely one of business. It should be carried on in an absolutely businesslike way. Just because you know the man you are buying the house from is no reason why you should not have everything about it put down in the legal form. And just because the man who is buying the house from you is a friend of yours is no reason why you should feel any offense because he wants to be purely businesslike about the transaction.

On the other hand, the well-bred buyer or seller of a house tries always to do the courteous thing. If you are selling a house and know that it would be a great convenience to those who buy it to take possession a few days ahead of the specified time, let them do it if you can manage to.

Remember when you sell a house that the gardener goes with it. If you want to transplant any of your favorite flowers after the house is sold it is the courteous thing to ask permission of the persons you have sold it to. And remember that once the deed is signed everything about the house belongs not to you. Who have sold it even though you are still living in it, but to the person who has bought it. And although you are entitled to live in it until the date agreed upon, you are not entitled to take anything away from it that goes with the house.

When you buy a new home it is reasonable that your friends will want to see it. The best way is to add an open house and to make arrangements for it to be open to a few visitors. It is better to specify a given date when you will be at home in the new house. It is even sometimes a good plan to give an informal tour of your home to welcome your friends to your new home and thus to give them a chance to see it.

The London Plane Tree

Citizens of London have reason to be grateful to the plane tree which measures four feet more than any other English tree. It is called the London plane.

With lofty dignified bearing it pleases all. It stands amidst the parks and squares, cheering sight to many hurrying workers. Sometimes it is stunted when left free to expand it becomes one of the most trees in the country.

So near as London, as is described by Mrs. George Collier, who knew little of the beauties of nature in the country, are familiar with the London plane.

It is such a sturdy tree that it comes over in many strange corners of the world. It is strange to think that its origin is unknown. It is pleasant to know that it came to London as an import from the great family of trees and in return for the sanctuary afforded has given the great city of its best.

Ireland's "Mayflower"

Students of Anglo-American history have directed attention to the fact that Ireland also had her Mayflower.

This was the "Fayre" which, no later than 1630, set sail with a full passenger list of Ulster men for the American colonies.

There were forty passengers among whom were four ministers. In 1630 began at once, for unpropitious winds drove the vessel to the British coast. A leak then filled the ship in the "Keye of Rye."

Starting again, she achieved mid-Atlantic, but then a hurricane did much damage and caused such general disarray that finally the Irish pilgrims made up their minds that Providence was frowning on their emigration and turned their vessel back to Ireland.
