FOURTH OF THE NATION SAVING
MONEY, IS SAID

American Bankers Association
Shows the American People Have Saved Sum of $17,300,000,000.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 25.—Twenty-six million Americans, nearly one-fourth of the nation's population, have savings accounts by state and national banks, Samuel H. Beach of Rome, N. Y., president of the Savings Bank Division of the American Bankers' Association, revealed here today at the fifty-ninth annual convention of that organization. Their accounts total $17,300,000,000, Mr. Beach said. "For purpose of comparison," he added, "we have compiled similar statistics for 1912, the earliest year for which we can obtain comparable data, and find that the aggregate was only about half as much then as in 1922, or only $8,433,000,000. Even more remarkable are the increases of savings deposits in the various classes of banks during the decade between 1912 and 1922. National banks gained 228 per cent, state banks and trust companies, 128 per cent and mutual savings banks fifty-eight per cent. "The statement that mutual savings banks gained only fifty-eight per cent does not indicate that they are losing ground, because there are mutual savings banks in only eighteen states and there were just as many in 1912 as there are now. "Two million students in schools now are participating in school banking systems. This is a thirty-four per cent increase over last year. The deposits of the students total $9,618,000, as compared with $5,775,000 in 1922 and $2,800,000 in 1921. "This gratifying increase of nearly 340 per cent in three years is indicative of real effort on the part of savings banks throughout the nation and should be sufficient evidence that this fertile field soon will be fully covered, to deter the Postoffice department from seeking to enter it, with all the expense and detail connected therewith which no government bureau is properly equipped to cope."

If Kidneys Act
Bad Take Salts

Says Backache Often Means You
Have Not Been Drinking
Enough Water

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it may mean you have been eating foods which create acids, says a well-known authority. An excess of such acids overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sour, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the system, so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness. Jad Salts is inexpensive, can not injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink. Drink lots of soft water. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

The average height of the boys enlisted in the United States for the World war was 67.49 inches, and the average weight was 141.54 pounds.

Horses Still in Game, States Hay Dealer

JACKSON, Mich., Sept. 25.—Dobbin is staging a comeback. The old gray mare may not be what she used to be, but she is far from taking the count.
W. A. Bunting, whose business is hay, is authority for the above statements. The hay business, which Mr. Bunting considers about as good a barometer on horses as there is, has increased during the past year in every part of the country. An exhaustive study of statistics covering horses, he says, has revealed that close to twenty million horses are in active competition with the motor truck in America today. In many places, he avers, the horse is supplementing the truck for the short haul.
Depreciation of horseflesh is far less than that of the motor truck, according to Mr. Bunting. A motor car, he asserts, depreciates greatly after even short use, while a team of horses after years of faithful service, may be disposed of at a loss that is seldom 50 per cent of the first cost.
Hay and veterinary bills, Mr. Bunting believes, are cheaper than gasoline and garage charges, and the upkeep of the horse is therefore considerably lower than that of the motor truck.

LLOYD GEORGE AND EUROPE.
If David Lloyd George were not recounting an evident truth, the world might smile as it reads his statements that "up to 1923 each year after the end of the great war showed a distinct improvement over its predecessor, but the present year has been one of growing gloom and menace; the international temper is distinctly worse all around."

For Lloyd George is saying between the lines that Europe began to go to the dogs as soon as his hand was removed; and under ordinary circumstances this might be considered rather pronounced egotism to say the least. With the Welshman, however, the situation is different. He has justification in the circumstance that he is doing no more than recite fact, and there is small opening for any jibe at him.

If Lloyd George did not succeed in actually reconstructing Europe when he was head of the British government and the leading figure among the Allies, he at least was able to keep things in check, while aerionomics and difficulties were gradually diminishing. Above all he effectually prevented France from running wild. To this France testified itself, when it indulged in a national rejoicing over his retirement.

But the moment Lloyd George was out of the saddle, the company of Old World nations became like the tribes of Israel without a judge. Every nation, if not every man, commenced to do what was good in its own eyes, and that good has generally been bad. The result up to date is a relapse into a condition which in some ways is rather worse than the condition that existed ten years ago.

Naturally people will ask whether Lloyd George could in the end have prevented this if he had remained in power. It is by no means clear that he could, but on the other hand, nobody can affirm that he could not, and at least he remains the only person who ever has been able to do anything constructive in post-war Europe.

THE PRESIDENT AND CONGRESS

President Coolidge is undertaking a difficult job when he starts out to persuade the various groups, clubs and factions among the Republicans in congress to work with him in framing the administration program for the coming session of the national legislature. Success will require the use of a great deal of tact and wisdom, and the possession of almost infinite patience and nerve. To put over such a project, the President also will have to keep himself in a position of controlling leadership.

But if the task of Mr. Coolidge has cut out for himself is a tough one, it also is a shrewd, common sense one. Not only the members of the Republican party, but all the people of the United States who do not place party above patriotism ought to wish him well, because success will result in constructive legislation that otherwise it will be extremely difficult to obtain and that will redound to the good of the country.

Even if the President fails, some good may come out of his effort. By taking the initiative and putting it squarely up to the members of the various factions to come out into the open and say whether they are willing to work harmoniously as party men and as Americans who think of something besides their own clique and personal interests, he will place the burden of responsibility where it belongs in case his endeavors are ignored. This will be valuable information for the voters.

NOT WASHINGTON'S BUSINESS AT PRESENT

In the midst of the turmoil in Oklahoma one excited member of congress is asking the secretary of war to stop the use of troops by the governor, and private citizens have appealed to the President for help.

Nobody in Washington has the right to order state troops back home when the governor orders them out, for state troops are under national control only when they are in the national service, nor has the President any right to intervene by any other method in the existing situation.

The constitution leaves the states to control their own affairs subject to very little restraint. Congress can call out troops to suppress insurrection but there is no direct insurrection against the United States in Oklahoma. It is also true that the President could send troops to the state for the purpose of upholding local authority, but only upon the invitation of the state legislature or of the governor, when the legislature is not in session.

Thus far in his struggle against the "invisible empire" Governor Walton has not used nearly all of the soldiers directly under his command and it is extremely unlikely that he would ask or that the President would grant the aid of the regular army in such circumstances.

WOOD STANDS ON HIS RECORD

By unanimous vote of both houses of the Philippine legislature the recall of Governor General Wood is demanded. But those familiar with the situation place entire responsibility on the president of the senate and the speaker of the house, both of whom are ambitious for power and wish to have a governor general more susceptible to their influence. Gen. Wood's record in the army, as governor general of Cuba, and as a military commander in the Philippines has won the confidence of Americans. They are not likely to be led astray by Filipinos who seek to exploit the islands in their own way free from American restrictions.

The scientists having decided that mankind gets bald because it neglects carrots, cabbage, tomatoes et cetera, perhaps somebody will now explain why the Esquimos are able to raise such tolerable heads of hair.

If things keep on as they are going, maybe the national guarantee of a republican form of government to every state will have to be applied in Oklahoma.

Children Educated Enjoy All While Own Life

Where would you rather have your children grow up—in a crowded city, stifling in summer, cold in winter, with no place to play but on the streets, or would you rather have them virtuous in a country, but with all the advantages of the city?
Take the condition of the child of the soft coal miner. The so-called "mining camps" have to be built where the coal lies in the ground, and the communities which have grown up are, for the most part, removed from cities or towns of any considerable size.
Coal operators have realized that much more than the bare necessities of life must be provided to make the miner and his family contented and happy. Opportunities must be afforded for amusement and recreation. The happiness and health of the people of the mining communities must be safeguarded.
The children of the miners' families are, of course, a first concern with the companies as well as the parents. After modern houses at low rents and with modern improvements built by the companies, the first concern is for proper schooling and playground facilities for the younger generation.

Garland W. Powell, director of the Legion's national Americanism commission, has suggested a general program. Observances will start at 10:30 a. m. with the invocation followed by music. Then the post commander or presiding officer will deliver an address. At eleven a. m. the hour when the guns stopped firing on the western front, the gavel of the presiding officer will fall and all will stand with bowed heads while a silent prayer is offered for those who made the supreme sacrifice. At the end of thirty seconds the gavel will fall again and the program will be resumed.

BURTON SAYS BACKBONE IS WHAT MAKES PEOPLE ERECT AT OPENING OF THE U. OF M.

Tells the Students That "Spine" Is Thing That Counts.

President Addressed a Large Number at Opening Convocation of Great School in Ann Arbor.

(By the Associated Press)

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Sept. 25.—Civility depends upon backbone, and the business world would collapse in a day if men of affairs lacked this quality, President Harmon Leroy Burton asserted at the opening convocation at the University of Michigan last night. He condemned the "rigid demand for conformity" and called upon students to distinguish between essentials and non-essentials, and to "cease the worship of being alike."

"Backbone makes a person stand erect intellectually and morally," President Burton said. "It is not a simple agreement with whatever another person may assert. It is not servile obedience to the demands of mere popularity. It is rather a ready willingness, courteously but firmly, to defend one's real convictions and to oppose public sentiment of real moment when it is wrong. It requires decision of character. It not only calls for ideas and judgments, but it enables one to act upon them."

"Spine gives a positive note to an individual. Most persons can be classed as negative, neutral or positive. The person of spine makes it positively clear where he stands. Moreover, he has stability. You know he will be where he was unless positively good and unusually new reasons for changing his attitude have appeared. You do not have to begin all over with him every time you see him. Rather, you can go right on from where you left off. He stays put."

"In the last analysis, spine means that a person is actually doing what he knows he ought to do. It is character. Knowledge is absolutely primary in life, but most of our troubles today have arisen not because men do not know what they ought to do, but because they fail to act in accordance with their knowledge."

The most casual observer knows that civilization depends on spine. The business world would collapse in a day if men of affairs lacked this quality. Public life everywhere responds instantly to the central who shows he has spine. International affairs today are staggering illustrations of the truth with which we are dealing. Just so, student life in the long run will depend on you, rapidly. In your individual concerns, in the larger interests of campus affairs, and in the life long influence generated here, you will find that that stout, unshakable character, requiring courage and backbone is the same quality of worth and satisfying life."

President Burton then proceeded to point out that many forces, both natural and artificial, make for curvature of the spine, and that particularly in student days corrective measures are available when it utilized will enable a student to merge erect, virile and dependable. He concluded with a discussion of the inherent quality under discussion. He emphasized that real spine means full visibility. He condemned the "rigid demands for conformity" and called upon students to distinguish between essentials and non-essentials, to "cease from the worship of being alike," and to set out to utilize, to the fullest extent their individual abilities. He asserted that individual, institutional and national greatness depend upon the fullest realization of the talents and resources of each person.

UNIVERSITY AT ANN ARBOR NOW STARTING YEAR

Much Detail and Work Getting 40,000 Class Assignments on the Card Index of School.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Sept. 25.—Students at the University of Michigan began the school year today. Books were opened, pencils were sharpened and classwork began.

For more than a week, past, that part of Ann Arbor directly connected with the university has been awakening to the beginning of school work. The first indication that the students were returning was the appearance of prospective freshmen seeking those jobs that had not been curialed by upper classesmen before they left for home last June.

The business of the first year men was followed by the appearance of candidates for the football team. Then followed the representatives of the various fraternities and societies engaged with the duty of opening the houses and doing as much toward welcoming freshmen as the rules allow.

Enrollment has been continuing for the week and the large entry registration has given the registrar and his assistants time to get class entries checked and sent to the different heads of departments, to be passed on to the various instructors. It has been no easy task, officers of the registrar's department say, to handle 40,000 or more class assignments.

Entering the University of Michigan is much more than merely putting down the subjects of study and visiting the university cashier, now, however, have discovered. First, the prospective student had to get a certificate from the registrar, or in some cases a 6-7th, showing that he has the right to matriculate in the university. This certificate obtained, the student selects his studies in the usual way, the filling in of the necessary blanks calling for extensive work in penmanship.

Following this, the individual is taken in hand by the health department. The experience there is similar to that of two million young Americans, inducted into the army in 1917-18. Hearing, sight, teeth, heart and lungs are tested, while doctors of posture and muscular development are noted. Each student entering the university must take his physical test, the university treasurer refusing to accept money for registration until it is accompanied by a health certificate.

Few of the students who enrolled the first day remained in Ann Arbor throughout the week. Percentages estimated at from 75 to 90 made the trip by automobile, and with the business of enrollment ended, made the return trip without delay. On the first day especially, parking space was at a premium at any point near Waterman or Harbour gymnasiums, where 125 literary students completed their matriculation. At one time the automobile congestion was so great that local police were called upon to assist them in keeping North University avenue open.

With class work starting today, the school year gets started in earnest, to continue, with the exception of Thanksgiving Day, until the Christmas holidays which begin December 11.

FRAUDULENT LAND AGENTS FACE "BLUE SKY" LAW

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 25.—Prosecution of persons who misrepresent farm land values in California was promised by Edwin T. Keiser, state real estate commissioner upon his return here after a recent tour of the state.

"There is no such good land that there is no occasion to sell poor land," Mr. Keiser declared. "After a careful survey of the land situation I found that there is a wealth of splendid land in this state, more than enough to meet the requirements of the people for many years."

"There is no excuse for the malpractice of buying up worthless land for a few dollars an acre and exploiting it as having agricultural or other value. After my survey I am more determined than ever to prosecute any misrepresentation of real estate."

DEEP WATERWAY OPPONENTS HEARD

Heavy Cost to State Is Chief Reason for Opposition.

NEW YORK.—The Merchants' Association's committee on inland waterways and water storage gave a hearing to representatives of the New York state commission in opposition to the St. Lawrence ship canal and power project. Clarence R. A. C. Smith presided.

Murry Hulbert, acting mayor; Henry W. Hill of Buffalo, formerly state senator; Peter C. Teneyck of Albany, formerly representative, and E. H. Outerbridge, chairman of the port authority of New York, spoke in opposition to the project before a careful engineering study of costs had been made. All disclaimed any fear that the St. Lawrence ship canal would injuriously affect traffic on the waterways of New York state or divert commerce from New York harbor.

They based their opposition on the ground that New York state would be called upon to pay 25 per cent of the cost of the project, of which New York City would contribute more than one-half. They insisted that careful estimates as to costs should be made before the project was undertaken.

"Lefty" Brown Has Altmock's Manners

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Sept. 25.—"Lefty" Brown, the eccentric pitcher of the local Mint League club during the past season, is called the "Nick Altmock of the minors" by patrons of the club. "Lefty" uses many of the same antics Altmock has found so popular with American League fans, and he pulled several original acts during the season. At one time during the season "Lefty" engaged a money man as a "property" one of his pranks, but the money man failed to appear, so the club improvised a program that kept the crowd in laughter most of the afternoon. Baseball billboards, a fishing net and a ring around the tray were some of the amusing antics that made "Lefty" popular around the circuit.

Refreshments will be served and plans made for future social gatherings.

Says Enemy Getting Money for Influence

(Continued from Page One) you fail. You know Mr. Z has money enough to buy all the courts if necessary and he will beat your friend Y out."

"When I insisted I knew nothing, they dragged me out of the car and threw me down on a blanket or robe, and the woman helped the men cut my hair."

"They finally took me back to Tulsa and told me to get on the train, and not look back. On the train, a man followed me to a seat in the rear of the car and unfolded a newspaper. Whenever we came to a station, he made me pull down the shade. At Okmulgee he told me to get out. I don't know if he got out or not. I was so frightened and dazed. There I was pushed into a small car driven by a man alone in the front seat and with two men in the rear seat."

"Out in the country they again insisted I had to tell what I knew about the business of Mr. Y and Mr. Z and I told them honestly I knew nothing about it."

Tells of Attack. Then she related revolting details of an attack upon her, after which ## he again was placed in the car.

"Finally, one of the men said, 'I will make her talk.' He took a bottle from his pocket, and began putting the cork in my limbs and body. Soon it began to burn and hurt me and they said, 'We will take her up to that house and keep her until she does talk.' By that time I was afraid I would be killed, and the man in the front seat kept telling them they should not go so far. At last we got back to Okmulgee. My clothing had been cut and torn and I was very weak. A policeman took me to the station, where I told the chief what had happened. He called the wife of a hotel keeper and she took me to the hotel and called a doctor. Next day I got back to Tulsa and was ill in bed for about a week.

Gave False Statement.

I reported to the county attorney that he gave out a statement that I was not badly burned and it was printed in the papers. Finally, I was able to go to Cushing Springs. There this Mr. Z met me on the street and I showed him my ruin and said, 'I will blow your brains out right here on the street if you do not go away and let me alone.' Then other people tried to talk to me and assure me Mr. Z was my friend and had nothing to do with it.

"At 3 o'clock one morning, the clerk called me and told me I would have to leave the hotel, for they would not have women entertaining men in their rooms. I proved there was no man there, but one had told the clerk he was coming up to my room. I finally ordered that no telephone calls or visitors be received until their identity had been ascertained.

Story Verified.

"Finally, I started home and in Kansas City became so ill I had to have a nurse. A physician finally told me, 'You have carbolic acid poisoning. How did you get it?' I told him I had been burned accidentally. But under his treatment I was able to return home."

The report of the military committee reveals that woman attaches of the commission verified Mrs. X's statements as to the burns and that her story was verified by the Okmulgee hotel owners, the police chief and a police matron.
