

Just Between Ourselves

PASSING OF THE ANTELOPE.

Men who were boys 25 years ago and reveled in reading the hunting and trapping stories of the Far West, most of which were based on wild life conditions as they existed a score of years ago, will suffer a twinge of pain to learn that the American antelope, or "pronghorn," is all but doomed.

It is estimated that there are not more than 3,000 antelopes in the United States. One of the best protected herds is that in the Yellowstone National Park and it numbers only 350. It may be seen how a series of hard winters, forest fires or an increase in such animals as coyote and the wolf might reduce the existing herds to but a remnant of the small number now remaining. It would seem, therefore, that the antelope has joined the bison, the grizzly bear and the wild pigeon, and that in the not far distant future the "pronghorn" will be but a memory.

Wild life authorities cite several probable causes for the rapid disappearance of the antelope. The animal is among the most nervous of the wild herds. It is truly American in many ways. Like the human species which inhabits this land it is inclined to worry. Frightened from its pasture by tourist, fire, or some wild animal, it is slow to return. An increase in settlers in the mountain valleys has eliminated many of the natural pastures, and it is believed that most of the herds pass out through starvation.

GERMAN CUPIDITY.

Germany's finance minister estimates the German national wealth today at forty billion dollars. At the outbreak of the war it was one hundred billion. If Finance Minister Luther is dealing in facts as well as figures, Germany should not have to seek further than her shrunken national wealth for a lasting lesson in peace. National wealth is computed on the basis of natural resources, industrial and commercial wealth and tangible property. Sixty per cent of her national wealth! What a price to pay for ambition and nationalism!

But it seems incredible that Germany could have consumed sixty per cent of her national wealth during the four years of the World war, so the figures of Germany's minister of finance may bear examination. In 1920 the London Bankers' Institute estimated Germany's national wealth as eighty-three billions. That figure probably approaches nearest the truth. Germany's war cost would still be stupendous and the peace lesson unmitigated.

However, if the Luther figures are based on fact and German wealth has actually shriveled by more than half, there emerges a formidable indictment of the German reparations policy. Granting that her war losses were thirty billions, it would mean that since the armistice the Germans have dissipated thirty billions of their national wealth. Her total reparations assessment was only thirty-three billions. It can reasonably be asked if Germany has been wilfully wasting her national wealth at the rate of five billions annually to avoid payment of her reparations?

Perhaps it is well for Germany and for her recent enemies that the reparations commission through the General Dawes committee is at last devoting all its energy to the reparations issue and Germany's economic ability to pay.

LIFTING, NOT SHIFTING.

A prominent business man asserts that every official who advocates high taxes should be driven into private life.

The trouble is that officials pretend to be for low taxes for the "masses" but for high taxes for the "rich," with the result that taxes stay up and eventually all the people bear a share of the burden.

What the country wants and needs is not a shifting but a lifting of taxes. The tax shifter is a plain fraud. Wilmington, Del., Journal.

AND THIS IS POLITICS!

The soldiers' bonus bill passed the House of Representatives in the record time of 40 minutes. It requires government expenditures variously estimated at from two billion to four billion dollars.

THE COST OF PLAYING POLITICS.

Ask yourself these simple questions: How much will I be overcharged in taxes this year if the politicians in Congress succeed in blocking the Mellon tax reduction program? How much will the failure to top $500,000,000 of the federal income tax bill cost me in increased prices for everything I eat, wear or use? Who is responsible for causing me this loss?

DECEIVE PUBLIC IN OIL LEASES WALSH CHARGES

Says No One Knows Yet What Teapot Dome Is Going to Bring Government.

Democratic Senator Hints that Very Low Royalties Were Accepted in Many Oil Leases.

WASHINGTON, April 21.—The campaign to deceive the public as to the royalties from leases in naval reserves under republican regime as compared with leases made prior to March 4th, 1921, was charged in the senate today by Senator Walsh, democrat, of Montana, and the prosecutor for the oil committee.

He cited as such an example of such a campaign a recent speech by L. M. Shaw, secretary of the treasury under Roosevelt. "In order that this argument may not be further imposed on the public," Senator Walsh proceeded to analyze the various leases and their return to the government. He drew the conclusion that the majority of the leases on a sliding scale of from 16 to 45 per cent, adding that "no one can tell what the average will be in the Teapot Dome lease until test wells have been sunk about the property."

HOSPITAL AFIRE, VAGRANTS SAVE PATIENTS' LIVES

LAGRANGE, Ill., April 21.—Twelve ragged hoboes, arrested by city authorities as vagrants and put to work on the streets, saved the lives of six patients during a fire at the LAGRANGE sanitarium yesterday.

Panic was imminent when it was found that a woman patient was missing. A negro vagrant turned and dashed back into the building, down a burning corridor to her room, and carried her to safety while spectators cheered.

"You can't keep men like that in jail," the LAGRANGE chief of police said, in freeing the twelve men, each with a $2 "bonus" in his pocket.

The premier makes no reservation in his acceptance but points out that the French government supposes it is understood that all the details involving realization of the guarantee, the experts proposed, will be effected before the allies are called on to give up the pledges they now hold.

Uses Board to Batter Man Into Insensibility

IRON MOUNTAIN, Mich.—A man described as a Lithuanian of medium build Saturday night assaulted and battered into insensibility Charles S. Carlson, about 40 years old. The attack occurred in the darkness of an alley.

After breaking a board about 16 inches wide and 1 inch thick over his victim's head, the assailant cut Carlson's face horribly with the jagged end of his weapon. He was removed to the general hospital where 21 stitches were taken in his face and head. He will recover.

The cause of the attack is not known. It is believed, however, that it began with a drunken brawl, rather than attempted robbery.

Ford Truck Wins In Battle With a Ford Touring Car

Just the same as a little extra weight will give a prize fighter a chance to win, so does the average Ford truck have an edge on a Ford touring car, when the two of them traveling at about the same rate of speed, and want to pass each other without the formality of turning out.

Yesterday afternoon a truck and a touring car going in opposite directions demonstrated this on Fourteenth street. The police say the little touring car made a gallant fight, but the weight of the truck was against it, but even at that the truck backed away with a badly smashed radiator and lights. The drivers of both cars were not injured.

DEATH OF DUSE, FAMOUS ACTRESS SADDENS WORLD

Succumbs of Severe Attack of Influenza in Pittsburgh.

For Many Years She Held a High Place Upon the Dramatic Stage; Had Never Used "Make-up."

PITTSBURGH, Pa., April 21.—Mme. Eleanora Duse died at 2:30 o'clock this morning at the hotel here where she has been confined for two weeks with an attack of influenza.

Eleanora Duse, famous Italian tragedienne, emerged from fifteen years' retirement as an actress at Turin, Italy, on May 6, 1921, by appearing in Ibsen's "Lady of the Sea." Her appearance in public was the signal for an enthusiastic greeting from a distinguished audience which showered her with roses amid frantic cheers for Italy. "La Duse," as she was popularly known, and for Gabriel d'Annunzio, former post-dictator of Fiume, who wrote several plays for her. The two were friends for many years until estranged by a quarrel in which all Italy took a sympathetic interest.

Mme. Duse's father and grandfather were Italian actors. Her grandfather Luigi Duse, established the Garibaldi theatre at Padua. She first appeared when 12 years old in minor parts with strolling players. She was born in a woman on October 3, 1859, at Vercano, Pavia, a village on the outskirts of Venice. By the time she had reached the age of 20 she had won recognition in Naples as an actress of great power. Her successes called her to Rome in the early 80's, to Paris in 1885, to Vienna and Berlin in 1892 and London and New York in 1893. In 1887 she had married an actor of the company of which she was at the time a member, a Signor Cecchi, from whom she separated some years later in South America, when her husband abandoned the stage to become Consul-General to Argentina. The actress later resumed her maiden name.

Self-restraint was said to have been her chief characteristic, learned by years of toil and deprivation, but when her lines demanded it she rose to great dramatic heights. She had what has been described as a singular method. For years she never used a face "make-up," scornful to employ cosmetics, rouge or powder and it also has been said of her that, instead of making an artificially-prepared entry, she would mingle with the crowd on the stage and glide silently among them, all unnoticed by the audience. But when she stepped out of the ranks and spoke it was "to throw herself into her work with so much spirit and feeling as to make the play seem an actuality."

Like Richard Mansfield, Beerholm Tree and Antoine of Paris, she also was fastidiously exacting about all details of the scenery for her plays.

SENATE CLEARING WAY FOR SOLDIER BONUS MEASURE

Minority Report Is Submitted Explaining Stand for Cash Payments and Also Insurance.

WASHINGTON, April 21.—The senate driving ahead with the consideration of the soldiers' bonus bill worked only briefly today to dispose of some minor measures on the calendar. With the general agreement reached on the major position of the insurance bonus proposal, leaders expect to reach a vote within a short time.

Senator Walsh of Massachusetts, a democratic member of the finance committee, in a minority report made public last night explained the stand of the minority members of the committee for a cash and insurance bill instead of the straight insurance measure, favored by the majority.

ROB POST OFFICE, TAKE $400 CASH

General Store in Sidnaw Was Entered and Safe Rifled.

MARQUETTE.—Robbers entered the postoffice and general store in Sidnaw late Saturday night, opened the safe by working the combination and escaped with $400 in cash, most of which was postal money.

Kirkland and Lindquist, proprietors of the store, said yesterday they believed the robbery was the work of professionals and that in all probability it was done by the same persons who entered the Hulstala and Oakley stores in Conception last week and stole cash and a small amount of merchandise.

Evidence obtainable yesterday in the Sidnaw store indicated that the robbery was committed by two or more persons. It was reported that Sidnaw last night that two strange men who were seen in Sidnaw a few miles from Marquette were suspected and their arrest by Const. Hogan, sheriff of Houghton county, was expected before noon today.

The robbers ransacked the safe, sorted out its contents and took nothing except currency and silver. They left checks, papers and pennies.

Houghton, Mich.—Robbers early Sunday entered the Sidnaw post office, 1843 miles south of here and took $700 in cash. The post office is located in the Kirkland and Lindquist store. After rifling the safe which was opened by use of the combination, the burglars carried the contents to the rear of the building and escaped, leaving the stamps and

FEAR MADDENED APE INJURES A NUMBER SUNDAY

Six People Attacked and Bitten by Escaped Animal.

Great Strength of Creature Enables It to Break in Two a Heavy Table Leg; Wrecks a Home.

KANSAS CITY.—Six persons are in a hospital here suffering from severe bites and scratches by a crazed ape, following the enactment of a sequel to Poe's "Murders in the Rue Morgue," which had all the thrills of the original tale except the fatalities.

The ape was one of several kept by Dr. J. Cunningham for experimental purposes. Escaping from its cage by chewing through the wooden bars, it entered the nearby residence of T. H. Ewing.

Mr. and Mrs. Ewing returned home to find the house in wild disorder. Chairs and tables were broken and strewn about rooms. A massive table leg was broken squarely in two.

Realizing that no person of ordinary strength could have accomplished this, Ewing grabbed the broken leg and proceeded to search the house. On the kitchen floor he found half-consumed pie. Near it were the tracks of bare feet with great toes.

As Ewing gazed, stricken speechless by these strange evidences, Mrs. Ewing caught sight of the ape, and her husband attacked the beast. After a terrific battle, Ewing, aided by neighbors and two patrolmen, overpowered the animal. Both the Ewings were bitten and clawed. The crazed ape was taken to the police station where it bit and clawed its way to freedom, thus inflicting painful wounds on four policemen. Meanwhile Dr. Cunningham had been notified and he finally captured the animal.

DETECTIVE SAYS LIQUOR SEIZED WAS GIVEN AWAY

Another Man Testifies That 100 Cases Were Delivered About City.

Federal Trade Commission Chairman Says Daugherty Paid No Attention to His Cases.

WASHINGTON, April 21.—Further charges of dereliction in enforcement of the prohibition and anti-trust laws under Attorney General Daugherty were heard today by the senate Daugherty commission.

A former department of justice investigator by the name of Boucher, testified that confiscated liquor was sorted out in the department while he was employed there and the best of it kept in a safe in the office of the chief of the investigation bureau to supply officials and others.

Boucher was followed on the stand by Alonzo Bunch, who told the committee that 100 cases of whisky illegally taken from him had been hauled away and delivered to people all over town.

Called to testify regarding anti-trust cases Huston Thompson, chairman of the Federal Trade commission, said it "had been useless for the commission to turn over to Mr. Daugherty the evidence he had gathered from time to time, warranting criminal anti-trust prosecution. Until the impeachment charges were made, he said the commission could not even get replies to their letters on these subjects.

COOLIDGE SURE OF LEADING IN BIG CONVENTION

With 536 Delegates President Coolidge Need No Longer Worry.

This Is Eight Above the Majority, So It Can Be Satisfied That Coolidge Is the Party Leader.

WASHINGTON—More than a majority of delegates to the republican national convention have been instructed or pledged to vote for President Coolidge, thus assuring his re-election, it was stated at Coolidge headquarters here Sunday night.

William M. Butler, Mr. Coolidge's personal manager, announced that 567 delegates have been elected who are for the president either by instruction, by endorsement or by personal preference. Only 559 are necessary to a choice.

In addition, Pennsylvania and New Jersey are to select delegates this week who will be for Mr. Coolidge. This will bring his total to 673.

Contest in Georgia

The Coolidge delegates thus far chosen by states are as follows:

Colorado	15
Connecticut	17
Florida	10
Idaho	11
Illinois	29
Iowa	29
Kansas (2 to be elected)	21
Kentucky	26
Louisiana	12
Maine	15
Michigan	27
Minnesota	27
Mississippi	17
Missouri (12 to be elected)	26
Nebraska	19
New Hampshire	11
New Mexico	9
New York	51
North Carolina (1 to be elected)	19
North Dakota	17
Oklahoma (11 to be elected)	17
Rhode Island	11
South Carolina	11
Tennessee (15 to be elected)	17
Virginia	17
Washington	17
Wisconsin	17
Hawaii	5
Philippines	2

Georgia was omitted from the tabulation because there will be two contesting delegations from that state. Only one faction has elected those 12 delegates for President Coolidge. But until the other faction has acted no formal claim is being made.

Simultaneously with the closing of the nomination, Mr. Coolidge reached an important milestone in his campaign with his address to the publishers of the nation in New York Tuesday. This address has been prepared with great care and will serve as Mr. Coolidge's campaign keynote. Secretary Hughes, appearing before the New York state republican convention last week, delivered a defense of the administration, returns to date but refrained from outlining its future policies. This task was reserved for the president who will outline his own platform in the New York speech.

Pinchet Center of Fight

The other two events of the week from Mr. Coolidge's point of view will be the annexing of the Pennsylvania and New Jersey delegations to his convention majority.

In Pennsylvania the chief interest lies in the fight over Gov. Pinchet's candidacy for delegate at large. The attempt of the Yale organization in Pennsylvania to stir Mr. Pinchet's political grave by seeking to defeat him for delegate at large provides a touch of excitement in what would otherwise be a routine performance. Gov. Pinchet's opponents are using the Heney incident, alleging that he advised Senator Conzone to employ Francis J. Heney to conduct the senate investigation of Secretary Mellon. Mr. Pinchet indulged in an act unbecomingly friendly to Mr. Mellon, who is slated to be one of Pennsylvania's big seven at the convention.

In New Jersey, Mr. Coolidge is regarded as certain of the entire delegation despite the fact that Senator Hiram Johnson has been speaking in the state during the week. Mr. Johnson's earlier defeats in the west on primaries have discouraged his followers. He has turned his attention from the immediate question of the nomination to a general attack on the conservatism and alleged lack of control of the republican party.

FOREIGN BOXERS GET DOUGH-FARRELL

By HENRY L. FARRELL
NEW YORK, April 21, (AP)—Foreign boxers are complaining against the limitation of so many foreign fighters and the preference that is being given to the American boys. It is the point of view of these American boys, are entitled at least to an even break with their foreign counterparts, who are given the "big fight" without being forced to go through the hard school of American pugilism that is exacted of American fighters.

Eddy Kane, manager of Tom (Doc) Long, points out that since Jack (Doc) Fox has been in his weight, champions have given American boys only $75,000 for a victory. The champion and runner-up in the dollar has been paid to the tune of $100,000. Both of whom had no just right to a loss for the title.

It is said that the American boys, unless they are fighting in the United States, are not given the same consideration as the American boys. It is said that the American boys, unless they are fighting in the United States, are not given the same consideration as the American boys.

ing up, but even in that case White would have to be built up a little to overcome the feeling that he is not as good as he used to be, or that he is any good at all.

If Dempsey, as Rickard points out, would fight for any reasonable sum, he could promote a number of heavy weight championship bouts and give the American boxers a chance, not to be made just the contenders, but to want to meet Dempsey unless they are a sure thing that is out of proportion.

It is a pity that he is not the one to fight at least $25,000 before he will consider any kind of an offer, and it is possible that he will be making a million dollars before he loses or gives up on the offer.

As a rule, letters from boxing fans are mostly of little value, but this one from Jimmy Bronson is an exception.

IF SKIN BREAKS OUT AND ITCHES APPLY SULPHUR

Just the moment you apply Mentho-Sulphur to an itching, burning or broken out skin, the itching stops and healing begins, says a noted skin specialist. This sulphur preparation, made into a pleasant cold cream, gives such a quick relief, even to fiery eczema, that nothing has ever been found to take its place.

Because of its germ-destroying properties, it quickly subdues the itching, cools the irritation and heals the eczema right up, leaving a clear, smooth skin in place of ugly eruptions, rash, pimples or roughness. You do not have to wait for improvement. It quickly shows. You can get a little jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur at any drug store.

In January of 1922, The Daily Mirror first started the insurance policy plan for its readers. Propaganda said we could not pay the claims, for the policy was too cheap. More than two years have passed, but still we are paying ALL claims and the insurance company is MAKING money on the people they have insured for us in Delta county. We have a better policy now than we used the first year. More than 3,000 people in Escanaba will renew their policies this year, finding the policy had increased one hundred dollars in value. Our Thousand Dollar Accident Policy increases in values $100 each year for five years, so it pays to keep it renewed. If you have The Daily Mirror in your home, every member of your family between the ages of 16 and 70 can have a policy for $1.00 a year. The policy pays if you get hurt while riding or walking, and there are no "provisions" to make it hard for you to get your money when you need it. The DAILY MIRROR

NEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies Are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Hair that loses its color and luster, when it fades, turns gray, dull and less, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur keep her locks dark and beautiful. Thousands of women and men who use that even color, that beautiful shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe. Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which makes the hair so naturally, so evenly, that many can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray disappears; but what delights the eyes with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur compound is that, besides beautifully coloring the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and life and gives it an appearance of radiance.

The Lord of Thunder Gate

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—In a low drinking place in the Japanese town of Mitagiri, Kayama, dissolute son of the wealthy Aochi, Lord of the Thunder Gate, boasts of a girl he is to purchase (with gold stolen from his father). Following a fight in the place, a drunken white man, speaking perfect Japanese, is left unconscious. Kayama, dreading his father's anger, sees a way of escape. He changes clothes with the unconscious white man (to whom he bears a remarkable resemblance), leaving a note in the garments promising him food, shelter and money if he will impersonate him (Kayama) for a time. Leaving Kayama is robbed and slain. The white man, as Kayama, is taken unconscious to the house of Aochi. His name is Robert Wells.

CHAPTER II.—Wells (who was born and passed his childhood in Japan) awakes bewildered, but to familiar scenes in Aochi's house. Aochi, almost sightless from age, does not perceive the deception. He had determined his unworthy son should be put to death, but Wells' department leads him to think a reformation is possible. Aochi dies that day. Wells finds Kayama's note, and understands. Priests remind him of a bargain he has made, to buy a girl.

CHAPTER III.—Wells purchases a girl, to all appearances white, though the priests assure him she is Chinese blood. She tells him she is white—'all white'—and begs him to spare her.

CHAPTER IV.—The narrative goes back to Wells' youth, motherless son of a missionary in a Japanese village. His father sends the boy to his uncle in America, to be educated.

CHAPTER V.—James Sanderson, wealthy San Francisco contractor, comes the boy's benefactor. Sanderson, who he does well, but is considered "wild." Wells meets Alberta, orphan daughter of the uncle's former business partner, and is attracted to her. He really is in love with her, but she is really in love with Raymond Williams, but seeing Wells as his uncle's heir, she flirts with him, while scheming with Williams to outwit his downfall. Wells' father dies.

CHAPTER VI.—Williams and Wells are given the charge of a bridge at Fushiki, Japan, which Sanderson is building. Williams is Wells' superior. His more noble wife must "buckle down" to her "wild" out.

CHAPTER VII.—At Fushiki, Marakita, agent of Japanese reactionaries, seeks to retard the work, with the aid of discrediting foreign workers and the employment of foreign capital. He wins Williams' confidence, seeing a chance to put Wells to bed, with his uncle. Williams induces Marakita's idea for a series of entertainments which will appeal to Wells. Marakita tells Wells the idea is to persuade Marakita, and that he will so inform Sanderson. Instead of doing so, he arranges that Sanderson shall hear of a fire that burns his rival against his nephew. Believing Wells is disloyal, Sanderson orders Williams to discontinue him. Wells will not do this, explaining. He answers drives him, an outcast, across Japan.

CHAPTER VIII.—As Kayama, Wells promises the girl he has bought that he will not molest her as long as he is "Lord of the Thunder Gate," though his position prompts him to take her. Among Aochi's papers Wells finds evidence of Williams' arrangement with Marakita.

Ellen pressed nearer to Wells, and they moved onward, with the major current, which spewed away dolphins into the gully at intervals. Up the street, and over the little candle-lit bridge, into a quarter so dark that the trees seemed bits of light against the darker sky.

Wells was excited. The stir, the bustle, the happiness about him were slowly warning him; all of the Eastern sounds and scents and languorous, sensuous action.

Unaware, Ellen was pressed even nearer to him. He would feel the warmth of her arm against his. The street narrowed, moved more slowly. Once or twice it stopped altogether, and the two must stand immovable. Ellen, less able to withstand the eager crowd behind, was pushed a half-piece forward, turned, and was left pressed against Wells, her face close to his. She smiled up at him, but was rewarded with nothing more than a blank look, a look utterly concealing the feeling within him.

An announcer opened a great umbrella and, mounting a box covered with cloth, announced the coming of the Fruitful Year. As he spoke the final charmed words, a goshia stepped into the open space, flung out her fan with one gracious movement.

The press of bodies became intense. Wells, eyes upon the dancing girl, heart beating painfully, head assailed with the beauty of it all, passed his arm about Ellen, the better to protect her from the mass. Unconsciously, she placed her hand upon his on the far side. He felt the fingers tense and move.

The dancer weaved nearer and nearer, a path cutting itself as if by magic before her. In and out the danced, swinging, swaying, silk hissing upon silk, her painted face with twin circles of red, like lacquer, immobile, her eyes downcast, her body only showing the restlessness which moved her.

Selected from the goshia-house as the most beautiful, lovely with the gushy fragility of youth, the way opened for her as she advanced. It did not close behind, but remained a fanlike stretch of blackness, with the girl as the colored handle. She approached Wells, and as her knees bent in homage against the skirt of her kimono he could see that they were trembling.

"Aei! aei! aei!" chanted the chorus. She was the bud for the picking of their lord, Kayama. It was the spring time. The buds were opening. In his lordly arrogance and mercy he might honor the village by stooping to pick the beauty of this flower which had been created for him alone. She, most beautiful, would drag the hem of her kimono for him through the streets.

"Aei! Aei! Aei!" Chanted the Chorus. She Was the Bud for the Picking of Their Lord, Kayama.

Wells knew that this was allegorical; he was not intended to pluck this flower; not at this festival—it was all emblematic of the devotion due him. For Ellen could not know. The words were so simple, the meaning behind them so unmistakable, that she understood. Her fingers curled about his.

As Wells dropped a coin upon the grass, he saw the curve of Ellen's neck, and marked how flushed it was. The goshia scooped upon the gold with a flurry of wide sleeves and dainty, showed her teeth in a gleaming smile. The path closed behind her as she danced away.

Ellen drew a long audible breath. "I . . . am glad that you did not," and gulped down the unspoken reminder.

"Did not what?"

"No answer—a choked unintended sob instead.

He knew. Knew it now! She did love him. If she hadn't, she wouldn't have cried.

Why not? Why not, indeed? She was his wife. He was the master. The lord. She understood that he was the absolute ruler, that his word was law, that there remained nothing save willing obedience, even if simulated.

If she knew that he was white—he wouldn't tell her, couldn't explain now; there was no time for that. The moon was high. The perfume melted into the air. Explanations at such a time! Inside of him, somewhere, he reasoned that if, later, he returned to America with her, if all went well when he went first for the accounting, she would forgive, since he had loved her, and so on.

Why should he wait? The blossoms were dropping. What was it? That as each wind departed, never to return, so with each unshared moment.

And why shouldn't he live for himself? From all that had happened, he believed, so he argued, that the men who are happiest are the men who succeed. The men who triumph. He had been kind and loving and generous, what was his reward? Men do not get what they give. It was the hard, passionate man who was rewarded, not he who is tender, thoughtful, even unselfish.

"Shikatazu nai," he muttered. It was written. Fated. Intended.

The air was hot. It seemed to hold him down; he felt a part of the throng, shaver of their impulses, their desires.

Spring was in the air. The crowd felt it. Wells realized it. Ellen sensed it all instinctive.

It was shadowy, unred.

His hand closed tightly over hers. Why wait? The servants were gone, the house upon the hill deserted.

Wells bent his head so that his mouth was close to her ear as he spoke.

"Ellen . . . O'Hana . . . let us return to the house! Now! Come . . . let us return to the house!"

Ellen felt him trembling. Trembling in infection, she began to tremble also.

"Yes, yes, we will go to the house," she agreed in a quick whisper, not knowing why she said it.

CHAPTER XIII

Neither looked at the other. Instinctively Wells felt that which had whelmed him was overcoming Ellen also.

One thought alone was paramount, and without companion. In Wells' wilding brain. He was the lord, Kayama San—or so she thought. The lord did not ask nor demand. He offers a request, and thereby confers a supreme favor upon any one fortunate enough to be so designated.

She had not argued, had not quibbled, and he saw in this acquiescence something beautifully touching. A superb plea of nature appealing passionately against man's encroachment of purity upon the cross of sophistication . . . he did not think of it in these words . . . he did not think . . . he was far beyond thought. He heard her breath come quickly, short and painfully. That she already regretted her swayed decision he could not know. That she moved so silently because she knew nothing to plead that would have interested him, he was hot with the heady wine of possession.

They repassed the high-placed foot-bridge linking the miniature islands of a garden, repassed the flagged path that half-crested a lotus-covered pond. He did not look at Ellen, but saw her white reflection in the water. Involuntarily he took her hand, and so they walked onward, at last mounting the winding path, shrub-bordered, that leads to the house of the Thunder Gate.

Only one of the panels of the main room was open. They must pass close together through it.

The hanging lamp had gone out, and only the tiny lotus-lamp of bronze with its spattering taper in the rape-seed oil burned insistently before the secondary shrine. There was no sound within, no patter of feet nor muffled laughter.

He could not see her face, could only mark its oval. Very slowly he took her hands. He who had been so full of subtle reasonings, of arguments, of decisions, who had so yearned for action resultant in the joyfulness of his companion being drawn within the circle of his arms . . . he, the man of impulses so foreign, was silent and motionless as if chained. He heard the pounding of her heart . . . and thought it was his own. A great peace brooded in the ancient house.

Wells drew her hands together and, very slowly, as if moved by some mechanism within him, placed his other hand upon her shoulder.

The moments passed. Neither spoke nor moved, except that once Ellen's head raised—perhaps an inch, no more—so that each saw deep into the other's eyes. Wells' hand pressed against her shoulder.

They started . . . hearing the whistle of a blind woman in the streets; a long sweet call, plaintive; one sustained note first, then two short ones in another and lower key. To warn the passers to take heed for her sake, since she cannot see.

"Blind? Oh, more than blind! Here, said the throbbing night, here was his joy, his life and happiness. Take it, murmured the trees, for the bloom is soon gone from the fruit. Take it, every heretofore stunted sense told him, for the night is going . . . it is the hour of the Highest Star, the hour of love, of capture and giving . . . and the night is passing fast . . ."

He had no time for argument now. He only knew that, trembling in his half-embrace, was the girl that he loved that the night was sweet and made for rapture. His heart whispered her name again and again like a litany.

They stood together so. Ellen felt the tense heat of his hands, the jerking of his breath. Was staggered and speechless by that which confronted her. That which was now inevitable. What could she say? Or do? Or think? He was her husband. Once words fluttered to her lips, unescaping. That Kayama-San should remember his promise as Lord of the Thunder Gate. Died before they found birth. That she found the touch of his hands pleasant came near to nauseating her. She didn't . . . no, she couldn't . . . it wasn't she who stood in this silent room with its flickerings of light and the voices, so indistinct, like memory of an evil dream, coming from the distance; it wasn't she who thrilled to the touch of this Japanese, who had been so kind before, while now . . . now . . .

She wished that he would speak. She wondered if he would . . . kiss her. The Oriental does not kiss . . . would he? . . .

Had she drawn away, swayed either backward or forward, moved a finger, an eyelid, his arms would have closed about her tightly in a flash.

HIGH MARK IN INSURANCE TO BE REACHED

Indications point to larger number of policies being written this week than any other previous week. The Mirror has been handling the Travel Accident Insurance Policy.

While there seems to be no apparent reason for it, The Mirror has written more accident insurance policies this week than in any other previous week since we started to provide travel protection for our readers. The majority of the policies have been issued to people who do not ride in automobiles a great deal; to men driving team, and to railroad men.

During the past few days we have paid two or three claims to men who were injured by being thrown or otherwise hurt while driving a team. Many of our readers still believe the policy only covers automobile accidents. This is not the case. The policy covers every kind of an accident resulting from an injury by the wrecking of any kind of a vehicle.

While nearly every one of our readers renew their policy promptly, there are some who are negligent. Last week one of our readers was injured and he was not protected. He said he knew his policy had expired and he had been intending to have it renewed. You know what place is paved with good intentions—well, be sure you have your policy. Kick in your dollar and then forget about it for a whole year.

WOMAN'S CLUB DISCOVERS SAD CASE OF HARD LUCK IN SMALL FAMILY AND GIVES THEM AID

Club Women Are Doing Everything Necessary but Would Welcome the Gift of Phonograph for Home.

A very sad case has been brought to the attention of the Philanthropic department of the Escanaba Woman's Club within the last few days. It is the case of a family a few miles out of the city who seem to have been selected by fate to bear the brunt of many misfortunes.

The mother, who until a few months ago was well and capable and cared for her family tenderly, became ill and before she had fully recovered fell on the ice in her dooryard and injured her spine severely. To add to her misfortune she has since lost her sight and is as a result terribly handicapped in caring for her home and family.

Because of his wife's helpless condition the father of the family, who is an honest, industrious workman, has been unable to earn enough to keep his family in any kind of comfort, with the result that this little family of mother, father and two little boys is in rather a desperate situation.

The Woman's Club have come to the rescue and will help this family with many material comforts, with proper attention for the sick mother and will make an effort to reinstate the children in school.

The little home where happiness once reigned is a place of gloom and sadness. The mother's nerves have become shattered through her illness and worrying over her inability to care for her dear ones. It has occurred to the club workers that a little music in this home might help greatly to encourage and strengthen this little family who had reason to feel that there was no joy left for them.

If any charitably inclined person in the city has an old-fashioned, small phonograph that is not being used, would offer it to the club women or give it directly to this family, it would be a start towards restoring the morale of this worthy little family. The club women will collect records and see that the donation reaches these people.

Anyone who is interested in this case may learn further details by calling the chairman of the Philanthropic department of the Escanaba Woman's Club, Miss Martha Greene.

Miss Flora B. Holt has returned to her home here after a day of several months in California.

OF A PERSONAL NATURE

Miss Pearl LaCrosse returned to her home in Perkins after a shopping trip in this city.

Attorney J. L. Loell of this city returned from Chicago and Milwaukee where he transacted business for several days.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. Strom of South 12th street, returned to the city Saturday from Lakeland, Florida, where they have been spending the past several months. Their son, Attorney Torval E. Strom, went down to accompany his parents home.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard McKee and two sons spent the weekend at Marquette.

Miss LaVerne A. Newman, who has been spending the Easter holidays at home, will leave tonight for Chicago, where she is attending the National Kindergarten College.

Mrs. Cecil Collins and son visited over the week-end with relatives in Ishpeming.

Hugh Harris of Iron Mountain spent the week-end with his sister Miss R. Harris of this city.

Those new hats and new coats did not get ruined on Easter Sunday in Escanaba. While it was not any too warm, there was no rain or snow to keep people in doors and the city streets and country roads were filled with pedestrians and automobile parties most of the day. It is declared that there was a larger attendance at the churches, than at any previous Easter Sunday, every church being filled for every service.

CITY TURNS TO RECEPTION FOR MANY VISITORS

Large Crowds Expected Daily to Attend Second Annual Automobile Show.

Auto and Radio Dealers Are Busy Completing Exhibits Today in Readiness for the Opening.

Every up-to-date city now holds its annual automobile show and Escanaba goes the rest of them one better by adding radio and giving the interested public a double reason to come to Escanaba—and they are coming; not in pairs or trios, but in automobile loads from many surrounding towns.

The Coliseum will be a gay place for the rest of the week, starting Tuesday night and will attract enthusiasts who are already owners of radio sets, but many who are now looking for the best in radio and want to compare the different kinds and listen to demonstrations which are to be given by the salesmen.

There is little in radio that will not be shown at the big exhibition. Sets selling as low as $25, with which nearly all the big stations can be tuned in and sets costing nearly $500, that will get all there is in the air, day or night.

Accessories will form a big part of the annual show, too. Every automobile owner wants a few extra things on his car; it may be a spot light, or a cigar lighter, but no matter what it is you will see it at the big exhibition. There will not be a minute of "dead" time at the Coliseum. Something will be going on all the time.

During the day the visitors who come to the city will be interested in the big sales which the stores are going to put on every day. Announcements will be made in the papers and the public will be well informed. It is going to be a big shopping week.

Will Hold Base Ball.

In order to form a bank account for a base ball team, the auto-radio directors have given a committee space in the big auditorium for a "County Store" where all kinds of merchandise will be given or rather sold to shoppers. John Bartella is chairman and has appointed a committee to call upon the merchants today and solicit a stock of goods for the store. Escanaba is going to have a team this summer and the store during the four days of the auto-radio show will be the entering wedge for making a good team possible.

Don't fail to look for this attraction. Do some of your buying there and help the enterprise along. You will be nothing out for you will get some real bargains.

Edward Nau Dies Late Saturday of Blood Poisoning

Edward Nau, brass foundry foreman for the Chatfield Brass & Iron Works, died late Saturday afternoon as the result of an infection sustained in an automobile accident on April 6th. While returning in his automobile from Menominee on April 6th, the car went in a ditch, but one was injured, excepting Mr. Nau, who was cut about his hands and face.

Nothing was thought of the cuts and bruises at the time, but a few days later it was necessary to remove Mr. Nau from his home at 211 South Nineteenth street to a local hospital. His condition became so grave that his relatives in Evansville were notified Friday, but did not arrive before his death. Mr. Nau is survived by his wife and little two-year-old daughter, his parents and several brothers who live in Evansville, Ind. Court Opens in Afternoon and Assigns Cases

Owing to an unavoidable delay, Judge R. C. Flannigan did not arrive this morning and court was not opened until this afternoon, most of the time being taken in arranging the calendar for the rest of the term. The most important case to be tried will be that of Henry Moras, who is charged with robbery in connection with the robbery and assault upon C. A. Carlson several months ago. Carl Olson who was arrested with Moras has confessed to the robbery, naming Moras as the person who was with him at the time. Moras is being defended by Attorney J. H. Loell. There are several cases and a large number of civil suits.

Witnesses Do Not Arrive; Case Delayed

WASHINGTON, April 21—The failure of witnesses to arrive from Montana stopped further investigation of the charges against Senator Wheeler and the investigation was deferred until some future date.

Mrs. Margaret Scott is confined to her home, 518 South 12th street, with a fractured ankle, sustained when she accidentally fell, while walking about her yard Saturday afternoon.

FIRE DESTROYS MORE TIMBER THAN CUT DOWN

Each Year Enough Timber Is Burned to Build Many Thousand Homes.

Enough Each Year Is Burned to Cover Strip Ten Miles Wide from New York to Denver.

EAST LANSING, Mich., April 21—Fire has destroyed more timber than the loggers have cut, according to A. K. Chittenden of the Forestry department of Michigan Agricultural College, commenting upon the need of a Forest Fire Prevention Week, which President Coolidge recently named, to begin today.

"Each year the forest fires in the United States destroy or damage enough lumber to build five room houses for the entire city of San Francisco or Washington," Prof. Chittenden said.

The loss from fire, Prof. Chittenden believes, would not be so disastrous but for the fact that demand for lumber is far ahead of production. Hardwood is being used four times as fast as it is being produced, he said, and soft woods are being used eight and a half times faster than they are growing.

"The land covered by forest fires each year is equivalent to a strip 19 miles wide extending from New York to Denver, Colorado," Prof. Chittenden said. "This same area annually has a timber loss eight times greater than that which took place in France during the World war."

The end of forest fires in Michigan will come only by the exercise of the greatest care by all persons traveling in the timber zones, and actual work of reforestation can begin only when fires are ended, Prof. Chittenden said. Camp fires, cigars, cigarettes and carelessly dropped matches are the principal sources of forest ruin, he said.

"Hardest Job" Prize Winners Being Judged

All of the essays on "What is the Hardest Job" have been turned over to W. J. Sullivan, who is sorting them out and classifying them according to subject. It is going to be a considerable job to loom them all over and do justice to every one of them, but Mr. Sullivan declares that each and every one will be re-read and marked up according to the merits earned. Mr. Sullivan informed us today that it may take between a week and ten days to complete the judging.
