

Chicken Thieves Are Bound Over To Circuit Court

Memomine—Tom Diachuk, Milwaukee, admitted chicken thief and declared to be the head of a gang out of Milwaukee, was bound over to Memomine county circuit court yesterday on three charges with his total bail fixed at $6,000. He and a negro companion, Edward Lee Curtis, were arrested in an old woods camp near Carney where they had 300 chickens in their possession and also a quantity of lumber they had stolen and loaded on top of their trucks. A third member of the gang, Lester Curley, escaped from the arresting officers. Curtis will be arraigned Thursday. Diachuk was first arraigned yesterday before Justice Peter Garrigan at the court house charged with stealing lumber belonging to Dwight Barlow, of Carney, in whose old camp Diachuk was arrested.

After being bound over to circuit court on that charge and bond fixed at $2,000, Diachuk was arraigned before Justice John E. Jones, Memomine, and charged with carrying concealed weapons. Bound over on that charge and another $2,000 bond required, Diachuk was arraigned on a charge of stealing 43 chickens in Oconto county and transporting them into Michigan, also a felony. Diachuk waived examination and was bound over again, the court fixing another $2,000 bond.

Only three witnesses were examined in the three charges. Dwight Barlow testified to his ownership of the stolen lumber and to its value as being in excess of $25. Deputy Sheriff Clyde Merrill testified to finding the Barlow lumber loaded on Diachuk's truck and of arresting Diachuk, who was armed, and Curtis. Undersheriff Oscar Dahl of Marquette testified that Diachuk had admitted to him the theft of the Barlow lumber.

AMUSEMENTS AT THE DELFT. "Little Eva" falling from heaven—when the rope broke. Mr. St. Clair losing his toupee in the midst of the death scene. "Uncle Tom" bawling the daylight out of "Simon Legree" because he didn't whip him "on the pads."

These are some of the laugh spots of "The Girl in the Show," the delightful backstage comedy which is now playing at the Delft Theatre. A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer all-talking picture, it was directed by Edgar Selwyn. Bessie Love, Raymond Hackett, Ford Sterling, Jed Prouty, Mary Doran and Eddie Nugent are the principals in an amusing story about an "Uncle Tom's Cabin" troupe which is stranded in a small Kansas town.

AT THE STRAND. "Hellship Bronson," now at the Strand, is a picture of the days of clipper-ships, shanghai sailors, devil-skippers, rum, and raw bleeding fists. A gigantic, terrifying electric storm furnishes the atmosphere for the climax, which is as thrilling as any the screen ever saw. And to complete the tale—Noah Berry takes the leading role of Hellship Bronson, with Mrs. Wallace Reid co-starring as his forgotten and mis-treated wife!

Rotary Clubs Will Hold Joint Meeting

The Escanaba and Memomine Rotary clubs will hold a joint "gridiron" luncheon at the Delta hotel Saturday noon before going out to the athletic field to witness the annual encounter between the high schools of the two cities. Fred Leighton, member of the all-time Escanaba high school football eleven, will talk on "Football in the Old Days." Short talks will also be given by Supt. John L. Sverdale of Memomine and Supt. R. E. Cheney of Escanaba. The Rotarians will also rehearse the school songs and yells. The Escanaba and Memomine high school bands will give a brief concert in front of the hotel at noon.

Special Train to Bring Delegates On Sunday Night

A special train, bearing several hundred delegates from downstate lodges to the annual convention of the I. O. O. F. grand lodge and the Rebekah assembly here next week, will arrive in the city about 9:45 o'clock Sunday night.

The special committee, arranging for the housing of the visitors, urges that citizens, who have offered to rent their rooms, make an effort to remain at home at that time so that the delegates can be quartered promptly upon their arrival from Gladstone.

It is not known who will make up the delegation to arrive on Sunday. About one-third of the number of visitors will be arriving on that day.

The only $50 gold pieces ever minted by the U. S. government was for the Panama-Pacific exposition in 1915. More than 3,000 of these were made.

CHAPTER XLV

It was Red Flynn, and he was alone. Characteristically, he wasted no time.

"Good Lord, Molly, what have you done now?"

"I don't know," she rubbed her eyes with the back of her hand. "What have I done?"

"You don't know?" he exclaimed. "What are you crying for then?"

"Me? Oh—I don't know. I'm just—crying—that's all. What did I do?"

"Nobody's been up here yet!" She shook her head in bewilderment.

"No, nobody's been here. Where's Jack? How does he look? Do you think he loves me a bit, Red? Just the littlest bit? What did he come to Boston for?"

"For goodness sake, what's the matter? Can't you answer me?"

"One at a time," he begged. "And you'd better leave Jack out for a while. He's at the Copley now. But he'll probably go back to New York when he sees the morning papers. Sure he loves you. He's cuckoo over you, that's what he is. Cuckoo over you, that's what you tell me what's the big idea of getting yourself engaged to a guy like Newton?"

"Engaged?" repeated Molly stupidly. "Me—engaged?"

"Sure, you heard me the first time. Come on now, let's get this straight, Molly. Didn't you tell Newton you'd marry him?"

"Yes," she admitted. "I did."

"What do you mean—sort of?"

"Well, it was sort of a trial engagement, you see. We're trying it out, kind of. If Bob's nice for three months, then—if he still loves me—it's a secret, you see. Nobody knows about it! Say, the whole town knows about it. Newton's been drinking all day in one of those speakeasies on Stuart street, and talking his head off. It's a co-educational speakeasy. There were some show girls in there from 'Hello, Mike,' and naturally they spilled the beans. There are a flock of reporters out now, looking for Newton. He drifted away from the joint where he's been making speeches, and they haven't located him yet. It's a wonder they haven't been here to get a story from you."

"Oh, dear, Oh dear!" exploded Red irritably. "I'm sorry, Starr says he showed 'em the diamond he has for you. Seems he's been carrying it around in his pocket. Maybe he's lost it by this time."

"What can I do, Red?"

"Deny the engagement. Say it's a darn lie. The gang will be out here pretty soon. I'll duck before they get here. Tell them there must be a mistake. That you and Newton are only friends—you know the gas. No romance at all. Say there's some unfortunate misunderstanding. Don't let them kid you into making any speeches. Just play dumb. If you say too much, you'll antagonize Newton. And you know what he is when he gets started."

"I'm awfully sorry, Red. It's pretty much my fault. Bob's wretched to drink. I'm not blaming myself for that. But I think it would be pretty sporting to deny the engagement. You see, we are engaged, only, of course, it's supposed to be a secret. I'd be letting Bob down pretty badly if I should call him a liar. It would be a rotten trick."

"Serve him right," insisted Red stubbornly. "Serve him darn good and right. What business has he shooting his head off about you to a lot of bums in a speakeasy? Flashing a diamond, and all that stuff. I've warned you before, Molly. You never should have got mixed up with a guy like him."

"But there's Rita," she moaned.

"Yes. And there's Jack, too. Didn't you ever think about him? I told you before Rita's not the only cute kid that's ever going to get born. Haven't you any ambition yourself? Don't you want a kid of your own?"

"I want Rita."

"Oh, all right. Have it your own way. Rita's a nice little kid. I haven't a thing against her. Go ahead, and get your ready-made family! Go ahead, and marry Newton!"

"Jack doesn't know about it yet!" she interrupted.

"No, I left him, and went back to the office. Someone phoned in, while I was there. They were digging up your pictures when I came out. And they've—all the clippings out of the morgue. They're going to do a great job on you. Well, I guess I'll be moseying along. Let your conscience be your guide, and watch your step, old thing."

"Tell me," she demanded. "Did Jack have anything special to say? Anything about me, I mean?"

"Not a thing. There's one guy that doesn't wear his heart on his sleeve."

"What did he say about Mrs. Bulwer-Eaton? Please tell me," she coaxed.

"Not now. Do you good to keep you guessing for a while. Besides, I've got to go. No sense letting the gang know I tipped you off."

Red had scarcely left, when the first news hound put in an appearance. He had been searching for Bob, who proved elusive prey.

"I've nothing to say," she told him.

"But surely you will confirm the engagement? Perhaps Mr. Newton spoke out of turn, but you're not denying that an engagement exists, are you Miss Burnham?"

"I've nothing to say," she repeated. And that, through all the night, was her litany. "Nothing to say," "nothing to say," "nothing to say."

Reporters came in droves, hot on the scent of romance. Give a good newspaper man a romance and he takes it in his teeth as a dog does a bone.

The bright young men and women of the press put two and two together. And in the morning—although Molly had made no statement, and Bob had not been discovered—their romance led the papers.

Natsu laid the folded sheets at Molly's place at breakfast. And there were her pictures. And there were pictures of Red Flynn and a rehash of that suspected romance. There were pictures, too, of little Rita. And one of Rita's mother, taken from the college year book. Pictures of everyone, but Bob, Molly remembered hearing him say once that he never had a photograph taken.

She read the stories angrily, reflecting that any exploited romance seems silly and foolish. The publicity she knew would make a Bob, write. But it was his own fault. It served him right. If only it wasn't a boomerang that came hurtling back to her and Rita!

And then there was Jack. Always, always Jack. She had not

ONE'S ENOUGH.

One bird's enough to make a spring
If only that one bird will sing;
One tree's enough to give you shade
By some hot highway men have made;
One flow'r's enough to fill a vase
And lend some beauty to a place;
One friend's enough to make us glad,
Whatever troubles we have had.

Only a fool would wish that all
The birds for him would pipe and call,
That all the trees with spreading limbs
Should throw their shade for only him.
That all the flow'rs for him should bloom
And offer incense in his room.
All hearts should love, all hands should lend,
And every mortal be his friend.

Yet men have myriad desires,
When only one the heart requires.
Yes, hearts that have some happiness
Still grieve for those they might possess,
Although some blessing they have known
Want all the blessings all men own.
The road is always somewhere rough,
Have you one joy? Well, one's enough.

Molly, and she slipped out the service entrance into a waiting cab. She lunched alone at a quiet hotel. And reached the station in ample time to board the train leisurely with Rita and Marie.

Some hours later Bob discovered that she had left town and taken Rita and the nurse with her. She had left no word as to her destination, and he was beset with fears. If he reported her disappearance to the police, he would be making a laughing stock of himself. If he took no notice of it, she might remain away indefinitely.

Perplexed and worried, he

UNWANTED MERCHANDISE

WITHIN a short time there will come to a great many Escanaba men a batch of ties—woven or knitted or in some other form—with a printed letter from the manufacturer that they are great bargains and will make excellent Christmas presents. It is an annual custom. And seems to work.

Likewise there will come Christmas cards and other merchandise. All one has to do, according to the literature that comes with the ties, cards, etc., is to inspect them and, if he likes them, forward a certain sum of money. If he doesn't like them, he is asked to slip them in an envelope and return them to the maker. Some of these makers claim to be crippled or blind or otherwise in need of the public's sympathy and money.

For the benefit of Escanaba folks who are irked at this annual attempt to sell them ties and other things, the following statement by the postmaster general of the United States, is printed:

"The practice of using the mails for the purpose of sending unsolicited articles through the mails for sale is increasing to an extent which demands legislation prohibiting the same. Under this practice articles and merchandise are sent to addressees unsolicited, and in the absence of any order therefor, for the purpose of sale and with the request to transmit a price therefor. This places upon the addressee a burden of the receipt and attention on his part, and the necessity of returning the article or remitting for it. NEITHER OF WHICH HE IS UNDER OBLIGATION TO DO, or of ignoring the matter altogether. Following this he is subject to receipt of follow-up letters from the sender, all of which are annoying and some of which are abusive and threatening."

"The postal service is a public service for the legitimate use of the people. It should not be made the instrument of a practice which works an unjust hardship or inconvenience to recipients of mail matter, subjecting them to annoyance and abuse."

So when your Christmas ties and cards appear keep in mind there is no obligation to pay for or return them.

POLLY AND THE CENSOR

THE chief trouble with censorship is that it so often works backwards.

For some reason it seems impossible to enforce a censorship without doing things that are just naturally ridiculous.

Some months ago the papers were full of the case of a New York grandmother who was convicted in federal court of sending obscene literature through the mails. She had written a sex education pamphlet and had mailed it to various people. One of these people appointed himself a censor and had her arrested. Her appeal from her jail sentence is now pending.

More recently the play "Strange Interlude" came to Boston. A number of Bostonians felt that the play was too improper to be allowed on the boards of any theatre. One man felt so deeply about it that he got a copy of the play and went through it looking for passages that were over-strong for the public morals.

Having found a number of passages that seemed to him to be off-color, he copied them, and mailed these copies to all the clergymen in the city, asking them to read them and denounce the play.

The New York woman mailed out literature that she believed to be perfectly proper and decent. Some easily-shocked recipient of her wares had her arrested and the courts ruled that she must go to jail—despite the fact that she did what she had done in the belief that the material was eminently moral and wholesome.

The Boston man mailed out literature that he believed to be indecent. Indeed, he was so sure that it was indecent that he felt that no play which contain-

Harry Sinclair wrote to the newspapers to say that there was no sinister purpose in having that story shadowed. Probably merely an interesting bit of research work for the Smithsonian Institution.

Gladstone Sailor Held for Stealing Sugar at G. Bay

Green Bay—Means of guilty of stealing sugar valued at between $200 and $300 from the steamer "Cornucopia" here were entered in Municipal court yesterday afternoon by four men, three of them members of the crew and the fourth a stowaway. The cases were held open for disposition.

Frank Tyler, Duluth, the stowaway, pleaded guilty to an information charging him with the theft of 19 sacks Sunday morning, 12 the previous Wednesday morning and six Tuesday morning. Frank Sams, Buffalo, seaman, pleaded guilty to complicity in the Sunday morning theft, and Walter Trueblood, Gladstone, fireman, and James Coogan, Buffalo, watchman, admitted complicity in the Tuesday and Wednesday thefts.

Capt. Martin Burke believes that local men may have been implicated in the scheme, and also intimates that a similar theft was engineered on a prior trip of the "Cornucopia" to Green Bay. Passing of sentence has been withheld, pending further investigation.

No testimony was taken this morning. However, Sams and Trueblood made complete confessions to Cletus Chadek, assistant district attorney, in which they stated that before daylight Sunday morning the 19 sacks were lowered over the side with a rope to Tyler, who was in a rowboat below. Two sacks fell into the river and were lost, they said. On Tuesday and Wednesday mornings, the sugar was lowered to the dock, and taken away in a truck. Coogan, the watchman, had been paid $10 to "keep out of sight," they said.

Tyler, who is said to have once worked in Green Bay, and who also had worked on the steamer, part of the time as acting second mate, is believed to have been the "brains" of the theft. It was a stowaway on the last trip from Buffalo, receiving his meals from Sams.

Six sacks of sugar have been recovered, and Capt. Burke is tracing some of the balance. It was an attempt to dispose of the sugar which led to the arrest of Tyler Sunday morning, and of the other three men the following evening.

NO, WE HAVE NO LIQUOR TODAY!

There were seven bootleggers on the street where Mrs. Michael Daly lives in San Francisco, she said, and the thirsty ones who visited these so-called "joints" often mistook her place for just another one. They rang the bell at all hours of the night and so disturbed her sleep that she put a sign near her doorbell. Shown above, it is self-explanatory.

Good Will Farm
Doing Splendid Work for Orphans

Many residents of this city and surrounding places, who have given freely of their money towards the support of the Good Will Farm at Houghton where many children are cared for, have never visited the institution. The home is situated in an ideal place where the children may get plenty of outdoor exercise. A clipping from the Houghton Mining Gazette, reprinted here, gives one an idea of the atmosphere in which the little orphans are being cared for.

The following is part of the report of Miss Elizabeth McDougall, superintendent of Good Will Farm: "When giving their impressions of a visit to Good Will Farm visitors to the home never fail to speak of the beauty of the place and its surroundings, but the outstanding feature to them seems to be the happy spirit of freedom and good fellowship that prevails among the children in the home and on the playground. This endorsement, and I hope they are sincere, is very encouraging, for it has always been our chief aim to establish a genuine family spirit through a patient, sympathetic, though firm, and intelligent attitude toward each child so as to gain the respect, love and confidence of each one. I have been trying to organize the work so as to give more and more of ourselves to our children and feel we are getting closer to them, giving each child the benefit of whatever moral training and personal influence we possess, in the hope that, through such intimate personal contacts, our children will benefit spiritually and morally. I believe these personal relationships constitute the most important part of our work. I do not mean giving ourselves superficially but sincerely so that the spiritual and emotional longings of each child will be satisfied by those who should have the child's best interests at heart, and this cannot be accomplished by giving them only distant attention. We want to afford all our children such understanding and guidance as will tend to bring out the best qualities in each.

"No plan of child development is complete unless it recognizes the need of every human soul for some form of religious training. Childhood is seed time for important motives and beliefs. While strictly non-sectarian we hold our religious services, Sunday school on Sunday afternoons and chapel exercises every morning.

"Growing bodies need proper food, food that is not only nourishing but varied. There is a distinction between feeding and filling, and we have always tried to guard against monotony as well as waste and have ever been on the lookout for new and tempting dishes. As a further safeguard to the health of the family, Miss Vivian Beeber, an experienced and successful dietitian, recently connected with the Baltimore public schools, has kindly consented to come in and reorganize our kitchen, revise our menus and make any criticisms and suggestions she thinks advisable. We are looking forward to her visits and know we will be greatly benefitted by her valuable advice, and that she will be able to add variety to our meals and teach us new economies.

"It has always been a time for rejoicing in our house when the children return for a visit after they have grown; some on their honeymoon, some to show their first baby, and others come alone. Occasionally we do not recognize them, and it is a real thrill to look into the face of a stalwart young man and trace the features of one who we knew as a boy. It makes one feel pleased and proud to know that some of our family have found

Kalamazoo—An attempt to rob the Augusta State bank, at Augusta, 17 miles northeast of here, early Wednesday was frustrated by the burglar alarm which frightened the robbers away. Investigation revealed the telephone wires leading to the building had been cut and an attempt had been made to cut the alarm wire. The robbers had not gained entrance to the bank.

Eagles to Conduct Membership Drive

The Fraternal Order of Eagles, Escanaba Aerie No. 1088, has started an intensive campaign under Grand Aerie Deputy Organizer Ralph Emerson of Detroit to increase the membership to 325.

Mr. Emerson expects to be in Escanaba for three weeks to develop plans for the campaign. During this time, special initiations will be held each Tuesday evening. The national order has more than 700,000 members in 1400 aeries, located in the principal cities throughout the country. The order is mainly a brotherhood but offers sick and death benefits.

Mother's Day was organized by Frank E. Hering, South Bend, Ind., editor of the Eagle magazine. The mother's pension bill passed in Jackson county, Missouri, in 1911, was proposed by Judge E. E. Porterfield, a member of the F. O. E. This law now operates in 42 states. The Escanaba Aerie was instituted 25 years ago and now owns its lodge rooms and has a membership of 161. A special examination of candidates will be held at two o'clock Sunday afternoon at the Eagles' hall. The class initiation, which will be held on Sunday, October 27, will be in honor of Conrad H. Mann, chief auditor, and Frank E. Hering, editor of the Eagle magazine.

HEALTH

Almost 10 years ago Professor W. B. Cannon of Harvard University published a book on bodily changes in love, hunger and rage, in which he emphasized the evidence that has been developed in various places indicating that emotions have definite effects on the physical actions of the body.

In 1896 it was known that the movements of the intestines would be stopped if a person showed signs of anxiety, distress or anger. Since that time Cannon has studied the subject intensively, particularly with a view to finding the mechanism by which such action takes place.

The scientific side of medicine has for almost a century emphasized the actual changes that may be observed in the body after death and medical diagnosis demands scientific recognition of such changes. The human being differs from the animal in the development of his brain, hence the behavior of the human being is not always the simple mechanical response that takes place in the animal following a definite stimulation. Whenever a human being expresses fear, joy or grief, certain physical responses occur.

There are, however, certain movements which are involuntary; that is, they are controlled from the nerve centers without the patient's wish. In case such a patient has an emotional reaction, the side of the face which is usually without expression will reveal emotion.

Professor Cannon points out that an evening's meal may remain undigested all night in the stomach if there is persistent worry. The saliva, the gastric and the pancreatic juices responsible for digestion do not flow when a person is worried or frightened.

Eminent clinicians estimate that anywhere from one-third to one-half of all the people who suffer with digestive disturbances have disordered emotional states and the digestive disturbance is relieved when the emotional condition is restored to normal. These facts should not be taken as a warrant for disregarding physical causes or for neglecting physical measures in treatment.

Mrs. Fred Welssert, Lake Shore Drive, was the honor guest at a cleverly planned surprise party at her home Saturday evening on the occasion of her natal anniversary, when a group of fifty friends came to her home unexpectedly and helped to celebrate the day with a program of cards, dancing and other diversions.

The friends had taken refreshments along and a delicious lunch was served after the card games.

Policeman Expresses His Deep Gratitude

Claims "Dreco Ended His Kidney Pains and Liver Troubles."

This statement of Officer Frank Williams, 512 Strangs Ave., Stevens Point, Wisc., can be read with absolute confidence, but let Officer Williams tell you in his own words. He says: "Before taking this new medicine, Dreco, I was raddowd in a great many ways. My stomach was sour and everything I ate would turn to gas that pressed up around my heart, making me very short of breath. My back pained me, and I was having a lot of trouble with my kidneys. Pimples broke out all over my face. I hardly ate enough to keep going. "Then Dreco did for me what seemed impossible. It built up my whole system and made me feel like a new man. I sleep well at night and my bowels are regular, and I never have any more headaches. I will recommend Dreco to everyone."

Voices

THE day is full of voices—meaningless, insistent. They drone upon the street, chatter at parties, hurl snatches of themselves at you from passing automobiles, rise up and down dramatically from open-air platforms, end with question marks at the office, trail after you on street cars.... Your ears, forever open, almost have to hear.

Yet in this same room with you are voices of utmost silence, whose every word concerns you. You control them more surely than you control telephone or radio. Open a page—they talk to you quietly. Close a page—they are through. They are the voices of the advertisements. They talk direct to you. Tell of better roofing for your home, more protective paint for its walls. Shoes your youngsters can't scuffle out easily. Salads, delicious drinks, to gratify you. Reinforced hosiery, cooler underwear, purer soaps. You believe in these voices, for they have to be sincere. Else they would not be in these pages—could not have the nation's belief. You buy the goods they proffer, for you know already what those goods will do. And wide belief has lowered their prices. They are economical—sure!

Loose products everywhere in stores are crying out, "Buy me!" But behind the voice of the advertised product is the voice of authority. The voice that tells the why, what, when, where and how of the goods you buy.

Heed these courteous voices often. Read the advertisements every day

*Never Enjoyed the Travel Comforts
Escanaba Automotive Merchants Bring to You*

WHEN one industry springs from nothing to the richest, most productive of all industries, and in the confines of one generation... it takes shrewd, progressive, up-to-the-minute merchants to keep pace with it, and one step ahead of it, in supplying the public with its new creations.

Escanaba automotive merchants have always displayed that ambitious progressive spirit that is so essential to the success of man-made products.

Nowhere will be found more elaborate automobile showrooms and extensive ultra-modern service stations—with their thousands of dollars' worth of expensive fittings and mechanical equipment.

Nowhere can be found better automobile tire and accessory merchants whose comprehensive stocks are ever at your command.

These men are "motor-wise." They are interested in seeing you get the finest for your money. They strive to give you better value—better service. And if they believe that additional investment of funds will increase the efficiency of their organizations — that money is willingly spent.

Theirs is the unwritten creed that courteous, efficient, real service actually starts after the sale has been made. And it is because of this creed that the public of Escanaba enjoys the finest, most modern, most fairly priced automotive merchandise America has to offer.

Look no farther. Whether you buy a car, an accessory for that car, or the gas consumed in it, you can do better in Escanaba.

The latest developments in the Automotive World told in Press Ads.

Today readers of the Daily Press find the problem of selecting a car an easier task because of the information supplied in the automotive ads published daily in its pages. By careful study of the advertisements the buyer is able to secure an accurate impression of the different cars points of superiority. The knowledge gains from these automobile ads makes it almost impossible for clever salesmen to put over a product with exaggerated facts and specifications.

tween the other navies of the world in the future. The limitation of replacement of battleships, which also is announced in the formal invitations as a subject for discussion, was no surprise, because with the development of the airplane and the submarine it is the fast vessel of cruising radius, like the scout cruiser and the fighting cruiser, which is to be the bulwark of powerful navies in the future. Neither Great Britain nor the United States will abandon battleships but to a certain extent they will agree not to expend money in their development or refinement but to keep in commission those already built. After all, if the most powerful navies agree to limit the amount of replacement and to maintain their old battleships, they will have a sufficient first line of defense for a fleet without calling on their people for extra appropriations.

Seek New Rules
During the last naval conference the United States and Great Britain tried first to suppress the submarine and when they failed to accomplish it, they suggested rigid rules for submarine warfare. It is likely that the agitation for rules of this kind will be revived if the other naval powers decline to abolish the submarine. By setting 1936 as the date when all naval categories shall find the British and American fleets on a parity basis, there is ample time to take care of the inequalities which have been the basis of so much discussion on this side of the Atlantic. It is apparent now that the concession has made possible American agreement with the British program of cruiser building. The biggest single difference between the situation that exists today, with respect to the abolition of the submarine and the problem that confronted the 1922 Washington conference, is that the Kellogg-Briand anti-war treaties have now been signed and ratified by the principal powers of the world. This means that since wars of aggression or for offense have been outlawed, it develops upon any nation which wishes to use the submarine to prove that this weapon of warfare is essential for defense. It remains to be seen whether the United States and Great Britain may even go to the point of suggesting that other nations build up their navies to a point approximating the American and British strength rather than to see the submarine continue to be used.

Germany Surprised
Meanwhile, Germany, disarmed by the Versailles treaty, looks on with a feeling of wonder that the other nations should have really pressed forward the movement to disarm themselves. Germany has been relieved of the burden of naval armaments and her economic development can proceed without regard to the tax burden of either an army or a navy. France is not more than Italy, that all source of friction in Europe has been removed or that all her future disputes will necessarily be with Germany. Theoretically, the French wish to be protected against the British as well as the Italians. The Italians, on the other hand, wish to dominate the Mediterranean as against the French.

Russia is still an enigma. All the treaties of today are signed on the supposition that the external policy of Russia will not be materially changed in the future and that she will not build up either an army or a navy to threaten the peace of the world; but, just the same, the Kellogg treaties provide for such a contingency, in that all nations may recover liberty of action just as soon as there is a threat of aggression. It remains to be seen what provision will be made to care for the interests of those continental powers which are not yet ready to concede that the Kellogg-Briand treaties of themselves furnish an adequate protection against the whims of the So-shattered probably the greatest team in baseball history, the Old White Elephants, because of their lack of appeal to some of the selfsame fans now crowding to greet his new warriors. That team won four American league pennants in five years behind the great hurling of Chief Bender, Jack Coombs, and Eddie Plank. It boasted the first $100,000 infield in Home Run Baker. Stuff McInnis, Eddie Collins and Jack Barry. The chilliness of fandom forced the scattering of that great ball club.

Connie Sneaks Away
Connie watched the boisterous reception for the youthful team that in one year has stirred up more enthusiasm in the Quaker City than the old champions created in their entire careers. Then he tried to sneak unnoticed from the front of the train. He was half way before the crowd spotted him. He smiled at them, raised his hat, and hurried away. The Cubs, without a word to say, slipped into town scarcely 200 fans forming the reception committee, silently they went to their hotel to rest. There was little rest, however, in any hotel. Every hostelry in the city was jammed to capacity, the visitors and hosts alike intent on talking and thinking baseball.

Pat X in Fox
Although all registered seats in Shibe park, with a capacity of 38,000 have been sold for all three games scheduled here, a line began to form at midnight last night at the bleacher ticket office where 1200 dollar seats will go on sale at 9 a. m. tomorrow. Through the night thirty fans huddled in overcoats, played cards, hung over small wood fires, or—openly amused—themselves "shooting craps." Hundreds were in line tonight.

About the ball park the work of finishing temporary bleachers on roof tops went ahead under the direction of building inspectors. Revenue inspectors appeared and ordered householders to have tickets printed for seats on their roof with the customary war tax put aside for the government.

But on every side is the conviction that the excitement won't last—not beyond the fourth game Saturday anyway. The general opinion is that by that time the extra "X" Jimmy Fox carries on the end of his name will merely mark the spot where the body of the Cubs can be found.

Cubs on Thin Ice
Mack is in a position now to gamble with his vastly superior pitching staff while the Cubs occupy a spot where any false move means disaster for their own hopes as well as to the already battered prestige of the National league.

The senior circuit, as a matter of fact, must go back to the heyday of the Giants, when McGraw's men in nine successive games against the Yankees, won eight and tied the other, to get any balm whatever for the 10 straight setbacks now sustained at the hands of the American league.

The worst part of it has been a rout ever since the National leaguers won their last series with the Cardinals of 1926. It was exactly three years ago today—October 10, 1926—that old Pete Alexander rushed in to check the Yankees and win the last game for the National league.

Grove Had Stuff
To make it more humiliating, the American leaguers, while enjoying their big streak that has yet to be broken, were not obliged to relieve a pitcher for nine successive games. All the Yankee twirlers went the route in 1927 and 1928. Howard Ehmke made the Cubs in the first game last Tuesday, but the spell was broken for the first time yesterday when Grove relieved Earnshaw.

Ehmke's performance in the opener was the more dramatic but the way Grove's southpaw speed baffled the Cubs made the superiority of the A's pitching corps complete. There had been much debate before-hand as to what the fearsome Cubs right-hand hitters would do to southpaw artists like Grove and Walberg. So far the answer is that they can do nothing whatever. Not since Walter Johnson, with a great finish, buzzed 'em past the Giants in the last game of the 1924 series at Washington have the experts or the batters looked at so blinding an assortment of stuff as Grove hurled past the Cubs in the drab, dismal light of the second game.

Have Whiff Record
Unless the Cubs snap out of their hitting slump rapidly, they will break all records for the dubious distinction of striking out the most times. Their total of 26 so far, 13 in each game, surpasses all marks for this stage of any series. The record is 44, by the Giants of 1911, when Bender, Coombs and Plank were doing the sharpshooting for the Athletics and mowing the Giants down at the rate of seven and one-third strikes-out victims per game.

It required six games to do this. An average of only nine Cub strikeouts for the next two games would equal this record.

It has been little short of amazing the way such sluggers as Rogers Hornsby and Kiki Cuyler have been completely fooled at the plate by Mack's pitching strategy. The odds would have been at least 1,000 to 1 before the series that Cuyler would not fan five times or Hornsby four times within two games, yet that is just what they did. Cuyler and Hornsby each are hitting .125 while Jimmy Fox, the home run kid, with 556 and Jimmy Dykes with 500 are setting the pace for the Athletics, along with Al Simmons, who hit his stride in the second game and equalled a world's series record by driving across four runs.

"We Need Rest"
Even if the Cubs regain their hitting form when hits mean runs, it will still take a lot that their pitchers have not yet shown to waylay the combination of Fox, Simmons, Dykes and Cochran to upset the strategy of the house of Mack.

Neither team showed any desire for a workout in advance of the actual hostilities. Joe McCarthy changed his original plans, which called for a short practice session at Shibe park and gave his players freedom for the afternoon after their arrival.

"What we need is rest," ventured Kiki Cuyler. The A's did not work out in Chicago, before the first game. If they did not need it there, the assumption of familiarity with the home grounds made it doubly unnecessary today.

The March of Progress

THE FAIR STORE is celebrating its 41st birthday and it is a significant occasion. For no year, since our inception, way back when Escanaba was but a straggling village on a sandy point, is greater in accomplishment. 1929 has seen the completion of the rebuilding of the Fair Store into an institution unsurpassed in beauty and efficiency in Northern Michigan. It has also seen public recognition extended throughout the Upper Peninsula, that the Fair Store sells only better quality merchandise.

The people of Escanaba can take pride in these accomplishments which have caused the residents of other cities to recognize this store as one of the most beautiful and unique institutions in the Peninsula, because the Fair Store is an Escanaba institution . . . home owned and managed by Escanaba people . . . living for Escanaba alone. For 41 years it has faithfully served Escanaba and has been a vital part of the civic growth of the city.

It is easy to understand why the Fair Store has made such great strides in the last two years despite the fact that so many independent stores have given way to the chains. It recognized the force of progress and it too progressed. By affiliating itself with 215 leading independent stores throughout the country for pooled buying purposes the Fair Store has obtained a buying power that is greater than 90% of the chains in existence. Thus it can offer better quality at lower prices. A simple comparison of price for price, quality for quality will prove that fact. But further it has kept its identity as a home owned store . . . as an individual part of Escanaba. The Fair Store is not a machine age, pattern cut, institution common to every city . . . but it has all the advantages of massed buying without sacrificing the individuality of its merchandise.

Ambition makes for accomplishment and it has been the aim of the founder of the Fair Store, Herman Gessner, to give to Escanaba a store that remains a part of the community . . . a store that commands the respect and pride of every Escanaban. That success was made possible through the unswerving faith and confidence of the people of Escanaba is a fact we recognize with deep gratefulness. And so on the occasion of our 41st Anniversary we wish to express our appreciation to our friends for their years of loyalty and encouragement and we pledge ourselves to continue to serve Escanaba to the best of our ability as an Independent Escanaba Institution.
