MACDONALD IS NOT PLANNING TO RESIGN JOB

CABINET COMPLETES PROGRAM, CALLS FOR SESSION

BY VICTOR EUBANK (Associated Press Staff Writer) London, Sept. 2 (AP)—The national cabinet completed its new taxation program at a five-hour meeting today and a call was issued for parliament to meet in special session September 8 to enact the program into law.

The government made it clear there will be no dilly-dallying in the house of commons by deciding to ask for a vote of confidence on the opening day of the session without explaining the economy and taxation program designed to cope with the national financial emergency.

Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald will ask the house to declare without delay whether it will put its trust in the three-party administration he heads. If the expected vote of confidence is forthcoming, Philip Snowden, chancellor of the exchequer, will make a full statement setting forth the entire budget balancing scheme on Thursday.

Refuses to Resign. Mr. MacDonald today informed his constituents at Seaham Harbor that he intended to retain his parliamentary seat until he has disposed of the financial emergency.

In a letter to the Seaham Harbor Labor Party, which demanded his resignation from his seat in the commons because he accepted the prime ministership of a government in which the Liberals and Conservatives are participating, he declared that any action he might take "will be only after I have finished the duty which I am now undertaking and not before."

The cabinet's financial plan for rescuing the treasury embodied two principal bills having to do with new taxes and revenues. Just what these are is a state secret, but the whole population, from the lowest to the highest, is preparing to participate.

Beer, wines and tobacco as well as theatres, movies, cricket, horse racing and all amusements are expected to bear increased taxation. It is believed, however, that the government will go lighter on beer than anything else because it is the beverage of the low wage worker.

This will be the first special session of parliament since the war. The summons for it was issued tonight by Captain E. A. Fitzroy, speaker of the house.

Announcement that the cabinet had completed its plans came as a surprise as only a few days ago it was believed the multitudinous details involved would make necessary a delay in the opening of parliament.

Lansing Man Held As Robber of Bank Sunfield, Mich., Sept. 2 (AP)—The Sunfield State Savings bank closed its doors today as state police were holding William M. Morefield, 39 year old automobile worker of Lansing, for investigation in connection with the $1,577 holdup and robbery of the institution last Friday morning by three bandits.

A notice on the door of the bank today said the institution was in the hands of the state banking department. While a state banking examiner was making an investigation today, Sheriff S. F. Cribb, of Charlotte, was prepared to inquire into the possible connection between the robbery and the closing of the bank. A. H. Sayer is president of the bank.

The Face of A 1931 Bluebeard!

This remarkable closeup photograph clearly shows the hypnotic eyes and the vulture-like features of Harry Powers, modern Bluebeard who lured love-seeking women to their doom, hanged them and dropped their bodies into a subterranean chamber.

BY BERYL MILLER

For centuries, the mention of this name, with its memories of wholesale murder, has sent chills scurrying up the back of law-abiding people.

And as Harry F. Powers, the pudgy, 45-year-old "West Virginia Bluebeard," faces prosecution for wholesale murders in his tiny garage near Clarksburg, other famous mass slayings are recalled.

The most famous of all murderers is Bluebeard himself, the monster of Charles Perrault's tale, published in 1697, who slew his wives and hid their bodies in a locked room.

As the tale goes, Bluebeard prohibited his newest wife from opening a locked door during his absence; she disobeyed, discovered the gruesome secret, and was rescued just as Bluebeard prepared to add her to his list of seven victims.

Most famous of modern Bluebeards, perhaps, was Henri Landru, a graciously mannered Frenchman. Landru made love to 300 women and lured 10 of them to his villa to kill them for their property. Landru was guillotined in Paris in 1924, even though none of the bodies of his victims were recovered.

Then there was "Bluebeard" Watson of California, who in 1920 was sentenced to life imprisonment. Married to a score of women, he confessed slaying nine. Later, he claimed he had taken only one life.

INVESTIGATORS could never understand what it was that attracted women to the "Bluebeard of Marseilles," arrested by French who registers will get a badge. In addition there are badges for the Forty and Eight, American Legion Auxiliary and members of the various committees, a total of about 150,000 badges.

Word also has been received at the Legion's headquarters that a shipment of 10,000 army cots, mattresses, pillows and linen is enroute to Detroit for the convention. The war department authorized the loan of these cots to the Legion for use in hotel rooms and at Convention Hall, which will be used as a dormitory during the convention.

police. Squat in stature, crooked-legged and bent, with harsh voice and rough manners, this "Bluebeard" told women that he was gentle and kind and would make a good husband. Bodies of three women were uncovered in 1923. He had easily induced them to accept offers of marriage and turn over their money to him.

America's famous "Women Bluebeard" was Belle Guinness, who lured men to her farmhouse near LaPorte, Ind., to take their funds through marriage and then kill them. Her crimes came to light when her farmhouse burned in 1908, and police found bodies of 13 men buried nearby. Mrs. Guinness was never captured.

MAY NOT BE SO BAD AFTER ALL

ANNOUNCEMENT made by officials of the Ford Motor company that about 50,000 men will be called back to work by the middle of September, undoubtedly will be followed by similar announcements from other automobile manufacturers.

The revival of activity in the automotive industry will have some beneficial effect even locally. Escanaba's unemployed list has been swelled considerably during the past year with former residents, mostly of the younger generation, returning from the industrial centers to live with their parents or other relatives until business picks up.

We have heard pretty much talk around town of late that a hard winter faces us. August of this year found the country in about the same mood as it was in the same month of the 1921 depression. It will be recalled that in August, 1921, the economic outlook was depressing in the extreme, and apparently destined to grow steadily worse.

But in September, 1921, or less than 30 days after the country was hopelessly and helplessly contemplating the trough of depression, the trend of business had turned upward, and within another four months the recovery was well under way.

This comparison between the 1921 and 1931 periods of depression probably should not be taken too seriously, but anyhow it is better to take the optimistic slant at the situation.

At least, there are definite indications that the coming winter locally will not be so tough as a lot of pessimists would like to picture it. The Escanaba Paper company, for instance, is expecting continuous operation at virtually full capacity. The I. Stephenson company will positively reopen within six weeks, and in all likelihood the Birds-Eye and Escanaba Veneer mills will be running this winter.

Marquette, where three gangsters, foiled in an attempt at escape, and one confederate, committed suicide. The three desperadoes realized that they would be captured. They twisted Patrick's Henry's challenging words, "give me liberty or give me death," to their own crooked needs. They weren't game enough to meet their conquerors. So they killed themselves.

But as they started their attempt at freedom they shot the prison physician. It was a cowardly act. Even gangsters sometimes are better sports than that. The three men pretended they were ill. They appealed to Dr. A. W. Hornbogen for medical attention which was granted immediately. Probably laughing to themselves at their own cleverness the crooks cold-bloodedly killed the physician.

Blood thirsty enemies of society can scarcely be called men. They are motivated entirely by beastly motives, and if another is in their way, he must die. Not because he has wronged them. Just because he happens to be there. With so many finer interests in the world it is regrettable that society must spend so much of its time and money in destroying a human element that cannot be controlled in any other fashion. This element must be stamped out before people will be free to pursue more pleasant lines of interest.

Life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness are all endangered today. More so, because the criminal-minded have access to the same scientific knowledge that the protective element has. Desperadoes, at heart, are cowards. The Marquette prisoners were. When they were defeated they killed themselves rather than face the consequences. A good old-fashioned scare may not convert a desperado but it will protect an innocent man sometimes.

THE INDIANS' CLAIM ASSOCIATED PRESS dispatches from Shawnee, Okla., telling of a conference of Pottawatomie Indians at which plans were made to press their claim to lake shore property in Chicago, has an element of local interest.

The majority of the Indians on the reservations at Harris and Nahma are members of the Pottawatomie tribe, and for years they have been anxiously awaiting settlement of this claim. The Pottawatomies were among the tribes who, almost a century ago, relinquished their lands in Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan and Indiana by the St. Joseph treaty and other agreements signed with the government. They now contend, however, that shore property, known as Chicago's gold coast, was reserved as hunting and fishing grounds for them.

In giving up their lands these Indians were sent to the waste lands of Nebraska and Kansas, which had been established as reservations by the government. Disillusioned, some of them drifted back to northern Wisconsin and Michigan. The ancestors of the Pottawatomies, now located in this county, settled for awhile along the shore of Lake Michigan in northeastern Wisconsin, and a few years later came to the site of old Ford River. Later, they were given government land on the reservation near Harris.

This is a poor time of the year to get heated up over frozen assets. One of Mahatma Gandhi's ten rules of life is that it is man's primary duty to serve his neighbor. Cruel and inhuman treatment—if the home brew in India is the same as it is in this country. Maybe the grasshoppers in Nebraska and North Dakota are only making hey-hey while the sun shines. Action in Tennessee against Clarence Darrows film may be taken to mean that the state wants no more money business. If this arrangement for using wheat and oats for legal tender goes on, one of these days we'll be paying for a pair of garters with a bunch of radishes.

GUILTY LIPS

(By NEA Service) By Laura Lou Brookman

CHAPTER XIII THE glowing orb of molten gold stirred gently and moved to the right. Out of the sunlight it was not glowing metal at all but a mass of tangled and unruly curls. Norma shook her head and the bobbing tendrils that had been obscuring the vision of her left eye fell back into place.

Curled up in the huge rose tapestry chair the girl seemed a tiny creature. She wore a negligee of blue. It was skimpily cut, made of cheap material but as gloriously azure as the heavens on a perfect July morning. A worn black satin mule flopped back from one bare foot. Norma's loose sleeves fell away almost to the shoulder, revealing arms of creamy whiteness. Like the rest of Norma's body the arms were exquisitely formed, slender but rounded.

She was smiling. Not at the young man across the room. His back was toward her. Norma smiled at the reflection in the mirror of the dressing table. It showed a young man, content, energetically brushing a shock of brown hair back from his forehead. He was an unusually good-looking youth even when he frowned, as he did just then, and threw down the brush to tug at his necktie. Suddenly he caught Norma's eyes watching him in the mirror. The frown became a grin. Mark whirled.

"See here, Mrs. Travers!" he said. "Do you call yourself a helpful wife? Sitting there taking my mind off everything I try to do? Can't even tie my tie decently? See here, what kind of conduct do you call that?" In three strides he was across the room, perched on the arm of Norma's chair and tussling her curls. The girl laughed and tried to defend herself. A moment more and Mark had routed her from the chair, appropriated it himself. He held Norma, protesting gaily, in his arms and the game became a spirited contest. Much rubbing of blond curls the wrong way. It was exciting fun—half-play, half-endearment. Flushed and breathless, at last Mark claimed undisputed victory. At last he placed a long kiss squarely on the girl's lips.

Norma lay back and looked at him from beneath the dark fringes of her lashes. "Look at your tie now," she suggested demurely. "It was worse—oh, so very much worse than it had been! Travers grimaced in mock dismay. He shook his head. "So this is married life! Terrible—terrible!" A little beyond reach stood the breakfast table. It had been abandoned some time since and was littered with crumpled napkins and soiled dishes. There were pink roses in a silver vase in the center of this disarray. Norma drew herself away. "It really is terrible!" she agreed. "Goodness, it must be—why, look!—nearly 11 o'clock! Oh, Mark, think of all the things we should be doing! They won't have any idea at the office what's become of me. Mr. Brooks will be furious—"

"Let 'em worry. You're never going back there again." "But, Mark, don't you think—" A KNOCK at the door interrupted. It was the waiter who had come to take away the breakfast table. As he was leaving Mark took out his wallet and stuffed a bill into the man's hand. The waiter bowed, murmured thanks and departed.

Mark did not replace the wallet. Instead he opened it again, drew out a collection of coins and greenbacks and looked at them. A rueful smile spread over his face. He scratched his chin meditatively. "There was exactly $36 in that wallet yesterday," he announced. "Ninety-six dollars." Suddenly the bright grin returned. "Madame!" he declared with dramatic eloquence, "with all my worldly goods I thee endow! Thirteen dollars and forty-five cents! Count 'em. Thirteen dollars!" He flung the contents of the purse into the girl's lap. He was laughing and Norma laughed, too. This was evidently a joke. She gathered the money together. "But you don't really mean it!" she protested. "Not—$96! You couldn't have spent all that in one day. Why? It's more than three weeks' salary!" Mark reversed the wallet, held it up, shaking it. "Must have spent it," he said. "It was here! You know," he went on, frowning as though in deep thought, "that's the queerest thing about money. I've thought of it before. Amazing things! One moment you have it and the next it's gone. Have you ever noticed it?" "Have I noticed it? Not often—than every third day after pay day for the last three years! Ever since I've been working—" Travers was not listening. With resolution he suddenly made for the coat draped on a chair across the room, thrust his arms into the sleeves and jerked a lapel into place. In a flash he had become businesslike.

The girl jumped to her feet. "Where are you going?" she asked. Mark came to her and put a hand on each of her shoulders. He smiled carelessly. "Promise to miss me horribly!" he demanded. "Promise every minute I'm away will seem an hour! Will you do that?" "Oh, but I don't want to be alone here. Mark! Can't I come, too?" Apparently this was not to be thought of. It was absolutely essential for Mark Travers to depart alone. But he would not be gone long. There was business to attend to and as soon as it had been settled he would come hurrying back. Norma's chagrin at this turn of events did not seem to displease young Travers.

She tried once more to speak of the office where she had been due at 8:30. Mark scoffed. "You're to stay here," he insisted. "Right here in this room! And honestly I won't be long. Why, darling, don't you realize this is the first day of our honeymoon? Don't think about jobs and offices. All that is past for you. You're Mrs. Mark Travers and a devil of a lucky girl your husband is! Well, he realizes it! Not much of a prize package perhaps. Just a dub, but he's managed to get himself the prettiest, cutest, sweetest little bride in all the world—" rooms? They couldn't stay on here. Where would they go? Mark's work in the real estate office had ended now. What would he do? What would she do? A thousand practical questions waited to be discussed. Neither she nor Mark had mentioned any of them. Again Norma thought of Brooks, Welliver and Brooks! It really had not been right to leave without notice. Of course 24 hours ago she herself hadn't the faintest notion that this morning she was to be Mark's wife. She treasured those words; repeated them slowly.

How she loved him! That was the tremendous, unquestioned fact of her existence now. How she loved this handsome husband! Norma dropped to the wide, deep cushions of the davenport. She was happy again in memories. For long minutes she lay there for her to do in this new whirlwind of living but to wait for Mark? Mark would make everything come right. Mark was so wonderful. She arose, went through the bedroom into the roseate, sunlit bathroom with its burnished nickel taps and fittings. She let cold water run and splashed her cheeks with it until they colored deeply. She brushed her hair and made the soft waves glisten. She saw the slim-whiteness of herself in the door-length mirror and admired it, grateful she could bring her beauty in tribute to Mark. There seemed little else that she had brought him.

Norma did not dawdle as she powdered, rouged her lips and slipped into her clothing. She hurried because Mark might return at any moment. She must be ready to leave when he returned. They couldn't remain in this extravagant place any longer. WHEN she had made herself as presentable as possible the girl spent a rueful moment before the mirror. Her dress was the one she had worn the night before. It was a brown crepe of utmost simplicity, bought only three weeks before. Modish, well-fitting in spite of its cheapness—but brown. Brown was no color for a bride to wear! Her neat pumps were brown, too, and she had worn the brown beret in place of a hat. It had seemed appropriate for the drive to Woodbury, less appropriate this morning. Well, doubtless hundreds of other brides who had made impulsive marriages had known the same pang over absence of wedding finery.

From the sitting room window Norma could see the huge clock on a sky-scraper tower two blocks away. Twenty after twelve now. Mark had been gone nearly an hour. She tried to peer down into the street to see if she could see him. That was ridiculous. The window was on the eighth floor and it was impossible to look straight downward.

Well, she could write the letter to Brooks, Welliver and Brooks explaining why she was giving up her work. It was a difficult letter to write. Norma sat at the neatly appointed desk a long while before she put her pen down on the fresh paper. She began three separate pages and in rapid succession discarded them. It was fully 45 minutes before the note was finished and then Norma studied it with dissatisfaction before finally the sheet was folded and inserted in its envelope. She addressed it but left the flap unsealed. She would ask Mark what he thought of the note before mailing it. Surely Mark should be there! Terror with clutching, vise-like fingers of ice gripped the girl's heart. A traffic accident—a stranger misstep—oh, if anything had happened—! Again she sought the window. Then for 10 minutes Norma paced back and forth—back and forth. She could not sit still but she must stop this worrying. She must believe nothing terrible had happened. It was only a foolish nightmare. Mark would be there any moment now. She sat down again. A moment more and she was on her feet, as restless as before. The frightful premonition would not be downed. At 3 o'clock Norma was still waiting. She was still alone. What had become of Mark Travers? Could this be his father's work? (To Be Continued)

LYRICS OF LIFE

By Douglas Malloch (Copyright 1931 by Douglas Malloch)

THE SOURCE OF ALL I love the drums, but not the drums That march ahead of men: It is the thunder when it comes Across the hills again. It bids a man to lift his eyes And give attention to the skies, Too much attracted to the ground, Too much concerned with things around.

I love to hear the musketry Advance across the plain, I love to hear, to feel, to see, The musketry of rain. We look upon our harvest fields And proudly talk of crops, of yields, Forgetting every grain we crave. It was not earth but heaven gave.

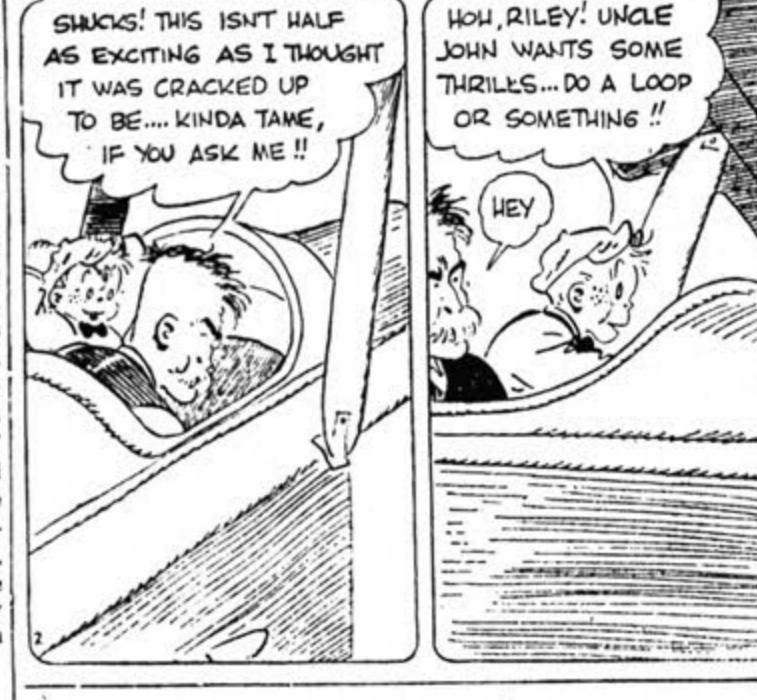

I love to hear the loud command Of lightning like a sword. When men forget, who look at land, The presence of the Lord. Grown busy with our little world, All suddenly a voice is hurled From out of heaven, to recall To vagrant men the source of all.

AUGUST WARM, SHORT ON RAIN

Records at Escanaba Show 93 Degrees Highest Mark

August wound up with a mean temperature of 64.7, which was 0.4 above normal covering a period of 60 years, but was cooler than August of 1930. The highest temperature mark of the month was 93, on the fifth, just one degree under the absolute maximum of the 60-year period of observations at Escanaba, according to the records of the U. S. weather bureau here. The thermometer on the fifth of August slid down 26 degrees for the greatest daily range of the month. The coldest day of the month was last Sunday, Aug. 30, when the low mark of the month was reached at 41. No frosts were reported, though potato vines and other green crops sensitive to cold were reported to have been withered in some parts of the county.

The year 1931 has been keeping up its warm record consistently, with an average daily excess in temperature of 3.5 degrees, a total of 861 degrees over normal since January 1.

August was drier than normal, with a deficiency record here of nearly two inches. The total precipitation for the month was 1.25 inches, and the deficiency since Jan. 1 has been nearly six inches. Rainfall was recorded on 10 different days of August. Nine days were cloudy, 10 partly cloudy, and 12 clear. Two days, the third and the twentieth, had 100 per cent sunshine. Fogs were recorded on Aug. 15, 16, 27 and 31, and thunderstorms on Aug. 18, 23, 31.

More Gasoline Tax. "As a result," Mr. Fitzgerald said, "many more cars were run."

Car Licenses Now Half Price; 5,599 Sold to Date in Escanaba

Starting Tuesday morning, Sept. 1, bargain rates went into effect at the local secretary of state branch agency in the State Savings Bank at Escanaba. Licenses for trucks, trailers, passenger cars and motorcycles are now sold at half price. They are good until the first of 1932, or until the secretary of state's office declares the 1931 plates void. Frank G. Fitzgerald, secretary of state, in a recent address at the Soo, indicated that Michigan automobile owners will again be given until March 1 to purchase their new license plates, and that this plan will be in effect as long as he is in office.

Mr. Fitzgerald explained that following the law which took effect early in 1931 giving the secretary of state power to extend the time in which to purchase the licenses, he exercised the prerogative and extended time to March 1 in the belief that it would greatly aid the pocketbooks of the poorer people at a time when Christmas was just past, with numerous bills for fuel and clothing coming due.

Mr. Fitzgerald said, "many more cars were run."

AMUSEMENTS

AT THE MICHIGAN
"Ten Nights in a Bar-Room" now showing at the Michigan theatre holds the interest of its audience chiefly because it does not allow spoken dialog to at any time interfere with the acting capabilities of its experienced cast. Had an endless flow of words been injected into the scenes much of its powerful dramatic appeal would have been lost.

As it is "Ten Nights" presents an excellent combination of silent drama together with just the right amount of dialog, thereby permitting the audience to experience and feel the emotions and moods of the players rather than have spoken lines recited to them.

The story is one of father love and a child's faith. Little Mary Morgan could not forget the time when her father was a kind and loving pal to her, even though he had now become a confirmed drunkard, he was her father and that was all that mattered.

The memory of those happier days, is the great stirring force that takes the little child out of her bed at night to go in search of her father. She being the only person that can deter him from his sordid path. Her faith in him in the end is rewarded but not until a tragic happening occurs which brings about her father's regeneration. The picture closes with a smashing fight between William Farnum and Thomas Santchi as the old saloon burns over their heads.

AT THE DELFT
Five years was not too long to wait for such an epic motion picture as "An American Tragedy." Since publication of Theodore Dreiser's epic novel, "An American Tragedy," the screen world has waited for the perfection of the talking picture medium, the only medium in which this tremendously moving drama could properly be presented; waited for the right director to transfer its pulsing drama to the screen; waited for the right players to enact its tence, human characters.

Marriage Business Good During August

August was almost as popular as June in marriage licenses, according to records at the Delta county clerk's office. A total of 34 permits to wed were issued out of the county clerk's office last month, as compared with 13 in July. In June there were 36 licensed to travel double.

DEATH PENALTY BACK
Rome—The death penalty for murder has been restored in Italy as a result of a new Fascist penal code. Italy was the first European country to abolish the death penalty, and since 1890 that crime has not been punishable by death except for high political crimes.

Forest Products Starting to Move

Signs of activity in the forest product business are indicated in word coming from the Rock and Whitefish districts. The C. & N. W. is preparing to move out the first of several consignments of timber from these two areas. Jobbers report orders for about 100 cars of their products.

Aboard Airliner Eastern Air Transport

“Dear Peggy

I'm almost too excited to write, and there's so much to see, both inside the plane and out. We've left Washington behind now, and I've just had a Chesterfield in the smoking compartment—they serve them on every ship.

“Among the eighteen passengers there's a senator and a foreign diplomat, and I'm surprised at the number of women. The trip is two hundred miles and the meter in the cabin reads two miles a minute, think of that.

“For me, the Chesterfields were the nicest touch of all. I was just dying for a smoke, and when the hostess passed them (and my favorite cigarette at that) everyone else seemed as tickled as I was. And my—they did taste good!

Chesterfields are served in the smoking compartments of all these planes—the smooth and most luxurious in the East. With the fast growth of air travel, Chesterfield makes many new friends each day, here as in city streets and country homes—wherever good taste counts.

A mild cigarette—delightfully mild and smooth—with a tobacco fragrance all its own.

Whether you're air-minded or not, you'll always find Chesterfield on the air-line to taste—the quickest way to get there. They Satisfy!

ORE IS MOVING AT CHAPIN MINE

26,000 Tons Expected to Come Through Escanaba

Although ore shipments from the Escanaba docks have fallen off this season, there are indications that the movement from the mines will continue late in the shipping season.

At the West Chapin mine, work on the excavation of 13,000 tons of iron ore for shipment to the Jackson Iron and Steel Co., Jackson, Mich., is progressing rapidly, and E. C. Bradley, Crystal Falls contractor who is doing the work, says that another order may be received before the present contract is completed. One shovel is being used to scoop up the rock loosened by dynamite and load it into C. & N. W. cars on an adjoining spur track. The ore comes by rail to Escanaba, and thence by boat and rail to Jackson.

It is the second successive season that Bradley has had the job of taking out ore from the West Chapin open pit for the Jackson company. Approximately 26,000 tons were shipped out last year. The Jackson company has obtained a long-term lease from the Keweenaw Land company, owners of the West Chapin and indications are that the property will be worked again next year.

Ten men are employed on the job at present, and the work has been in progress for the past three weeks. Much of the first week was spent in stripping the surface from an extended vein facing the Chapin mine, and excavation of that vein began about two weeks ago.

Duck Season Will Open Next Oct. 1

Attention to the fact that the open season on ducks is two weeks later this year is called by Herman Leisner, conservation officer. The season on ducks, which formerly opened on September 15, does not open this year until October 1. The season, as usual, will continue until December 15.

Some of the favorite duck hunting spots of Escanaba nimmers are Portage Point, the mouth of Whitefish river, and Garth on Little Bay de Noc. Whitefish lake, near Gould City, and other inland lakes also attract many hunters.

The bay shore between Light-house and Brewery point, within the Escanaba city limits, continues to be a bird refuge. Rice has been planted there by the conservation department, and the preserve is inhabited as a result by an increasing number of ducks.

Another change in the laws is that concerning the training of dogs prior to the game season. Last year it was lawful to train dogs on such game as might be lawfully hunted 60 days prior to the opening of the season. This year the period for the lawful training of dogs has been cut to 30 days.

The season remains closed again this year on partridge and prairie chicken.

The resident small game license has been increased from $1 to $1.75 and resident deer license from $2.50 to $3.50. The camp permit for deer, formerly costing $2.50, will now cost $3. Other licenses remain the same.

The deer season remains the same, from November 15 to November 30. One buck with not less than three inch antlers may be taken.

The rabbit season extends from October 1 to January 31. Fox squirrel may be hunted from October 1 to October 10, but black and grey squirrel are protected until 1932.

The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Max Neumann, as matron of honor, and Miss Emma Proehl, as bridesmaid, while the groom was attended by Albert Vietzke, as best man, and William Turan. The bride wore a beautiful white satin gown, with a bridal wreath and veil, and carried a bouquet of pink roses. The bride was born in this community and graduated from the local high school. During the past four years she has been employed in the office of the Swift Packing company in Chicago, while her husband has also been employed by the same company. They will make their home in Chicago and both will resume their respective positions.

Installation of a station agent at Wallace was announced yesterday by the C. & N. W. division office at Escanaba. The railway station at this point was burned in a forest fire which swept that district this spring, and for several weeks a caretaker had charge of the business at the station. The caretaker has now been replaced by an agent, and a combination passenger and baggage car serves as a station.

At Nadeau, on the same line, a caretaker has been installed to take the place of an agent. This change will not affect service to the public from this station, officials announce, except that Nadeau will become a "prepaid" station. Freight out of Nadeau must be paid for by the consignee, and shipments received at the station must be prepaid by the shipper, as the caretaker does not handle money.

Special Rates Given to Escanaba Men for Big Detroit Convention

All Escanaba American Legion men planning to attend the national convention at Detroit the week of September 21 are urged by Commander Henry Breaux to notify E. W. Andrews, local adjutant, at once. Special rates are available by railroad to those who notify the adjutant in advance, and registrations must also be sent to Detroit in advance. Membership cards for 1932 are also necessary to secure recognition as a member at the national convention, and a supply of the cards has been received by Adjutant Andrews, ready for issuing to all Legionnaires who apply. On account of the date of the national convention falling at the same time as the regular meeting day of the Escanaba Legion, the local meeting will be held one week earlier this month, and has been called for September 14. Newly elected officers of the post will be installed at that time. Now read the Classified page.
