On Monday last the Superintendent of the village schools, Mrs. Kimball, reported an attendance of 48 scholars; a fraction over one-half of those enrolled in the district; some of the rooms crowded and others with quite a number of vacant seats.

The school meeting last Monday night was the largest ever held in the place; many had to wait a long time to get in; the talk was a little more than anything else, and was very interesting, and was very well received. No question was asked and the vote was taken for election of a member of the school board for three years; which resulted in the election of Samuel Mix. For the two years, the report of the school was very good, and placed on file. The vote was a balance in this respect; you can see $4,000 and they voted to raise $8,000 by a tax of ten cents.

Wood dealers are making their reports for the winter. Some will have to be hauled to town on wagons to keep up going until sleighing comes.

Many have asked who our popular writer "C. C." is; whose writings frequently are copied into other papers? Well, don't you see that the C. C. is all the name we are permitted to make public.

Barn Burned.

Monday night the barn on the farm owned by Rev. near Thompson, about 1/2 mile from town, was burned, destroying a large amount of hay. We have heard no particulars about the origin of the fire. Only about one year ago Mr. Rice lost his dwelling house by fire, and the loss was considerable.

Several School Children.

D. W. Thompson has completed the school census of this district and reports the total enrollment to be 568, divided as follows: 531 on the east side of the river and 127 on the west side. The only new school last year was only 120-200 on the west side and 320 on the east; not half the school in town we sent to school. This is all well and amply for the present position of affairs, but so that parents hereafter should be compelled to obey the law. We must have a truant officer.

Terrible Accident.

Saturday night while at work running the hand saw for Hall & Bell at South Manistique, Gideon Griselin, a man about 40 years of age and having a number of children, received a severe injury to his head. The saw struck a spike that had been driven into a saw-log and broke into fragments, one piece struck him on the forehead, pushing the skull in. Dr. Burdick and Dr. Hovey were called and tried the unfortunate man and took out quite a number of pieces of bone, lying bare the brain. He was alive Monday morning and still there is little hope of his recovery. He has been a resident of South Manistique since June last and is spoken of as a very nice man and citizen. There was a report that another man was badly hurt at the same time, but that was not confirmed.

It is Said.

That if anything in this column fits your case, you're welcome to it.

That the thermometer has passed the danger point of being melted by heat.

That the summer girl like the bathing suit joke, will soon be out of season.

That the principal reason many cannot be "master of the situation" is that they're "not in it."

That if a "kid" going down a set whiskies at a dog, every man will be turning around to see if he is wanted.

That a certain young man called on one of Manistique's belles, and that he was a "society" sort of a fellow.

That a young lady is making a very quiet life which have been given by her devoted admirers, and that her pillows are stuffed with love letters.

That a great many girls and boys had their eyes "popped" out last night and that parents ought to watch over the youngsters with a more discerning eye.

That some of the young ladies in this city are going to learn how to whistle since they heard a couple of gentlemen sing "Whistle and Pipe Come to Me."

That some girls will love a man if he makes them believe every thing they say is true, but at this is very hard to do, as every eye is not possessed of a lawyer's eye.

When all the men go to the woods Manistique will resume its usual winter quietude.

Next year our school meeting will have to be held in the Opera House, so that all can get in.

Kirwin has opened a tailor shop in the room on Walnut street recently vacated by Mr. Peterson.

There is some sickness reported in different localities, and it may be some kind of cholera on the list.

Aphorisms—Laconic—Proverbs.

Every love contains its own truth. Virtue cannot exist without justice.

Justice grows under every weight imposed upon it.

The sickness of fortune is full all over the world.

Praying which is lost, makes the remembrance dear.

Everything great is composed of minute particles.

Without virtue, happiness can never be real, or permanent.

No one is qualified to command who has not learned to obey.

Buyance of spirit greatly diminishes the pressure of misfortune.

If woman taught the philosophy of love, who would not learn.

A laugh costs too much if purchased at the expense of propriety.

It will show spontaneously, it cannot be produced by study.

Nothing bears a stronger resemblance to a man than a drunkard.

The act is to be judged by the intention of the person who does it.

Do not yield to misfortunes; but resist them with increasing firmness.

To wicked persons the virtue of others is always a subject of envy.

He who envies the lot of another, must be discontented with his own.

No plan of expellency shall reconcile us to the commission of a base act.

A man fond of disputing, will, in time have few friends to dispute with.

It is not sufficient that you are heard; you must be heard with pleasure.

Worldly spoken from alife of love, one is exceedingly sweet, and profitable to all.

Unprofitable speech is like the cyprus, which is green and tall, yet bears no fruit.

The sure method of being deceived is to consider ourselves more cunning than others.

Men of limited attainments are apt to condemn every thing they fail to comprehend.

There is a great difference between poetry and rhymetry; the former grows the latter is made.

Young people are apt to think themselves wise enough; as drunkards think themselves sober enough.

A trying disposition into what does not suit one, and a taunting tongue are two very common faults.

We must not do evil, that good may come of it; the means must answer and correspond to the end.

They, who love flattery, are in a fair way to repent of their weakness; yet few are those who are not struck.

When we are convinced that our opinions are erroneous, it is always right to acknowledge it, and exchange them for truer.

The precept and truths of the word of God, are the very laws of divine order, and so far as our minds are receptive of them, we are made in the image of our order and the divine order in us, if in life agreeing with them.

What a conser is woman! None but her presence can so win a man from his sorrow, make placid the knit brow, and wreath the stern lip into a smile. The soldier becomes a light, some joy at her feet; the anxious statesman smiles himself back to free hearted youth beside her; and the still blended countenance of care, brightens beneath her influence as the closed flower blooms in the sunshine.

Morning bath for once of gladness. Nightly moon to be loved again. Frequent hours, their gentle smiles. Night is dreams, and rest from care. But the positive "white" ever. Give the love of love, love ever. Know really on love.

Would you taste the fragrant sweet? Be sure you have the power. Be sure of love, devoid of light. Devoid of all that pollutes life. And much "white" in their place. To reach the love of love, love ever.

Ask of neither earth why she made thee, earth, and earth will be made thee, earth, C. C.

LANSING, Mich., Sept. 2.—Shortly before midnight tonight Byron M. Brown, an old and well known resident of this city, shot and killed Montague Henderson in a quarrel over a poker game. The shooting took place in Brown's room over William Land's saloon on East Michigan avenue, next door to police headquarters, and the only witnesses were Fred C. and a young man named Henry, both of whom have been detained. They are very reticent regarding the murder, and all that is known at this hour is that trouble arose over a game of cards and ended in the shooting.

Democrats who are accusing the McKinley law of looting the treasury seem to get the fact that the Congress which had 150 Democratic majority during its two years passed appropriations amounting to $35,468,000 more than the Republican "billion dollar Congress," which preceded it.

How We Enjoy Politics.

To those of us who belong to the country, but not to either political party, and don't care a rap whether a man is a Republican or a Democrat as long as he pays his bills promptly, the present situation is full of interest.

When Mr. Cleveland goes fighting, for example, the Republican party gives us a cartoon which no one can help laughing at, however mad it may make him, for the present, because of the proportion of the big gun in the middle of the world, while the Democrats give us a cartoon which is a large and extra-sensational paper, Democratic of course, and which is a station, and the Republican party is a perfect imitation of the same thing.

The New Showboat. There is a rumor that the Rockland Mill man's experiment that would seem to be a first class. He proposes to have him self build a boat that will be a full size and will be no different from the full size and will be no different from the full size and will be no different from the full size.

When all the world has been enlightened on this subject, the love whose breast holds a temper can seek serious accounts. We say this taking good care of his confidence and fully explain how the original trick of filling a grave for a while without dying is done.

The man of family who finds hard tugging things into the wall can take his wife aboard to one of these temples of temporary delay, and all can rest there until the crisis is past. So, too, the young man who has no money to spend on his vacation can find a way to get away in a machine of these places and get out that is all the while "toughing Europe."

The appearance of the extraordinary spots upon the globe face of the sun is a strikingly synchronous phenomenon upon which congress meets in extra session to discuss the silver situation.

There is a serious responsibility resting upon the man who constitute this people to the fifty-third congress, and all the inhabitants of this land of Michigan will watch their votes with a relentless determination to judge them individually according to their deeds. All that who resist the spirit of republicanism will be an evil way not too long hence.—Boston Globe.

A Modern Footstool. A story of the kind springing away of a young woman comes from Dillon, Mont., and is as follows: "Last Sunday, while Miss Fannie Hughes was returning to her father's home on Horse Prairie in company with James Lee, they were met by Bill Wells, a former admirer of the young lady and repudiated to a very tough citizen. Wells rode his pistol and ordered Lee to get on his horse. He then tied the girl's wrists to the pommel of his own saddle, and in that fashion they started for the Idaho hills. After going about 20 miles, Wells told Lee he might go home, which that man did. Wells went on to Idaho with the girl."

A Quaker in Westminster Abbey. An extraordinary event took place during the afternoon service in Westminster abbey yesterday. Samuel Fox, a Quaker, who is well known to the attendance for his persistent efforts to remain cordoned during divine services, declining to remove his hat, was after a violent struggle forcibly ejected. It required the efforts of four of the vergers to strip him from the building. Fox is well known in Oxford, where he has attended several meetings on the subject.—London Telegraph.

An Experiment with Quinine. It remained for a Lawrence woman to find a new way to take quinine without having to take it in the mouth. She had the chemist in her little shop, and she tried rubbing it with a mixture of grease and alcohol. The chemist, and the woman is going to get a patent on it.—Lawrence (Kan.) Gazette.

Voorhees and Judas. The Republican has never at any time in its existence seen any occasion for commending Senator Voorhees of Indiana, unless he might be entitled to some consideration for his present attitude on the currency question, or rather the silver portion of it. Voorhees always was a democrat, of the Brick Pomeroy and Valandigham stamp during the war, and a sympathizer with the forces of Liberty in his own state during that period, but there is no good ground for the opinion of the silver-venter in comparing him with Judas because of his position upon silver coinage, and especially before they have consulted Judas as to his reasons for committing suicide almost immediately after having been paid off in silver.

Upon what foundation does their vehement declaration that Voorhees is a traitor rest? As chairman of the finance committee of the house he introduced a bill for the repeal of the silver purchasing act, accompanying it with an explanatory clause that this should not be construed as an admission that silver should be demonetized, but that all money, whether gold or silver or paper, issued under the authority of the United States should be equal in value. That was the declaration of the Chicago platform, which pronounced against the act of 1890, commonly called the Sherman act and denounced it as a fraud. It favored silver coinage, but in the terms just given above.

Thus it will be seen that in reporting a bill to repeal the purchasing clause of the Sherman act Mr. Voorhees was entirely in accord with his party platform and with the views of Mr. Cleveland, who was elected upon the Chicago platform.

It looks very much as though the traitors must be looked for in that faction of the democratic party in congress whose members are denouncing Mr. Voorhees.

The Review of Reviews for September contains many current portraits of interest, and is full of frank discussion of current topics. The editor states his views upon the money and business questions of the day, and the number is notable for a strong article from the pen of the distinguished Professor Von Holt, who writes to the editor of the Review of Reviews on the silver question. There is also a statistical and able article from Professor Edward W. Bemis on the Silver Situation in Colorado, from the point of view of the friends of silver. The distinguished authority of Professor Laurence Laughlin also analyzes the monetary situation. This number of the Review is attractive from numerous standpoints, but it will appeal specially to those who are concerned with the current financial questions.

The Pennsylvania Republicans at their recent state convention, adopted a plank recommending that representation in the national Republican convention of 1896 be based on the Republican vote at the election in 1892 and that the Republican national committee issue its call accordingly. This is right. It will give the Southern Republicans power in the convention only according to their voting force in their several states: They had extraordinary power in the 1892 convention, and controlled the action of the convention although not a single Southern state cast a Republican electoral vote.—Minneapolis Journal.

The New York World, in printing the pictures of shop girls and the pictures of society girls side by side and asking its readers to guess "which is which," is giving them a hard task. Nature puts no mark on the shop girl's forehead to indicate her work, and there is no halo about a society girl which will enable any one to distinguish her as such. The shop girl of to-day, too, may be the society girl of to-morrow, and vice versa.

A terrible cyclone lately struck Savannah, Ga. Forty persons are reported killed, and $10,000,000 worth of property destroyed.

CURE SICK HEAD
The influence of tobacco on vision. In a very suggestive, interesting paper, read before the Mississippi Valley Association, Francis Dowling, M. D., discusses "The Influence of Tobacco on Vision," and shows, as the result of careful investigation, by himself and others, that impaired vision is one of the consequences of the greater absorption of nicotine, even more than smoking. He cites the testimony of German writers, the majority of whom are inclined to the opinion that as the majority of great smokers are also drinkers, a large share of the visual trouble is due to alcohol. Dr. Dowling conducted a personal examination of about ten percent of the employees of a Cincinnati factory employing 1,500 men, and found many of them suffering from a gradual failure of vision, men who themselves use tobacco, either chewing or smoking, while, with one exception, the women employees of the same factory who were examined by him gave no evidence of tobacco poisoning as manifested by troubles of vision. Tobacco poison is a menace to continued good vision. The results of Dr. Dowling's investigation admonish all tobacco-users, old and young, to discontinue the evil habit.
