Manistique Pleas-ure

Manistique, Mich., Sept. 21, 1900.

The Secretary Journal is no more. Manistique is a Dwyer's town. It thinks him innocent.

The St. News devoted much space last week in writing up the mineral resources of the Michigan copper mining district.

Escanaba has a golf club, while Gladstone has a foot-ball. Manistique has no fun. All are too busy here to enter into or nurture these.

Dwyer has been pardoned. This act of executive clemency has not altered the world's opinion concerning the rottenness of French justice, however.

Ex-Congressman Stephenson it is said, will now enter the senatorial race. If he does, it will be a battle royal. He would make a very formidable candidate.

While we cannot all go to New York to witness Dewey next Friday, there is one thing that we can do. Every flag in the town should be unfurled to the breeze on that day and the day following.

The extensive terminals being constructed at Menominee by the Ann Arbor Co., and its determination to force the ice in Green Bay the coming winter omens ill for the utilization of Manistique's harbor the coming winter.

The normal school at Marquette opened this week with an attendance of sixty, with flattering prospects for more. Principal Waldo is a hustler. From appearances no mistake was made when he was given the charge of Michigan's infant educational institution.

The school board at Newberry is evidently composed of Bryanites. During the summer vacation a large picture of Columbus was taken from the walls of the school room and that of Bryan substituted. The News tersely says that if the board would displace Washington's picture with that of Aguirre, the commission would be complete.

"Peace first, then a government of law and order under the Stars and Stripes," as declared at Ocean Grove by President McKinley, will it is said, be heard on every stump not only this fall, but in the great campaign of 1900. The Republican leaders here are delighted with the cry furnished them by the president and say it expresses the policy better than a message to congress or a proclamation to the people could.

The job of census enumerator which so many men are neglecting their work to chase, will in no instance pay more than $25 and will not average more than $15. Enumerators will be paid at the rate of $2.50 for every hundred names turned in. Enumerators in the country will not be able to make more than $1 a day at this rate, no matter how good a hustler he is. Enumerators in the cities will not be able to make over $2.50 a day. In addition to their other work the enumerators must ask a long list of questions for every name they put down and make out three copies of their report. The job of census taker is about the poorest thing in the country and there is more grief in connection with it than there is about clerkship in a railroad office. The enumerators will not get to commence work before next spring and their pay will be held up until the whole job is completed and the corrections are made to satisfaction of the department.

WOMEN IN TROUBLE.

The Approach of Motherhood in the Occasion of Much Anxiety to All.

Every woman dreads the ordeal through which she must pass when she approaches the period of motherhood. The pain and suffering which is in store for her is a source of constant anxiety, fear and dread, to say nothing of the danger which is the common incident attendant. The joyous anticipations with which she looks forward to baby's coming give way to an unending anxiety, and she fully realizes the critical and trying event which will soon approach and have to be endured.

Women should hail with delight a remedy which insures to them immunity from the pain, suffering and danger incidental to child-bearing. Such a remedy is now offered, and women need not fear longer the hour of childbirth. "Mother's Friend" is a scientific instrument—and if used before confinement, gently and surely prepares the body for the great requirements and changes it is undergoing, insures safety to both mother and child, and takes her through the event with comparative ease and comfort. This wonderful remedy is praised by every woman who has used it.

What woman is not interested in "Mother's Friend"? This scientific remedy has been tested and its priceless value proven by the experience of thousands of happy mothers, who have used it during the most critical period of woman's life—the approach and continuation of motherhood.

It has won their everlasting praise, for it saves them hours and hours of their most trying hour and when most needed. "Before Baby is Born" is a little book that will show you how to use "Mother's Friend" and how to take full advantage of its great interest and benefit to all expectant mothers, and will be sent free to any address upon application to the Bradford Regulator Company, Atlanta, Ga.

WONDERFUL CURE OF DIARRHOEA.

A Prominent Virginia Editor had almost given up but was brought back to Perfect Health by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Read His Testimony.

I suffered with diarrhoea for a long time and thought I was past being cured. I had spent much time and money and suffered so much misery that I had almost decided to give up all hopes of recovery and await the result. But noticing the advertisement of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and also some testimonials stating how some wonderful cures had been wrought by this remedy, I decided to try it. After taking a few doses I was entirely well of that trouble and I was glad to say further to my readers and fellow sufferers that I am a hale and hearty man to-day and feel as well as I ever did in my life.—R. Moore. Sold by A. S. Putnam & Co., druggists.

Don't be Imposed Upon.

Always insist on getting Foley's Hony and Tar, as it is positively, absolutely and unqualifiedly the best cough medicine. Accept no substitute.

E. N. Orr & Co.

Mrs. Guy S. Muller has returned from Minneapolis.

Mothers of children afflicted with croup or a severe cold need not hesitate to administer Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It contains no opiate nor any other dangerous drug and may be given as confidently to the babe as to an adult. The great success that has attended its use in the treatment of colds and croup has won for it the approval and praise it has received throughout the United States and in many foreign lands. For sale by A. S. Putnam & Co., Druggists.

"This being so, it follows that the independent individual business-man must enter the employment of the trust.

Self preservation compels him. Thus to his family forces him to it. He becomes an employe instead of an employer. His trusted foreman and his employes must follow him. They have been close and daily association with him. The new order of things compels them to separate. They are both to become a part of the vast industrial army with no hopes and no aspirations—a daily task to perform and no personal interest and perhaps no pride in the success of their work. Their personal identity is lost. They become eggs and little wheels in a great, complicated machine. There is no real advance for them. As a result of the carelessness and heartless greed of the trusts in the almost unceasing effort to control trade, amputation and preventive genius will be deadened and killed.

"The effect of the trust upon our national life and our citizenship will not be sudden, perhaps. It will rather be a silent and gradual change. It may not be observed at once, but its influence will nevertheless be felt. The warning with which the history of the decadence and downfall of other nations furnishes us may not be heeded now. If not, we may pay the usual penalty of slavery to commercial avarice and greed. Increase of wealth of the country is greatly to be desired, but if the people are to be degraded to industrial slaves wading under such conditions is a curse.

"I favor complete and prompt annihilation of the trust—with the regard for property rights, of course. I care more for the independence and manliness of the American citizen than for all the gold and silver in the world. It is better to cherish the happiness of the American home than to control the commerce of the globe.

"The degrading process of the trust means much to the future of a republic founded upon democratic principles. A democratic republic cannot survive the disappearance of a democratic population."

Cherch Hills.

B. J. Sheridan, editor of the Western Spirit at Park Kan., would have the Kansas Legislature enact a law prohibiting changing of church bells. He says: "Men go to the bank or store at the proper time, women open up their millinery stores on time, without being rung up. They do no good. Really, they are a nuisance. There is neither utility or necessity for them. Their changing, whanging and banging provoke more people to wrath than they bring to repentance. People should go to church on time without the bell. Relying and depending on the bell is evidence that their devotion to God is very weak. If a person's religion is so weak that a hired man must break the communications of pulling a bell rope and get the person to go to a place for worship his religion will never save him."

WHEATBALE.

The lecture on Spanish-American war, at Whitelake last Friday eve, by Rev. R. Branch, was a success from every standpoint. For over two hours a well filled hall was interested, amused, entertained, and instructed by the speaker as only a man of his genius, ability, ripe well stored mind and perfect mastery of the English language coupled with the faculty of grasping general truths, accurately and at once, can do.

The public appreciated the fact that this noble man gave up time, private income, and furnished the advertising matter besides, to help a young colleague and friend through college; one who is working his way through in a manly independent way. Not one cent did Elder Branch take.

The public responded generously to the call. Nearly all of Whitelake that could "get there" were there. Big after rig rolled over from the Wood's neighborhood, while Marchelwood did not leave enough people at home for a corporate body group.

In order to stimulate a little good natured rivalry among the agents, the writer offered a book to the one that would sell the most tickets. Some did not hear of it soon enough. The contest was hot between Messrs. McGregg, Pawley, Rock and Mr. O. D. Parker. The first two ladies captured about 19 apiece, while Parker came in with 28 and Miss Rock made a home run with 31 and secured the title. But to our sorrow we have discovered that three tickets more should have been credited to Mr. Parker, making a tie with Miss Rock. This means the expense of another book to the individual or firm to do business on small scale. It tends to concentrate the ownership and management of all lines of business activity into the hands of a few. No one denies this.

CONFESSIONS

III.—CONTINUED

Going downstairs, we took our seats at the table. Looking over the company we had found much to be sorry for; for among the country, the country I found less sympathy because we were on it—1 made my remarks, but I maintained sufficient politeness to eat what was set before me, especially as I had not been served a quarter myself with my hosts.

"Are there no others to join us?" I asked.

"Mamma prefers to keep her room," I presume the person I saw at the window upstairs in the same apartment. Would you mind forwarding an invitation?"

A slight paler spread itself over her face. I regretted my words, but determined not to spoil our breakfast by again touching on that which would pain her. So I turned my remarks to ordinary topics. She listened to all I said, but I doubt if her mind was a moment off her critical position.

"Did you hear of my resolution?" "Tell me," I said, in a tone to invite confidence, "how did you receive it?" "I am glad to hear that you have given up those plans, knowing that to fight would be liable to a death penalty."

"Did you realize what you were doing?" "I still there was no answer. Why women be dumb when they have a great deal to say, and garrulous when their words are worthless? I got up from the table, examined my watch and found it was half past five. I looked at my watch and found it was half past five. I looked at my watch and found it was half past five."

"I haven't treated you kindly?" "Yes."

"You can confide in me. Tell me what all this means."

"What do you wish to know?" "You have declared yourself to be an agent, yet you are captured with information in your possession evidently destined for the confederates. I would expect another to tell any falsehoods, but you are so young, so apparently guileless. Give us a chance to—"

She extended her hand and grasped mine with a look of gratitude. "I thank you, but you can't help me."

"There was something," she declared in her withholding of confidence that I gain the effort to gain it.

"I must speak to you again, but before you go I want you to forgive me."

"Being your father?" "You are only doing your duty, and doing it as considerately as possible."

"And you don't think that it is?" "On the contrary, I like you."

I called the corporal of the guard, and he was conducted to his room.

I was no sooner away from her than I was vexed at the sympathy I had shown. What reason had I to interest myself in this young person, who had doubtless been selected for her work on account of her capacity for lying? I wanted to get rid of her and pull myself together, so I called for my horse, mounted, and sent him flying down the road to find Major Snaffle's two companies, and leading the pike unit a mile below, the major stretched on a flat, doing some of the men playing cards, and some on the ground in groups. All gave their best to pass them. They drove me as I mighting upon the road, without a word, till I reached an entrance from which I could see a long way ahead. Then I pulled up to enjoy the view.

The pike stretched southward, a straight white line, flanked by alternate openings and wooded hills. The road cast its early morning rays; the air was pure and the sky deep azure. Happening to cast my eyes on a point where the road was lost behind the woods, suddenly a horseman shot into my view. Distance prevented my distinguishing who or what he was, though the clear dry atmosphere through which I looked enabled me to see him distinctly. He was wearing half a dozen others, then the heat of a mounted column came into view. As they drew nearer the horseman halted, and prevented my discovering whether he wore the blue or the gray, but the sun shined brightly on a flag he carried, showing me plainly stars and bars of the confederates.

I dashed back at a gallop, drawing rein at Snaffle's tent, and finding the man in a short, fat, red-faced man with corkerous ears, could never get through a sentence without stuttering, except at giving the word of command, when, strange to say, his orders came clear and regular as shots from a repeating rifle.

"Wh-ah-ah's up?" "Johnnies, lots of them, down the road, come right on to us."

"I've only a h-ah-kind of men." "I'm a very good guard."

"I tell you what, I'm a very good guard, but you can't help me."

"You can't help me?" "I'm a very good guard, but you can't help me."

"I'm a very good guard, but you can't help me."

"Charge!" The initial force with my men, half forward, the defensive, was attacking, when they supposed we were about to surrender, soon became entangled in a struggle. These men, who were tried to get back. Through the ranks, I endeavored to join them, those wishing trying to get out, those not trying to get in, those in the passage packed like sardines in a tin can, but I found it impossible to get close to anyone. I was jostled and knocked about, and narrowly escaped being salaried or shot by my own men. I was turned round and saw a man in the house, borne backward by the general's force. I saw Margaret Beach at the window of her mother's room, unimpaired by the struggle that succeeded, struck near her, watching the fight. Her eyes, I noticed, were following the general's movements. She was in the room where she had been confined, there at the window, a ghostly, melancholy air, and a look of prayerful grief on her face, as if she were pleading for the success of the general's cause, as if she were pleading for the success of the general's cause.

THE OLD HARTFORD.

Admiral Farragut's Flagship Again in Commission. To Be Used as a Training Ship for the New Navy—She Looks Old-Fashioned, but Still a Powerful Craft.

(Special Washington Letter.) The men and women of the present generation do not know the old flag-ship of the Hartford, the famous old wooden vessel which was used as a flagship by Commodore Farragut, the fighting ship of the past generation upon whose decks the great Spanish Armada was defeated in the highest niche of naval annals.

There is very little left of the Hartford, except her keel. She has been rebuilt, not reconstructed, and like the other vessels of her class, she did in the days of her greatness. The theory and impulse which prompted the old navy officers to see the re-creation of the Constitution and the Hartford, and both of them are sailing on their old keels, but all their super-structures are new, although preserved in proportion upon the original plans.

The Hartford is being repaired for her new service, and the old flag-ship will be kept in repair for the use of the navy. The Hartford is being repaired for her new service, and the old flag-ship will be kept in repair for the use of the navy.

the ship, when she is in commission, again carrying the flag to foreign ports on her way back to the harbor which she won fame and everlasting glory. It is well known that the old battleship was built by the navy in 1858, when Spanish Admiral Cervera's fleet was destroyed. But he was not the only participant in that battle, as the commander of the converted yacht "Yves," a little vessel which was in the fleet from start to finish, and which rendered particularly valuable service. Although a well-directed shot from any one of the Spanish ships might have destroyed the "Yves," Lieut. Sturgis kept her to the fore all the time, and she sent her deadly missiles through the Spanish torpedo boats, which were sent to destroy her.

"This account for the death of one of our sports this summer," says the Buffalo Express. Perhaps a better brand of whisky is gaining a foothold along the Jersey shore.

American action-men are at the front again with the discovery that the "solar star" is a real thing. Most of the important electric lights in the 20 years are due to the scientists of this country.

Germany is buying American locomotives. The Saxton State railway has ordered from an American firm which undertakes to build and run them many months before the best German firm could turn them out. The American manufacturer not only turns out the best work but he takes less time to turn it out.

American farmers own equal to the value of $500,000,000, a sum equal to more than one-half of the capital of the national banks in the United States. The value of the horses owned by the farmers in this country is $400,000,000, considerably more than that of the total United States currency, including gold, silver and paper money in circulation today.

One of the eastern trade journals is not only for the statesman that is required to make fine matched teams more than "chickens" but also in the desire to make a very few minutes. This seems to be an age when the most clever detective is the most successful man, a matter whether it is a horse trader, a politician or a thief.

St. Thomas Lipton comes to the man of large and liberal ideas. He has spent several hundred thousand dollars in getting ready to run for the presidency in New York but admits having offered $250,000 for the Lakes of Killarney estate, with the intention, if he gets it, of presenting it to the Irish people. If he lives in this country people would say, what is he going to run for?

Speaking of our poor, Charles S. Taylor, of White River Junction, Vt., says, "I have seen a poor man, a young man, who has been raised in the New York fair since a few days ago and won three straight heats. Though now in the last decade of his century Mr. Taylor is still an enthusiastic horseman, and says that it is his ambition to live in a horse race on his own half-breed horses."

According to the annual pension report of Commissioner Brewster, he is but one veteran of the war of 1812 still on the rolls, and as he is 99 years of age he can only be a relic of the nation's history before this last name is erased. Of the Mexican war veterans 9,200 remain in pension, but their number is rapidly becoming fewer and in ten years will be reduced to a mere handful.

An old man with money who married a young woman without any money in her dowry, and she had both bride and cash. Old man with money ought to know by this time that they must remain in one place with their wealth if they would retain youthful beauty. When a young woman marries a bank account and two other men are killed, she is probably rolling the income that comes with it.

Dea-in-the-Pol, a Bamook Indian, proposed to the maiden of his choice, and she accepted him as a prospective bride. The Indian's act was, of course, wholly barbarous and improper. He had been one of a large class of young white men who would have killed the girl before shooting himself, and thus fallen in line with a prevailing habit of putting himself on record as a crude and untutored aborigine.

The proceedings of the thirty-third national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic indicate that the passing years do not detract from the character of that representative body. Indeed, it may be doubted if a more illustrious and able body of men ever assembled in a national encampment than that in Philadelphia. This is due largely to the fact that the platform of national officers and all of the past department commanders are members. Such a midway insures the presence of the able and experienced men in the organization.

The color line was drawn in an unusual way when a young woman who was drowning in the Atlantic City, N. J., refused the assistance of a negro swimmer who reached her first, and though most exhausted, refused to help her. She was a short distance behind him. Even at the point of death that young woman probably had thought of "how she would look brought to land with her arms about a black man's neck, and preferred to take further risks in order to secure a different rescuer. It was the ruling feminine passion, not race prejudice.

Admiral Dewey, learning that a British gunner had been crippled by the explosion of a cannon while firing a salute in honor of the great sailor's arrival at Gibraltar, hastened to the cot of the wounded man, talked with him for a few minutes, inquired as to his future, and left him in a sum of money ($100) as a present from the Olympia's gallant crew. This kindly act was as characteristic of the admiral's whole nature as was the dash into Manila Bay and was but another of the many deeds which have stamped Dewey as among the truly great.

MANY PERISH IN WRECK.

Remain of Collision in Iowa and California—Disaster Near Schenectady, N. Y.

Iowa City, Sept. 13.—The wreck which occurred on the Chicago and North Western Pacific railway 21 miles west of Iowa City about midnight Monday night resulted in the death of four men and the injury of seven others. The dead are: Webb Smith, Iowa City; Richard T. Quinn, Rock Island; Will Floyd (elder), Des Moines. The injured are: Conductor C. E. Brien, Keokuk; Bookkeeper John T. Mulligan, Garrettsville; Engineer Tom Dunn, Rock Island; Fireman Pierce, Rock Island; Charles Cox, Muscatine; N. C. George, Muscatine (elderly). Des Moines. With the exception of the trainmen, the engineer or killed were "deadbeat" in his cars. An east-bound special train crashed into a west-bound extra freight on a curve. Eighteen men were wrecked.

Iowa City, Sept. 16.—The coroner's jury investigating the accident on the Rock Island last Monday night (Friday), which the lives of four men were lost, had John Jones, of Keokuk, as the train dispatcher, guilty of criminal carelessness. The grand jury will indict him. Jones is missing.

Under Secretary of State, North passenger train No. 8, on the Southern Pacific railroad ran into the CONGRESSMAN VANDERBILT.

The coroner also viewed the body and endorsed this finding. Permission for burial was given and the body was embalmed.

New York, Sept. 16.—Patent scribbles regarding the estate of Cornelius Vanderbilt Friday in St. Bartholomew's Episcopal church. The church funeral was preceded by solemn exercises at the house, which only members of the family and close friends were admitted.

At the close of the church services the casket was taken to the Vanderbilt mansion, New York, Staten Island.

Charles Vanderbilt, the eldest son of William L. Vanderbilt and grandson of Cornelius Vanderbilt, died at his home on his father's farm in Staten Island, November 27. He received an academic degree from the University of the South and was in the bank and railroad offices. He was a member of the New York and Hudson River Railroad Company, and was a director in a number of companies and educational institutions.

Charles O. Summers, formerly a planktoner on the Mississippi, a gold hunter of the Klondike and a man with a connection in Seattle with the machinery in motion.

Secretary Berry, of the Society of Christian Workers, has declined the nomination of the Massachusetts prohibition state convention for governor.
