WHAT MIGHT HAVE BEEN.
It might have been that the sky was green, and the grass crimson; that It might have been that grapes on thorns, and figs on thistles grew; It might have been that swallows from the shovers came;
It might have been that lambs were scarce, and beasts and fowls tame; It might have been that cold wind met, and warmth would freeze;
It might have been that ships of sea would sail against the breeze—And there may be worlds unborn, dear, where we might find the change From all that we have seen or heard, or others just as strange—
But it never could be wise, dear, in haste to act or speak.
It could never be noble to harm the poor and weak.
It never could be kind, dear, to give a needless pain.
It never could be honest, dear, in greed of gain;
And there could not be a world, dear, where God is true above, When right and wrong are governed by any but love!

ALL ON THE LAST ROUND.
The peculiar conditions upon which a matrimonial affair was based in South Arkansas have just come to light. Dick Anderson had just graduated between the plow-handle. It was said that he could run a furrow so straight that it would break a knock-necked man's leg to walk in it. This accomplishment was a kind of frons-piece to a future volume of agricultural success, and more than one young lady in the neighborhood had her eyes on the young catch. Dick wasn't bashful, but he didn't seem to be particularly impressed with the charms scattered around him like the falling drops of water that linger on leafy trees after a rain. But he soon met his fate, a young lady, Winnie Hogrow. Winnie was a beautiful girl and could cover as much corn with a hoe and scrape as any cotton as any man in the neighborhood.
The couple loved—devotedly, agriculturally. Hogrow had raised his daughter with great care, and now that she had attained her zenith of her usefulness, it grieved him to think of losing her. On Sunday Dick went over, and going out where the old man was shelling corn the wife said:
'Mr. Hogrow, I suppose—'
'I don't suppose anything, sir—'
'Well, then, you doubtless know—'
'I don't know anything.'' 'That's all right, then. I am going to marry your daughter, and by next corn-planting you will know something. Do you weaken, Mr. Hogrow?'
'See here, young fellow, I can't afford to lose my girl. I have had powerful bad luck this season. The cut-worms began on the corn by the time it came up, and the bugs pitched into the cotton; and, to make things worse, my best mule and one of my sows got into a fight the other day. The cow kicked the mule and the mule kicked the cow, and both of them died. So unless the circumstances, I'd rather you'd marry somebody else.''
'I don't accept your misfortune as excuse. I'm going to marry the girl,' overlooked the industry and the best feature of the place in which it located. A most striking example of this kind is furnished by the brass industry in Waterbury, Conn., which from a very small beginning, has gradually grown year after year until it now occupies a great and fully fitted out establishment, whose numerous and nice installations are carried on by a large number of workmen thoroughly conversant with their trade.
The early settlers of Waterbury, as is usually the case among the inhabitants of a new and sparsely populated region, gave their attention almost exclusively to agriculture; but by and by they began to engage in a crude, untrained manner, in the manufacture of brass, and ere long they gained quite a reputation for making brass buttons.
It would seem as if some of their number had been mechanics in European countries, where the workmen perform more than one particular more than one particular branch of any mechanical pursuit, and hence lacked scope and comprehensive knowledge, being expert each only in his little narrow specialty; for most of these primitive brass workers could not individually perform more than one particular portion of the necessary labor, and only by bringing into co-operation what each knew could they manufacture any article in its entirety from brass. A few, however, seem to have mastered the business in every detail. But the majority did not long remain in the endeavoring ways to give up.
'Providence comes in, pulling hard at times,' said the old man, puffing his coat, 'but it's a harder matter to back again an older stager. Get open your jacket. If I fall, the gal and the farm are yours'. Four hundred acres, and all under fence. Gal weighs one hundred and fifty pounds. Big induc-

THE MANUFACTURE OF BRASS.
A significant fact to be noticed is, that where a certain kind of manufacturing takes firm and monopolizing root in the early settlement and building up of a town or village, and continues under good management to improve and develop in a steady ratio for a number of years, it at last becomes the great and overwhelming industry and the best
cated. A most striking example of this kind is furnished by the brass industry in Waterbury, Conn., which
ally grown year after year until it now
occupies a great and fully fitted out es-
installations are carried on by a large
versant with their trade.
The early settlers of Waterbury, as is
region, gave their attention almost ex-
reputation for making brass buttons.
It would seem as if some of their
mechanical pursuit, and hence lacked
scope and comprehensive knowledge,
being expert each only in his little narrow specialty; for most of these primi-
ually perform more than one particu-
article in its entirety from brass. A few,
however, seem to have mastered the
deavoring ways to give up.
back again an older stager. Get open
your jacket. If I fall, the gal and the farm are yours'. Four hundred acres,
hundred and fifty pounds. Big induc-ments. The two men grappled, and again Dick ploved up the earth.

'Don't give up,' said the girl.
'No,' said the old man, 'for the land under fence, and the gal weighs one hundred and fifty—can handle a hoe wonderful!'
Dick went away and pondered. It was evident that the old man could throw him every time. To lose the girl was to wreck his life. An idea struck him. He smiled. He left the neighborhood and remained until the time for the third fall was nearly up.
On the appointed day he visited the old man.
'I have agreed to everything,' said Dick, 'and now I ask a favor. Hitherto I have been embarrassed. Let the final trial take place to-night in the dark. I will meet you here at 10 o'clock.''
'Any way suits me,' replied the old man. 'I'll meet you anywhere.'' At 10 o'clock the old man stood in the yard chuckling. His combatant climbed the fence and approached.
Without exchanging a word the two men grappled. The struggle was short.
The old man went up into the air, came down and struck she ground with a force that almost took his life. He lay on a moment almost unconscious.
Dick raised him up and assisted him into the house.
'The gal and the farm is yours,' said the old man, and the young couple embraced each other. The next day they were married. Shortly after the wedding was over, a large negro man appeared at the door, and, addressing Dick's station, said: 'I want my $10. I flung the old man had 'nough to kill him. Where's my money?' Dick gave him $10, and, turning around, received a searching look from the old man. 'I'll explain,' said the bridegroom. 'Realizing that I couldn't throw you, and at the same time realizing that my happiness depended upon this marriage, I resorted to a bit of trachery.' Here he stopped to buckle his arm around his wife. 'I found a big negro that I knew could throw you, and offered him $10. That's why I wanted the worse to take place in the dark. After he had thrown you, I raised around and raised you up.'' When Dick had finished the old man looked at him for full five minutes, and remarked: 'That was a mighty mean trick; but the farm and gal are yours'.
Four hundred acres under fence, and the gal weighs one hundred and fifty.

A DEER AVERTED.—The man who stole the fiddle is a liar and I can whip him!' angrily exclaimed a man from Fourche mountains, approaching a body of men and regarding them carefully. 'I came to town this mornin', and some fellow stole my fiddle. The man who done it is a liar.'' 'What sort of a fiddle was it?' asked a man whose skin looked as though he had just returned from swamp fever.
'Why, it was a first-class instrument with fine rattlesnake rattles on the inside.''
'Where did you get it?'
'I bought it from an old man Bigley.
He made it, any man who stole it is a liar, an I can whip him.'' 'See here, mister, maybe the man that stole it is not a liar, and maybe you can't whip him.''
'Yes, he is a liar, an I can whip any man who stole a fiddle of that make.''
'Now, you are puttin' it too broad; my father stole a fiddle from old man Bigley ten years ago. Do you mean to say that my father is a liar, and that you can whip him?'
'Are you certain that he stole a fiddle from the old man?'
'Yes.''
'Then what I say goes.''
'Just then a man weighing about 200 pounds pulled off his coat and said:
'I'm your father, ain't I, John?'
'Yes, John replied.
'I stole that fiddle. I never told a lie in my life, an I don't recollect that anybody ever whipped me.' He looked at the man whose fiddle had been stolen and asked, 'Am I a liar?'
'Now here, you fellers have misunderstood me. So you stole a fiddle from the old man, did you?'
'Yes.''
'Well, I'd be much obliged to you if you'd look me one.''
'Thus you see, a bloody Arkansas diel was averted.'

SIXTY MILES A MINUTE OF A TYP-PAX.—Arthur Fitzpatrick, who returned from Colorado a short time ago, gives the following account of an accurrence in the mining districts of which he was an eye-witness: 'A miner and some companions were crossing the Continental Divide when it was covered with snow. Three miles below them, under a decline of forty-five degrees, deeply covered with frozen snow, lay the spot they desired to reach, while to go round by trail was fifteen miles. The miner took a tin-pan full of washing gold, spread his blanket over it, got in himself in a squatting position on his haunches, tucked the blanket around, held his rifle and other traps over his head, and got one of his companions to give him a push.
He informed me he went down at the speed of sixty miles a minute, and shot for some valleys at the foot of the mountain. When he stopped he found the soldering of the pan melted from friction, his blanket on fire, and it was his impression that had he gone much further he would have been burned up, together with all his traps.

CAPTAIN ERICSSON'S TORPEDO BOAT.
The New York Tribune of the 19 inst. contained the following description of Captain Ericsson's new torpedo boat: Captain John Ericsson is experimenting in New York harbor with the most formidable engine of death known in naval warfare. The inventor of the monitor is one of the most modest and unassuming mechanics of the age and is not likely to exaggerate the merits of his own work. He is an-ticipatedly satisfied with the results of the recent experiments with his torpedo boat, and some of the most experienced naval officers in the United States service do not hesitate to pronounce

THE WEEKLY AGITATOR.

ISH-PING, MICHIGAN, NOV. 27.

The iron market, just at present, cannot be said to be in a very active state.

No. 1 STACK of the Pioneer furnace, Nagawnee, is out of blast, having been blown out for repairs a couple weeks ago.

The Cleveland and Lake Superior mines, both located within the corporate limits of the city of Ishpeming, have shipped respectively during the season of navigation just closed 183,616 and 174,357 gross tons of iron ore.

The total output of iron ore, by lake, from the Upper peninsula during the season just closed is 1,850,624 gross tons, divided as follows among three ports of shipment: Escanaba, 1,163,791 tons; Marquette, 693,823 tons; L'Anse, 55,005 tons.

SHIPMENTS.

MARQUETTE.—Following is a statement of the shipments of iron ore, pig iron and quartz from Marquette, from the opening of navigation up to and including Wednesday, Nov. 24th:

Table with columns: Mine, Tons. Includes entries for Marquette, Escanaba, and L'Anse.

L'ANSE.—The following table exhibits the season's shipments of iron ore from L'Anse, from the opening of navigation up to and including Wednesday, Nov. 24th:

ESCANABA.—The following table shows the shipments of iron ore from Escanaba, from the opening of navigation up to and including Wednesday, Nov. 24th:

As will be seen by our tables, the total shipments of iron ore from the port of Escanaba from the opening of navigation up to and including Wednesday, the 17th inst., were 1,163,791 gross tons. This is the largest quantity of iron ore which ever went over the docks of any Lake Superior port in any one year, and we believe, more than was ever shipped from all the Upper Peninsula ports in a single season.

Coming to the extreme cold weather and the freezing up of the Bay de Noyon, the report, as given by the tables of this week, may justly be taken as the total lake shipments of our mines during the season of navigation just closed, which we regret not for the first time, though we were not at were not expected to interfere thus early in the season—thousands of tons would yet have been shipped by way of Escanaba, and the total of lake shipments would have approached very closely the Agrarar's estimate of a year ago, when he predicted an output of 2,000,000 tons in 1880.

The Champion mine, which never before succeeded in bringing its shipments up to 100,000 tons in a single season, this year comes forward with a total output of 110,013 gross tons. The mine is looking well in every particular—better than ever before—is constantly developing new openings, and at the time of our last visit, something over a week ago, we were assured by the management that with a fair demand for iron ore the coming season could be made to do even better than it did during the one just closed.

The extreme cold weather of the past week has had the effect of very effectively closing navigation on the lakes this early in the season.
