Unfinished Work Of High Court

BY PAUL M. YOST

WASHINGTON A - The Supreme Court has left until next term the question of whether a businessman - a restaurant owner, for instance - can on his own constitutionaldiscriminate in the serving of customers. Also: Can he ask authorities to help enforce his discrimination?

The tribunal did not take up these problems Monday as it overturned the convictions of 44 sit-in demonstrators protesting segregation in four states.

In this series of cases, the court declared it unconstitutional for a state to require segregation and use its power to enforce it

However, in a separate opinion, Justice John M. Harlan said the right of the private businessman to operate on a segregated basis was "ostensibly left untouched" by the court majority's approach to the issue. Harlan Declared:

"An individual's right to restrict the use of is property, however unregenerate a particular exercise of that right may be thought, lies ards long and from 60 to 70 yards beyond the reach of the Constitution's 14th Amendment

"The dilution or virtual elimination of that right cannot well be justified either on the premise that it will hasten formal repeal of bagataway as played by our Indian outworn segregation laws or on the grounds that it will facilitate proof of state action in

This Supreme Court's declaration, specifically affected 44 individual demonstrators who appealed to the high tribunal. It also indicates that convictions of about 3,000 Negroes and whites arrested for sitins in various Southern states are unconstitutional. Chief Justice Earl Warren, who wrote the majority opinion in the five cases which had been argued together, said of the key case

"When a state agency passes a law com-Avery Blake, president of the pelling persons to discriminate against other United States Intercollegiate La- persons because of race, and the state's crimcrosse Association and honorary ingl processes are employed in a way which o-chairman of the Lacrosse-Fort enforces the discrimination mandated by that the stick was mate, the approved outlits of the competing tribes. In the Greenville case, Warren said, the city by ordinance provided that any decision as to whether a restaurant is to be operated on a desegregated basis is to be reserved to the

Thus, said Warren, a person owning an eating place is left with no choice of his own, but must segregate white and Negro. This, he said, is state action that can not stand.

Prior to this declaration, Warren tempered the effect of the decisions by restating the words of a 1961 Supreme Court opinion in another racial case. This was that private conduct violating individual rights does not violate the Constitution unless a state or city s involved to some significant extent. In the next case he read, the chief justice went far to fix a new point of law. In a sitn case from New Orleans, Warren pointed out there was no state statute or city ordinance requiring segration of the races in restaurants. However, he cited a city official's statements to the effect that the city would not permit Negroes to seek desegregated service in restaurants.

"Consquently," he said, "the city must be treated exactly as if it had an ordinance prohibiting such conduct . . . A state, or city, may act as authoritatively through its executive as through its legislative

The tribunal did not go into the question, often discussed, of what a private storekeeper can do if on his own desire - without any state or city law - he prefers not to serve Negroes.
