FILLED FEATURETTE!

Walt Disney presents YELLOWSTONE TECHNICOLOR®

Dear Dad:

This message is directed primarily to you because . . . Well . . . Read on, Dad.

This Christmas we'd again like to suggest that you give your wife the very thing she can use the most. Ask her and she will tell you. It's TIME: Yes, a little extra time for herself: Unfortunately a woman's work is every day. Kids are just as demanding on Saturday and Sunday as during the week. Meals still have to be cooked. Dishes still have to be washed.

However, you can give her some of that valuable time - up to 10 hours a week more, if you give her a new General Electric Portable Dishwasher. What's more, you can easily double this by adding a General Electric Automatic Washer or Clothes Dryer. Expensive? Not at all. Look at some of the representative models and prices in this ad. Appliance prices have never been lower than they are today in spite of rising prices of just about everything else.

One thing more. When you buy a General Electric Appliance from us, you are buying from a store that prides itself in giving the best possible service after the sale. General Electric's extensive guarantees and our efficient service department combine to give you the best service in this area.

How about it, Dad. Don't you think you ought to come in and see us this week? A $10.00 deposit holds any appliance of your choice on lay-a-way for Christmas

Delta's School For Retarded To Honor Kennedy

ESCANABA - Directors of the Delta County Chapter, Mich gan Association for Retarded Children, have named the new Delta County School for Re-tarded Children the John F. Kennedy School.

"The full name of the school will be announced later." said Albert J. Valind, president of the chapter, in announcing the action of the board of directors. He said it was taken in honor of the late President Kennedy because he worked so hard for legislation to aid the mentally retarded.

Valind said that the full name of the school now being constructed on the Webster School campus in Escanaba, will be decided by the full membership of the chapter.

"This name has long been on the list of names that were due for consideration as an appropriate title for this building and originally was considered as a living memorial, but due to events of the past few days it has been decided to announce the name of the school at this time.'

President Johnson

By JOSEPH ALSOP

WASHINGTON - "If I didn't want the job myself, I'd get behind Lyndon, He's the ablest man I know in American politics, and he really cares about this country as I want a President to

In this fashion, in an interval of his hard-fought contest for he Democratic nomination and almost off-hand, President John F. Kennedy gave his own estimate of his chief rival of that time, President Lyndon B. Johnson.

In President Kennedy's years in office, his false friends (of whom every President has a few) and his Vice President's false friends (of whom every politician also has a few) did everything n their power to poison the Kennedy-Johnson relationship. Attempt Always Failed

It is a tribute to the character of both men that the attempt ilways failed. In a certain sense, it is a miracle that it did fail, for no Vice President, in the nature of his office, can ever hold more than a watching brief.

President Kennedy was an active, leading, all-directing chief of the American state. President Eisenhower was a passive, reacting, watching-and-waiting chief of state. But even President Eisenhower publicly and somewhat cruelly admitted that he could not call to mind a single contribution made to his administration by his Vice President, despite all the Madison Avenue build-up of the countless contributions of Richard M. Nixon.

President Kennedy would never have said that sort of thing about his Vice President, for he always valued and constantly ought President Johnson's advice on every kind of matter. Almost Pure Man Of Action

Yet the fact remains that it must have been enormously hard for President Johnson to be only the man holding a watching brief in the Kennedy years, even if called upon as a valued advisor - as he was; and even if required to participate actively in the policy-making process at all times of serious crisis - as

It must have been hard for President Johnson to hold only a watching brief, because he is an almost pure man of action, in the way that his predecessor never was. No pure man of action, like President Johnson, can simultaneously act and stand apart, so to say, coolly judging and even on occasion mocking his own action. President Kennedy did that. President Johnson will never do that.

Thus President Kennedy could never tear a passion to atters, in the way the political gallery-gods often enjoy, and hated above all things any public show of his own emotions, even when they were very deep indeed. Whereas President Johnson downright enjoys tearing a passion to tatters, if this is justified by the occasion; and like Sir Winston Churchill, he is wholly capable of giving way to public tears if he is genuinely moved.

Forgave Dergee Of Conservatism This difference between the two men explains the anomaly for it is a real anomaly - of the different kinds of support they have enjoyed and the different kinds of toleration they have

President Kennedy's contemplative, intellectual side appealed to the American left. Thus the left forgave him a degree of conservatism, manifested in the tax bill, for instance, which ought to have earned, but of course did not earn, the prayerful gratitude of the whole business community,

President Johnson's character as a pure man of action appeals to the American right, and especially to the senior leaders of the Senate and House who acknowledge him as the great master of their craft. Thus he has had support from many who suspected President Kennedy, and he also arouses idiotie suspicions among many who have no smallest ground for suspecting him

Influence Of Superficial Stereotypes This only goes to show the powerful political influence of silly, superficial, even rather vulgar stereotypes. But if you look behind the stereotypes, what do you find in Lyndon Baines Johnson? You find, in fact, the qualities that are most wanted in a President

You find common sense, courage, intelligence, a knack of getting things done and the deep, true concern for this country that President Kennedy himself noted in the quotation above given. To this summary of President Johnson's prime qualities, one must add, with warm gratitude, that the new President has not put a foot wrong in the tragic, difficult circumstances of these last days, Lyndon Baines Johnson is in fact a very big man, not just physically, but in all his dimensions as a human being. That was why John Fitzgerald Kennedy chose him as his Vice President, on the specific ground, as this reporter can testify, "that you've just got to think about what might happen."

When that choice was made, it bitterly offended many compromisers and breast-beaters. But although President Johnson will no doubt make his mistakes, as all Presidents must do, this videly unexpected choice should later be remembered as soverign proof of the enormous, enduring good luck of the United States, just as the untimely death of President Kennedy will be remembered as a cruel American loss, (c) 1963 New York Herald Tribune Inc.

story: A college man invited his Calif. mother to parents' weekend. She drove over 200 miles and arrived Friday afternoon. Her son spent one hour with her, then disappeared with her car for the rest of the day and that entire evening. She left word at the house where she stayed that she had gone home.

Girl Burns Herself To Death In Saigon

SAIGON, Viet Nam (AP) A 20-year-old girl burned herself to death Saturday, reportedly to protest the conflict between Vietnamese. The fiery suicide was the first since the self-immolations by six Buddhist monks and a nun that marked the reign of President Ngo Dinh Diem. They committed suicide to protest what they called religious persecution by the late Roman Catholic president against the Buddhists.

The state of Parana in southern Brazil has rich red soil and usually mild climate: it produces more than half of Brazil's coffee. Tall pine trees and hardwood forests also supply much of the country's paper and lumber.
