When the final curtain of the tragedy of war is rung down at Berlin and the warring people resume the arts of peace, a different era will begin and in a few short years the murderous spirit of turbulent war will be forgotten as the battle scarred fields of France and Belgium disappear under the bounteous crops of smiling prosperity. # EMPEY HEARS THE STORY OF THE TOMMY WHO HAD A BROAD STREAK OF YELLOW.

Synopsis.—Fired by the sinking of the Lusitania, with the loss of American lives, Arthur Guy Empey, an American living in Jersey City, goes to England and enlists as a private in the British army. After a short experience as a recruiting officer in London, he is sent to training quarters in France, where he first heurs the sound of big guns and makes the acquaintance of "cooties." After a brief period of training Empey's company is sent into the front-line trenches, where he takes his first turn on the fire step while the builets whis overhead. Empey learns, as comrade falls, that death lurks always in the trenches, Chaplain distinguishes himself by rescuing wounded men under hot fire. With pick and shovel Empey has experience as a trench digger in No Man's Land. Exciting experience on listening post detail. Exciting work on observation post duty. Back in rest billets Empey writes and stages a successful play. Once more in the front trenches, Empey goes "over the top" in a successful but costly attack on the German lines. Soon afterwards Empey and his comrades repulse a determined gas attack launched by the Germans. His next experience is as a member of a firing squad which executes a sentence of death base of Rouen.

At this place they were put through a week's rigid training in trench warfare. On the morning of the eighth day they paraded at ten o'clock, and were inspected and passed by General H—, then were marched to the quartermaster's, to draw their gas helmets and trench equipment.

At four in the afternoon they were again hustled into cattle cars. This time the journey lasted two days. They disembarked at the town of Frevent and could hear a distant dull booming. With knees shaking, Lloyd asked the sergeant what the noise was, and nearly dropped when the sergeant replied in a somewhat bored tone:

"Oh, them's the guns up the line. We'll be up there in a couple o' days or so. Don't worry, my laddle, you'll see more of 'em than you want before you get 'ome to Blighty again, that is, if you're lucky enough to get back. Now lend a hand there unloadin' them cars, and quit that everlastin' shakin's. I believe yer scared." The last with a contemptuous sneer.

They affect the things, full pack, to a little dilapidated village, and the sound of the guns grew louder, constantly louder.

The draft was paraded in front of battalion headquarters and the men were assigned to companies.

Lloyd was the only man assigned to D company. Perhaps the officer in charge of the draft had something to do with it, for he called Lloyd asid and said:

"Lloyd, you are going to a new company. No one knows you. Your bed will be as you make it, so for God's sake, brace up and be a man. I think you have the stuff in you, my boy, so good-by and the best of luck to you."

The next day the battallon took ever their part of the trenches. It happened to be a very quiet day. The artillery behind the lines was still, except for an occasional shell sent over to let t

All the allied ministers who formerly were at Jassy, Roumania, including Charles Vopicka of America, have to been arrested in Petrograd, according to a report reaching The Hague.

**Austria's suggestion of a "nonbinding" conference of all the belligerents to make clear their war aims and peace demands mer with the promptex kind of rejection by the allies, President Wilson taking the lead in refusing to consider the idea. In two sentences he replied that America's terms had been repeatedly and clearly stated and therefore no proposal for such a conference would be entertained by it. In this Mr. Wilson was heartly supported by the entire nation, and his position was also thoroughly approved by the allies of the United States. Austria's suggestion, made with the consent of Berlin, admittedly was merely a "peace flyer," and there was little expectation in Humiand that it would receive favorable consideration.

No better reception was accorded the German offer of peace to Belgium. With unblushing effrontery Berlin asked the nation the Huns have ravished to drop out of the conflict, not even suggesting that they would make reparation for the horrible crimes they have committed there, and making the insidious proposal that the "Flemish question" should be considered and the Flemish minority that aided the German invaders should not be penalized. Belgium, of course, said "Nc" to all this claptrap.

The political situation in Hungary is becoming extremely critical and the opposition to the government is growing bolder. Its leader, Count Karoly, is quoted in dispatches as declaring that the central powers should accept President Wilson's 14 peace points as a basis for negotiations and that the treaties of Brest-Litovsk and Bucharest should be abrogated. The pope seems to have scented chances of peace once again, for it was stated at the Vatican that if a diplomatic representation should be received by him from one of the parties, be would ask the other party if it desired to receive such a representation.

Substantial support for President Wilson's pence plans was received from the labor conference of the allied nations in London when the International relations committee recommended that the conference subscribe to the 44 points formulated by Wilson, "thus adopting a policy of clearness and moderation as opposed to a policy dictated exclusively by changes on the war map."

According to figures received up to date, the total registration of the country under the new draft law was at least 12,800,000, or 100,000 above the estimated total. Of these the government proposes to call to the colors 2,700,000, to be added to the 3,200,000 men already under arms. It is planned to have 80 divisions in France before next summer, and to finance so great an undertaking the war department has asked congress to provide it immediately with an additional $7,000.000,000 in cash. Granting this, the administration and congress has the choice of increasing the amount of taxes provided by the revenue bill from $8,000,000,000 to $10,000,000,000,000,000,000 ar raising all the additional $7,000,000.

"Goodle!" exclaimed Nick 2nd Nancy, and Daddy commenced: "Beauty was black and white. He was more white than he was black, though, for his little body was white and the black was to be found in spots which the children who owned Beauty thought were very beautiful. One ear was black, the other ear was partly so, and in the center of the forehead was another black spot.

"They thought he was such a beautiful little puppy when he first came to them that at once they named him Beauty.

"Now, this family with the three children and Beauty lived on a house boat in a big river. The house boat had two stories, one upstairs where the kitchen and dining room and living room were.

"At night the two boys and their little sister would go upstairs to bed, and they had two little rooms adjoining. Then later on the mother and daddy would go upstairs and last of all Beauty would settle down in a corner of the sofa which was fixed for him the last thing at night. This corner was well covered with a comfortable old shand, so that Beauty would be happy and cozy all night.
"Of course he would then naps curing the evening as the family charted and talked and played games. But his real evening's sleep would begin when all the rest of the household was peacefully dreaming and he would have a long, long night of rest and woxderful dog dreams.

He knew it. And he sat up straight in the darkness and wondered what could be done.

"He ran into the kitchen. And there the smell of gas almost knocked him over. For one awful moment he felt as though he would just lie down and die, but forgetting about the queer feeling in his head by thinking of those upstairs he ran to the room first of the two boys, and then of their little slster, and then to the door where their mother and daddy slept.

"Se-ra-t-ch," went his nails on the door. And then more and more furlously he scratched. He whited and he cried, and at last the daddy got up, feeling very sleepy,

"What is it, Beauty? he asked. Do you want to come in this room? Were you lonely downstairs. It's not morning yet, you know." And then the daddy got a terrific whiff of gas. The gas is escaping in the kitchen, he said, 'and we would never have know it but for you, brave Beauty." And as the daddy turned of the gas which had all been left on by some dreadful mistake, they all said: 'it was brave Beauty who saved our lives!"

hose With Handles Are Much Less Likely to Be Damaged in Transit In the Mails.

Operated by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

One important requirement for parcel post shipping and marketing is a proper and satisfactory container. Sometimes the consumer can secure containers more readily and economically than the producer. Those with handles are much less likely to be damaged in transit in the mails than those which are not thus supplied and which are likely to be tossed or thrown or handled by the string or twine used in tying them. A bamboo basket serves the purpose very well and may be used a long time. Ordinary splint baskets made of strips of veneer may also be used, and if they can be secured at a price sufficiently cheap a new one for each shipment is more economical than having them returned, unless they are sent back in lots of ten or more under one cover. This, of course, necessitates using them without a wooden handle, in which case a heavy twine should be used for a handle. This twine can be untied and the baskets used, or placed in one another, for return shipment. If a basket with a wooden handle is used, care should be taken to see it is securely miled, not only at the rim of the basket but farther down toward the bottom, so as to prevent undue leverage which may break loose the nailing.

Corrugated pasteboard cartons frequently may be found useful and desirable for this service. They are made in a great variety of sizes, dimensions, and patterns, and when empty are shipped knocked down flat.

Few persons know how to prepare and pack fruit and produce for market. Proper packing for parcel post marketing is of primary importance and needs ne of Results Secured by Experts at North Dakota Station in Feeding Calves.

FLAXSEED VS. WHOLE MILK

Any successful method that will cut down the period of feeding whole milk to calves is usually welcomed by dairymen. Experts at the North Dakota experiment station have used flaxseed and skim milk witz good results in the following manner:

Whole milk was fed for the first three weeks. Then during the age from three weeks to six months skim milk was fed with enough flaxseed to take the place of the fat in whole milk. Each calf was given two gallons of skim milk a day.

Calves fed in this manner did not do quite so well the first three months as a similar group of calves fed whole milk, but at the end of the six months there was practically no difference in condition except that the calves fed whole milk averaged about four pounds less in weight. But considering that $19 worth of whole milk per aif had been saved in the six months' period, the use of flaxseed was considered the better practice.

KEEP CREAM CANS COVERED

Direct Rays of Sun Counteract What-ever Care Has Previously Been ever Care Has Previously Been Made to Keep Cool.

By R. MCANN, Colorado Agricultural College, Fort Collins, Colo.)
A great part of the value of keeping cream cool on the farm and at the station or creamery is lost in the cream heing exposed to the direct rays of the sun while being hauled from the farm to the point of sale. Far too few people stop to realize the importance of covering their cream cans when bringing them in to town. Expensive jacketed cans are not a necessity to keep the cream cool; in summer weather just an ordinary piece of clean wet burlap or blanket 'thrown over the cans will keep the temperature of the cream as much as 20 degrees below what it would rise to if left uncovered while being transported over the average hauling distance. over the average hauling distance.

Trimmed With Bits of Themselves.

A report of what women have done in devising ornamentation for their clothes would read as an interesting bit of war history. Out from the depths have come some of the ornamentations. The designers, however, have found that the best way to trim a gown is with itself. There is very little danger then of its becoming a patchwork quilt.

Tucks have returned, therefore. They have been launched on the new auutumn gowns as something of a novelety. They are not permitted in wooden clothes, because the government asks us to omit every inch of superfluous worsted material, but we are omitting it by the yardage instead of the inch, and are finding ourselves quite content with composition gowns that have only a dush of wool in them, and often none at all. A woman depends on furs, capes and top coats for warmth.

As for the materials which are available today, they may last through the winter. There is much talk of wearing satin, taffeta, pongee and various heavy Chinese sitks throughout the cold weather, making them comfortable for the open or for heatless houses by the addition of warm underwear and top coverings.

The designers have banked heavily on the usage of thin materials for next winter and therefore they have brought about this resurrected fushion of trimming a gown with itself, which is quite easily done when the material is soft and pilable.

When tucks are used they are arranged horizontally. They do not confuse themselves with pleats, which are vertical. A few of the new skirts are tucked from the bone of the hips to the hem, the tucks touching each other and unade from an inch to two inches wide. Sometimes this constitutes the entire trimming of a gown. But when the skirt is extra narrow at the hem the barrel effect is more striking than it has been for two years.

BREEDING OF FANCY FOWLS

Practice Results in More or Less General Improvement of Poultry— Some Suggestions.

some Suggestions.

(From the United States Department of Agriculture.)

There should not be any discouragement of the breeding of what is ordinarily known as fancy poultry. That term is usually applied to the standard breeds as kept by specialists who produce exhibition birds. That practice has always resulted in more or less general improvement of poultry and should continue to perform just that function at this time when the wider keeping of a better grade of poultry stock cannot fail to result in an increased production. The work of the poultry specialist also gives encouragement to the general farmer and the back-yard poultry keeper to take better care of the flocks. The continuance of poultry exhibitions, maintained almost wholly by the poultry specialist, is certainly justified during the present emergency. It has always been the breeders of exhibition fowls who have been the leaders in promotting the welfare of the poultry industry, and these men have been especially willing to give their time and efforts in working for increased production. The poultry shows themselves afford an opportunity for interesting individuals in poultry keeping and have served as effective centers from which to launch and extend the campaign for increasing poultry production for increasing poultry production.

To the specialist in poultry produc-tion it is not necessary to say in this connection anything with regard to breeds that should be used, but to the ETTERS from our boys in the trenches and from the women in canteen and other war work, all bring to us the same message—SEND US NEWS FROM HOME.

World news is all right, but OUR BOYS want NEWS OF THIS TOWN. They want the home newspaper. Publishers are prevented from sending their papers free to anyone, even boys in the service. Consequently a national movement has been started by Col. William Boyce Thompson of New York, who is acting as President of the Home Paper Service of America to give the boys what they are calling for. Every community is joining the movement. Let us see that our boys are not forgotten.

Send to the publisher of this newspaper whatever amount of money you can—5 cents or $50.00. We will publish a list each week of those contributing, and the amounts contributed.

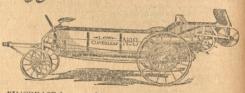

Every cent received will be used to send this paper to our boys at the front. If at the end of the war, there is any surplus, it will be turned over to the local Red Cross Committee.

There is no profit in this to the publisher—even in normal times, subscriptions are not sold at a profit. With war prices prevailing, and the high rate of postage on papers sent to France, our cost will scarcely be covered by our full subscription price.

Remember that over in France, some brave soldier or sailor from this town—perhaps even some splendid woman working within sound of the guns—is depending on you to "KEEP THE HOME LOVE KINDLED."

They are calling to YOU from "Over There" GIVE WHAT YOU CAN

Merely for the sake of efficiency it is of importance that a feeling of mutual understanding and sympathy should exist between the Yank and the Chinaman who has come to be his neighbor. Officials recognize its military value and have met with appreciation the efforts of the Y. M. C. A., which is carrying on the work in most of the camps where Chinese are located.

Most of the difficulties were due to lack of understanding. For instance, a quiet, hard-working Chinaman had some trouble with his eyes and was ordered to the only place where he could have protection from the light, which happened to be the guardhouse. of the Orient of the Orient.

The suspension bridge across the Suez canni is now complete and part of the railroad system. Direct trains are running between here and Jerusalem. The building of this bridge is one of the most important events in the history of the Orient.

A long time before the war engineers planned this span, which was to connect Egypt and Palestine. When war broke out nothing had been accomplished. A desert 200 miles wide lay between the Suez and the end station of the Jaffa-Jerusalem railway.

At the beginning of the war the line from Zagazig to Ismalja up to the bank of the canal opposite El Kantara was built. This line was to facilitate the transport of troops needed for the protection of the canal and their means of subsistence.

Behind them marched singing, shouting warriors—5,000 of Uncle Sam's soldlers—marching from their rest camp to trains on the last leg of their journey to No Man's Land.

The rain did not dampen their ardor. Through the mud they waded with grinning faces singing "Hail, hail, the gang's all here; what the h—I do we care."

"It's the spirit of American soldlers that's going to win this war," observed Col. E. V. Smith, commandant of one of the units. He was a joily old "war horse," with the face, figure and humor that made him look the twin of Irvin Cobb.

Patriotic American in Border Town Did Extra "Bit."

How Marching Boys in Olive Drab Got Delicacy Almost Under the Eyes of the Discipline-Loving Sergeant.

It is midnight. In the border town across the river the populace has gone to bed. The streets are deserted and silent save for the measured tread of on.

Above the incessant clang of the locomotive bell and the hiss of escaping steam there comes to the ears of the wayfarer from the States a sound that instantly claims his attention—the rhythmic tramp, tramp, of feet, hundreds, thousands of them it seems, as the faint staccato becomes a muffled roar. There is no resisting its lure.
The wayfarer turns in his tracks and waits.

The wayfarer turns in his tracks and walts.

"Left—turn!" rings out the crisp-command close at hand and, with wheel-like precision, a column of marching men in the familiar olive drah rolls into view around the corner.

"Nanks, sure as I'm alive!" exclaims the man from the States as he falls into step and follows along the side-walk.

Yes, Yanks—Uncle Sam's own doughboys on their way to Berlin via the western front, and out to limber up and get a breath of fresh air while a new engine is being hooked up.

On they come, alert, keen-eyed fellows fresh from the training camps, splendid Americans all, and eager for at brush with the Hun.

Still the town slumbers—it is accustomed to such sights; but to the American, taken unawares, it is an inspiring thing.

tomed to such sights; but to the American, taken unawares, it is an inspiring thing.

Far up the street, an oasis in the black desert of night, a friendly light beacons. As the column approaches the boys recognize the familiar outlines of a fruit stand. The enterprising merchant knows all about these midnight "parades" and is prepared. A thousand pairs of eyes turn hungrily to bunches of yellow hanans dangling from their hooks; but the trim young sergeant is looking straight ahead. They are all business, those sergeants. The man from the States has seen it all; it is his chance. A crisp American bank note quickly changes hands and presently there is an empty hook where a bunch of bananas hung a moment before. Magically, it seems, the coveted fruit has found its way into the rear ranks. Like a cork in a rough sea the bulky thing is tossed along from line to line, growing constantly smaller until the bare stalk is thrown into the gutter, leaving a hundred bulging pockets in its wake.

Thus did one patriotic fund subscriber do an extra "bit" for the boys of the olive drab. At any rate, he wore the patriotic fund emblem on his coat.

Get Complete Family Record.

Sugar records now being kept in grocery stores are causing some perturbation on the part of grocery men.

Since the food administration limited the amount of sugar a family can use per month, the grocers have had to keep track of the amount sold to each customer.

For this purpose they use a sort of book, or ledger, in which the customer's name and address, and other information pertaining thereto, are recorded.

Modern Armor.

The soldiers of old went forth to fight, clad in cumbersome and expensive armor, which, while serving as a protection, nevertheless hindered them from putting forth their best fighting strength. Today Martin Jellalian, an inventor of Rhode Island, has made it possible for a soldier to be protected by armor. He is one of several dozen inventors who have reinvented the coat of mail.

The device is a bulletproof metallic structure, which surrounds the body and extends from the top of the shoulders to below the thighs. This steel coat consists of two like parts held together across the chest by means of straps. Hooks attach the coat to semi-cylindrical pieces of metal which fit closely about the upper part of the leg and are fastened behind by straps. The inner surface of the armor is padded. The head is protected by a lined mask composed of the same metal.—Popular Science Monthly. metal.—Popular Science Monthly.

"Worth-less! Of course, not just that: but have I no ambition but to be a dummy to—hang—things on—a Christmas tree?"

Bert pushed the door open, saying rather coldly: "They've called for me, will you folks minu if I tear myself away?" Then, her eyes falling on the afrighted Louise: "My, but you're a beauty, Ouida. That ought to be yours. Well, so long; sorry I'm so rushed."

And she hurried away, leaving the man and the manikin to talk dry goods to their hearts' content.

Bert met an old-time friend and a seasoned hiker, Mary Gregory, at the end of the car line, and they trudged off into the country.

That evening Bert wrote a long, frank, sisterly letter to Mr. Santerre, although she expected to see him at least every day for a few days, explaining in the kindest manner possible that they were unsuited to each other; that she could not think of standing in the way of his ambitions, and persuading him to seek a larger field for his unusual talents. She also told him that she and Mary Gregory were going to France to assist in the work that Mr. Henry Allen was trying to do for the Kansas soldiers, winding up with: "And I'll kiss you good-bye like a little siter if you'll get the suit with the pockets ready before I go."

In the night she was awakened by a little sol.

"Bertle, I feel meaner than dirt! Aren't you a little sorry?"

So when morning came she felt a little panicky, but Bert was as cool as though they were swapping swenters, and things happened just as she had planned. It was Sunday, and they met at the brenkfast table. The girls related to Reggie now they had gotten in, and were afraid they might have wakened him, saying nothing of the dress.

"Well, now, isn't that strange? I worked late last night," hesitating a moment. "I had an inspiration for a gown for Miss Wainright."

"Adorable! Lucky Bert! Could we see it?"

"Ripping!" smiled Bert. "And here I am all togeed out for a filke. Is it as nice as this?" smoothing out her old brown corduroy.

The faintest frown appeared on Reggie's brow, but the girls hastily arose from the table and all proceeded into his designing room, and the manikin was wheeled into view. Mildly interested, Bert wanted Oulda to try it on, so they took it into their room. Re

A womans' idea of a good husband is one who isn't so fond of home that he won't be willing to leave it when she wants to take him somewhere.

The world will always get along no matter who lives or dies, but every man should so try to live his life that he will at least be missed by a few after he is gone.

READY TO REMAKE

HE problem of putting the crippled or disabled soldier or sallor back into self-supporting civil life is one with which all the European belligerent nations have been struggling for nearly four years, with only partial success in its solution. Based upon the combined experience of the allies and the central powers, studied at first hand by a corps of specialists, and supplemented by co-operative research under the direction of the Red Cross Institute for Crippled and Disabled Men, and the National Association of Manufacturers, a programme has been worked out by the surgeon general's office of the army which is calculated to insure to every soldier of the United States who comes back from "over there" minus an arm or a leg. blind, deaf, or otherwise handicapped, a better chance of relastratement as a useful member of society than was afforded to any of the soldiers of the war.

Germany alone, the only nation that was prepared for this war, had included detailed plans for the reconstruction of maimed and mutilated oldiers in its war program from the beginning, and, under its autocratic system of government, has been able to enforce these plans, with the result that every crippled German soldier is put to work at some useful occupation with the slightest possible delay after his injuy. The allies have had to evolve their general plans as well as particular methods out of the bitter experience of war, in this as in other phases of the great conflict, writes Frank Parker Stockbridge in New York Times.

It was not until after the United States entered the war—in May, 1917, to be exact—that of war, in this as in other phases of the great conflict, writes Frank Parker Stockbridge in New Yorks Times.

It was not until after the United States entered the war—in May, 1917, to be exact—that there was anything like a complete exchange of experiences and principles evolved from them in respect to the war cripple. Out of the first interallide conference on reconstruction and re-education of the disabled combatant, held in Parls May S to 12, 1917, at which delegates from the United States surgeon general's office sat for the first time as representatives of their nation at war, came an international interchange of knowledge and ideas concerning the war cripple. At a second conference, held in London last November, a permanent interallied committee was established which will have its headquarters in a new permanent interallied committee was established which will have its headquarters in a new permanent institute for the disabled, endowed by the French government with 150,000 francs ($30,000) of principal disables of the different allied nations represented.

Already this clearing house of scientific and economic information for the benefit of the warripple has done invaluable work in enabling the warring nations to profit by each other's experiences and mistakes. Not the least valuable contributions have come from American sources, our army surgeons having had opportunities for comparative observation of methods in vogue in different countries denied to those whose nations had been actually at war for three years. The United States, therefore, will begin its work of nearly four years to build upon.

The first steps toward reinstatement to a self-supporting status, and by far the most important and been actually at war for three years. The Inited States, therefore, will begin its work of restoration with the accumulated experience of learnly four years to build upon.

The first steps toward reinstatement to a self-supporting status, and by far the most important steps, must be begun almost immediately after the soldier receives the incapacitating injury and carried on continuously and cumulatively throughout the period of his hospital care.

This is especially true in the case of the soldier who has lost a limb, or who has been blinded. One of the most important lessons gained from the experience of the allies, if not the most important, is that the problem of the restoration to usefulness of the crippled soldier is a psychological one, even more than it is surgical or economic. The experience of the French authorities, who had to deal with a terrific proportion of mutiles in the first two years of the war, was disheartening. Fewer than 17 per cent of disabled soldiers expressed a desire or even willingness to learn how to do useful work. A large proportion had "lost their imbs or their eyesight, most of them felt that they had done enough for their country—that the nation owed them their living without effort. Because facilities for the early employment of patients, even at trivial occupations, were lacking in the military hospitals, they had acquired the habit of idleness which, when once fixed, is almost ineradicable.

The experience of France differed only in degree from that of the other allied nations. To avoid a similar experience, and not only give every crippled soldier the best possible chance to become self-zupporting, but to insure that he avails himself of the opportunity thus afforded, the psychological and economic rehabilitation of every American Incapacitated by his injuries for further military service will begin with and go on parallel with his physical rehabilitation of every American Incapacitated by his injuries for further military service will begin with and go on parallel with Industrial unit—perhaps a better chance than he has ever had before.

One of the most important means of instilling this vitally important lesson will be through the utilization of "cheer-up men," themselves cripples, who have lost arms, legs or sight, and who have, nevertheless, made good. Plans are complete for the employment of a large corps of these "cheer-up workers;" they are being enlisted through the aid of the Red Cross institute, the National Association of Manufacturers, insurance companies dealing with industrial accidents, and from the ranks of Canadian and British soldiers who have suffered mutilation in this war and are again self-supporting civilians. Eventually, unless the war comes to a much earlier termination than Washington is figuring on, our own army will provide a supply of "cheer-up men" from the graduates of the feconstruction hospitals. These workers are to be attached to the base hospitals, the hospital ships that will bring the incapacitated soldiers back to America for treatment, and to the general and special hospitals on this side.

Supplementing the work of the "cheer-up men." whose function is to demonstrate both orally and the base nospitals, the nospital singly that the base nospitals, the nospital soulce sock to America for treatment, and to the general and special hospitals on this side.

Supplementing the work of the "cheer-up men," whose function is to demonstrate both orally and visually that a cripple is far from useless, will be books, pictures, motion pictures, and other exhibits calculated to inspire the will and stimulate the ambition of the injured man. In the surgeon general's office a wonderful book is being compiled, under the direction of one of the most famous of American surgeons, in which the life stories of hundreds of matmed and crippled men who have overcome their handicaps are told in simple but convincing fashion. Profusely illustrated, copies of this book will be available for the perusal of every crippled soldler in the hospitals. Motion-picture films showing crippled men who have undergone almost every concelvable form of mutilation, performing useful work for good pay, with and without the use of artificial members, are being prepared by the Red Cross institute and elsewhere for exhibition to the manned soldier as early as he is able to see them.

To insure against the habit of iddeness, provision is being made for the employment of every crippled soldier at some form of work as soon as he is able to use any of his fraculties. Special nurses, male and female, are being trained as start at employing his faculties before he is able to leave his cot. The things he does at first will necessarily be trivial in their results, but they will be required duties, gauged to the man's capacity and strength, and leading to his future career as a crippled civilian. Thus, the man who has lost a first will necessarily be trivial in their results, but they will be required duties, gauged to the man's capacity and strength, and leading to his future career as a crippled civilian. Thus, the man who has lost a benefit the stengard and will learn to operate a typewriter with one hand—not so difficult a feat as it may seem.

"Where you goin? Charlie," asked a friend of an old horseman who had kept up with the pace of civilization and had bought an automobile. "Oh, I'm just out to let the crittur stretch her legs a bit and take the kinks out of the gasoline,"

The Italian soldiers resting along the road invariably saluted her with voice and gesture, and she in turn smilled sweetly back at them.

She was Italia Garibaldi, niece of the hero of two wars. She is attached to a fine hospital for Italian Alpine troops situated in the neighborhood where she was seen. This hospital at present is filled with soldiers of all the allied 'armies, Americans included.—Italian-American News Bureau, Chicago.

In the Realm of Lingerie

The melancholy days have come, but so have the new fall hats, and they have brought along with them a sure cure for the blues. It is just out of the question to try on this enticing the passing of summer at the same time, for winter is foreshadowed and welcomed by the lovellest of head-wear. The war has thrown Americans on, their own resources in designing, to a greater extent than ever before; it is hard to tell just how much we own to our own "home-grown" milliners, but there cannot be two opinions about the new hats. They are excellent from every standpoint.

There are shapes that are large and there are small hats, and all of them are graceful. Lines are wonderful and trimmings do not interfere with them or biar them. Brims are irregular, frowns are soft, materials are rich and trimmings simple. Much hand-craft appears in the making of these hats and in the making of these hats and in the making of their minings. Beauty in Play.

Lovely human play is like the play of the sun. There's a worker for you; steady to his time, is set as a strong man to run his course, but also he rejolecth as a strong man to run his course. See how he plays in the morning, with the mists below, and the clouds above, with a ray here and a flash there, and a shower of jew-els everywhere—that's the sun's play; and great human play is like him—all varions—all full of light and life, and tender, as the dew of the morning.—Ruskin.

BELIEVE IN "LUCK CHARMS"

Fighting Men Have Faith in All Sorts of Things—Living Mascots Especially Popular.

Many and various and queer are the "luck charms" of fighting men. Thy rabbits and black cats made of "lucky" metal are found quite frequently. Among the French it is held particularly lucky to have a gold coin in one's possession when going into battle.

one's possession when going into battle.

The British carry a lucky dower, the white heather. A piece of this heather properly tucked away inside the hatband is supposed to save the wearer from a fatal wound.

When it comes to living mascots, the fighters have a collection big enough to stock a zoo. Dogs—of almost every breed under the sun—cats, monkeys, birds, raccoons, white rats, goats, deer, ilon cubs, bears, armadillos and what not; about anything that wanders into camp or is sent in by friends.

Milling Corn Flour.

It has been found possible to use much of the wheat-milling machinery of the United States for milling corn. In this way the output of comment was almost doubled within five months. Instead of using eight million barrels of wheat flour each month, America can now depend upon corn products
