Democratic Convention Held

A convention of Schoolcraft County Democrats was called Friday evening, September 23rd, in the Schoolcraft County Court room, with Chairman J. W. Gilligan presiding.

Delegates elected to represent Schoolcraft County at the State Convention at Lansing Tuesday, September 27th, were George R. Matthews and Daniel J. Harrington.

The Convention went on record as endorsing the national, state, and County Democratic tickets and pledging its unanimous support.

The candidacy for appointment of John K. Stack as Auditor General and of O. K. Fjetland as Secretary of State were also endorsed.

A resolution was also adopted placing the Convention on record as in favor of some action by the State Executive and Legislative Departments toward the elimination or curtailment of some of the minor and unessential departments of the State Government to the end that the overhead expenses of the State may be reduced for the benefit of the taxpayer.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hall are the parents of a baby girl born Sunday morning at the Shaw hospital.

Lauermans Hold Fall Style Show

A large crowd attended Lauerman's style show last Thursday and Friday evenings. A fine assortment of fall and winter garments was displayed, several Manistique girls acting as models. An added attraction was a three piece orchestra, of piano-accompanist, saxophone, and guitar.

Connie Graphos, who is a student at the Northern State Teachers College in Marquette, spent the week-end here.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Albert were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. Herbert.

A daughter was born Sunday morning to Mr. and Mrs. Mark Wehner, 320 Chippewa Ave.

Mr. Willard Bolitho motored to Houghton last Sunday. Mrs. Bolitho and daughter, Mary Elizabeth, who have been visiting Mrs. Bolitho's mother, Mrs. Margaret MacVicar, returned Monday with him.

Why Does Michigan Legislature Evade The Chain Store Taxing Opportunity?

Chain stores, youngest of the big business family, which have grown so great since the World War, have come upon grievous times—grievous beyond the prevailing grief of the depression. No other industry, perhaps, faces the spectre that stands in the way of the chains.

The vision that the chain store man sees during his sleepless nights is that of 44 legislatures convening this coming winter, everyone of which will consider, and many of which will enact, a special chain store tax law; and behind the state legislatures, some three thousand cities preparing to pass special tax bills against him at even higher rates than the legislatures. That, it would seem, is quite enough to keep the chain store executive awake nights.

HOW IT ALL STARTED

It all began in the days when everybody was prosperous, even the independent merchant. The independent became concerned over a new competition. He watched the chains come into his town, put up their red fronts, slash prices, and send their quick cash profits to headquarters in some distant city. The independent resented the intrusion, as did many of the town's citizens; but it was only after the war that they realized how the chains had mushroomed all over the land. They were a threat to the independent's very existence.

The independent set out, naturally, to draw attention to his plight. He succeeded, beyond his best hopes. His plea reached the halls of legislation. When it did, there was hardly need for the independent to urge his case further. For here was something the legislators had overlooked. A brand new source of revenue. The result, in these days of depleted state treasuries, was inevitable.

From 1927, when the anti-chain agitation took form, to January, 1932, there were introduced in the 48 legislatures and the United States Congress, 260 special chain store tax bills. Since January 1, this year, more than forty new measures have been introduced. Not all have become law. Most of them were beaten, for the time being. But the continuous flood of bills indicates the course of this legislative activity.

Nine states have chain store tax bills on their statute books. Four are being enforced, the other five are in contest in the courts.

Many measures were not permitted to come to a vote because state attorneys general felt that they might be construed as discriminatory in the courts. Indiana, however, passed a bill. The chains went to court. A Federal court of three judges held that the law violated both state and national constitutions. Indiana carried the case to the United States Supreme Court. There the chain store men received their first setback. It was, in fact, a jolt. With the Indianapolis decision in their favor they had gone joyfully to Washington. Their confidence was absolute. When the highest court in the land reversed the Indianapolis decision, and ruled that chain stores could be classified separately for purposes of taxation, the chain operators received a shock from which they have not yet recovered.

Nearly One-half Million Pounds Of Cheese Mfgd. Locally.

453,947 pounds of cheese were manufactured in the plant of Pauly & Pauly, local cheese manufacturers. The above figures were compiled from January 1st last; to September 15th., a period of 8½ months, by Mr. Hemp, manager of the factory.

Taking the above figures and dividing them into days, weeks, and months, we find that an average of 9000 pounds of milk was used daily, all of the milk coming from farms in Schoolcraft county.

The 9000 pounds of milk produced 2225 pounds of cheese per day, 13,351 pounds per week, and 53,404 pounds per month.

Inasmuch as only two people were responsible for this mass production, Mr. Hemp and Mrs. Hemp—the principle of our story should make all of us more concerned about cooperation.

WE-WANTA-KNOW!

If the farmer that sold his potatoes and other farm products to the Home-Owned Store—receiving cash for same—then making a bee-line for one of the chain stores, buying his groceries there—can really sleep good nights.

Why some people, when they run over a dog, think lightly of the incident? Of all the mean people in this wide world, we can think of none that are worse than the one who will deliberately run over a fine specimen and a tiny innocent puppy, at that. We believe that a man that has no more principle than that, would have ignored the fact if it had been a child.

We are sure if the hit and run maniac would exercise his narrow brain and think how the owner must feel, over the loss of this little puppy, he—the maniac—would find some other sport for pastime.

Why it wouldn't be a good idea to set the clock back each day. For instance, about 6 a.m. when it rings—set it back a couple o' hours; along about 2:00 in the afternoon, set it ahead again?

About those Brutal Hunters

With the hunting season just around the corner, we are reminded that there are many fine, well-meaning people who would prefer to see no birds and animals shot; who believe that it is brutal training for a boy to level a shotgun at a squirrel or rabbit or pheasant. We have no desire to defend killing for its own sake, nor hunting of game birds and animals even if the law permits, if the game is to be merely wasted. But if those people who condemn hunting for its brutality will think a bit, they will discover themselves to be more sentimental than reasonable.

We have met people who decried the shooting of "those beautiful pheasants"; who would not hesitate to eat bacon for breakfast or lamb chops for dinner. They eat fish with apparent relish, little thinking of its having been strangled in a net, and enjoy their crabs or shrimp which may have been boiled alive or frozen in a refrigerator. They do not seem to mind the slaughter of chickens, ducks, cattle and fish. They delight in a vase of flowers which robbed the plant of its crowning glory—the blossom. The plant itself may have died for their delight. Yet when a man goes out to hunt a wild thing with a gun, they call it "awful" slaughter.

There is just as much and perhaps even more brutality in killing a thing that has been tamed as a thing that is wild. There is no brutality in hunting itself. If there is brutality, it is in the manner and the mind of the man behind the gun.
